Peace Hopes Brighten as Hitler Prepares Answer to British Plan for Negotiation

U. S. Planning No New Peace Step, Holding Result Up to Germany

By Robert C. Albright

Washington officials last night gravely watched the tense turn in the European situation, determined as yet on no new move for peace and widely sharing the view that "it is now up to Hitler."

White House and State Department maintained a close exchange of information on events but made clear that the United States is advising with no foreign government on contemplated action abroad, or apprising any nation in advance of steps here.

Told of Britain's firm reply to Hitler, one State Department official took the view that Fuehrer Hitler "will have to back down very far, or there will be war."

President Roosevelt, resuming routine White House appointments, nonetheless canceled a scheduled trip to Hyde Park and told a caller his intended visit to San Francisco October 6 was contingent on European developments.

As President Narvaez of Ecuador wired his hearty concurrence in Mr. Roosevelt's last peace appeal, Secretary of State Hull made clear that no request has been made to Latin-American republics for a "joint front" stand with this country for peace. He said he knew of no basis for reports that American republics and Russia might be asked to share in such an appeal.

The unsolicited message from Ecuador was generally expected to be followed by others of similar tenor.

Narvaez Praises Plea

Wrote President Narvaez:

"In this grave hour I adhere to the new urgent appeal which your excellency has made to European countries to seek the necessary solution of their differences by pacific means. Whether that noble invitation is accepted or not, your excellency will have deserved the applause of all men who are observing, with fear, the approach of a catastrophe for civilization."

The attitude in some State Department quarters was that this Government would be more than willing even at this hour to attempt again to sway Europe from the course of war, should an effective way be found.

The President, for the time being, apparently was resting on his prior appeals to King Victor Emanuel of Italy, to President Moscicki of Poland and to Hitler.

Officials Subject to Call

White House attaches left for home at 6 o'clock last night, but let it be known they would be subject to call by the President should developments warrant. State Department officials prepared to keep similar close contact, but anticipated no official comment in Washington until today.

Unofficially, some spokesmen interpreted the British note as meaning England and France believe Hitler is determined on domination of Europe, and hence are prepared to fight now unless the Fuehrer retreats from demands on Poland.

Paying a last call at the State Department before sailing to Europe tomorrow, Sir Ronald Lindsay, retiring British Ambassador, said only to reporters: "As long as war has not broken out there is still hope."

Among White House visitors who took a pessimistic view of the situation was George Creel, United States commissioner for the San Francisco world's fair, and World War director of public relations for this Government.

"It seems we have ceased to be reasoning animals," said Creel. "I don't see how we can escape war. There has been bluff after bluff, and I do not now see that Hitler has any limb to climb back on."

Isolationism Seen Waning

It was Creel whom the President informed that his scheduled visit to San Francisco depended on European events.

Creel reported that "there is no isolationist sentiment on the Pacific Coast. People out there feel that we should put every resource we have behind England and France."

He said he had heard wide criticism of Congress for failure to repeal the arms embargo, which would hit British and French arms shipments from this country in event of war.

Soviet Delays Nazi Pact

Moscow, Aug. 28 (AP).—A joint session of the Supreme Soviet of the U. S. S. R., Russia's Parliament, ended tonight without acting on the nonaggression pact signed with Germany last week. Precedure toward formal indorsement was started, however, at today's session of the lower house, when the pact was included in an agenda adopted for the special meeting. Today's session was devoted to reading a proposed new act on agricultural taxation.

150 Reported Captured

Bratislava, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—A Polish officer was killed and 150 Polish infantrymen captured and interned today by Hlinka guardists (nationalists) near Cadca in northern Slovakia, it was reported here today. According to the reports, the Poles had crossed the frontier.

Poles Mass More Troops

Berlin (Tuesday), Aug. 29 (AP). — The German official news agency reported from Danzig early today that "strong" Polish troop concentrations along the Danzig-Polish border "continued in a striking manner during the last hours."

Franco Won't Visit Italy

Vatican City, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Vatican announced today that a papal audience scheduled for Gen. Franco has been canceled, indicating Franco has called off his projected visit to Italy late in September.

Danzig Clash Reported

Warsaw, Aug. 28 (INS).—A Reuters report from Danzig tonight stated a non-Nazi group in the Free City engaged in a gun fight near the town hall with a group of Nazi "Black Guards." Six were reported killed.

Paris Hopes Note Has Postponed Decision Until Hotheads Cool

By Taylor Henry.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Aug. 28.—Diplomatic circles considered tonight that Britain's new note to Germany might have paved the way for long negotiations for settlement of the European crisis.

After reading the text of the reply which the British rushed to Berlin, French circles said that only a "lightning stroke" by Fuehrer Hitler against Poland would keep the crisis from dragging out perhaps for weeks.

The British note, they indicated, was designed to maneuver Hitler into a technical and legal argument over his position as outlined to Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain in personal messages.

Lengthy Reply Likely

The note was described by a French diplomat who saw it as being so "technical" that a lengthy and detailed German reply would be necessary.

While diplomats continued efforts to find a solution, Paris put itself in fighting trim to resist attack from the air.

Hundreds of thousands of persons joined those who already had gone to the country. Railroad stations were jammed with families sitting forlornly on suitcases and boxes containing cherished possessions.

A total of 3,000,000 men was under arms in the French empire.

Communication Suspended

Telephone communication with foreign countries was suspended. All telegraph lines were taken over by the military. English newspapermen were forced to send their stories by wireless to America and have them cabled back to England.

The frontier between France and Germany was closed today.

At strasbourg a few German tourists hastened to cross to the German town of Kehl, before the storm broke. All trains have ceased running to and from Germany, and air communication was severed today.

While France waited, there was no change in her position. After Hitler's rejection of Daladier's suggestion that Germany negotiate directly with Poland if he wanted peace, French sources said:

"Hitler must back down now or we fight."

London Position Is Same

In diplomatic circles it was reported that the London note, stripped of diplomatic wordage, stated practically the same position as that of France as far as Hitler's demands for return of Danzig and the Polish Corridor are concerned.

A slight ray of hope held out in these circles was that Britain was believed to have indicated a way for discussing opening of raw material markets to Germany, if not a return of colonies, provided Hitler withdrew from his present position.

However, the same foreign diplomatic observers said that they gained the impression in Paris as well as in London that the chances of any such withdrawal had been considerably lessened by Hitler's publication of his letter to Daladier last night.

Hitler Held Feeling Strength

It was pointed out that Daladier, by not making public Hitler's first formal demands for the corridor in addition to Danzig, had left Hitler an opportunity to change his tactics.

Hitler, by taking the initiative himself, diplomats said, apparently indicated he felt strong enough in

Chamberlain Warns Britain Will Fight if Force Is Used

By William Hillman
International News Service Staff Writer.

London, Aug. 28.—Great Britain tonight flatly warned Nazi Germany that if Fuehrer Hitler refuses to allow statesmanship to settle the German-Polish crisis, Britain will go to war on the side of Poland.

In his reply to Hitler, delivered tonight in Berlin by British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson, Prime Minister Chamberlain presented this challenge:

"If it should be beyond the wit of statesmanship to come to an agreement, resulting in the tragedy of force being used, which can never settle this problem, Great Britain must solemnly declare its full allegiance to the pledges His Majesty's government have made to Poland."

Chamberlain promised, however, that if the "tension" over the Danzig situation can be dissolved, a conference of European powers could be called to discuss problems affecting Europe "in a clear atmosphere and on a basis conference." For this he offered the "good offices" of the British government.

Puts It Up to Poland

High lights of the British reply to Hitler are as follows:

"His Majesty's government, together with the Dominions, have fully considered the text and purport of the communication from Herr Hitler.

"His Majesty's government have not at any time brought pressure upon the undisputed sovereignty and independent responsibility of Poland.

"His Majesty's government have given a pledge to that country.

"It is for Poland to say what constitutes a violation of its independence and for Poland to say if and when this guarantee must be implemented.

"The peoples of all countries, including Germany, want peace.

"There is no reason why the differences between Poland and Germany cannot be settled by discussion if given the right atmosphere. But mobilization, concentration of troops and officially unconfirmed press statements are not conducive to such atmosphere. A return to normalcy is prerequisite to the proper consideration of these differences."

War Precautions Cited

Chamberlain's reply then stated that Britain has taken precautionary measures "and must continue to do so while other countries are in a state of semimoblization" or intensive military activity. It added:

"In an effort to bring about demobilization and discussions with other nations, it seems not impossible to narrow down the differences on the future of Danzig to a point where agreement may be deemed in sight.

"His Majesty's government have no authority to suggest their views to Poland. But Britain does not consider there is any possibility of settling this problem by discussion or negotiation on the basis that Danzig and the Polish Corridor should be ceded immediately to the Reich.

"Great Britain wants peace, but the British people are profoundly weary of the endless crises to security.

"Peace and agreement must be on a lasting basis, and involving solution of outstanding questions, including demilitarization and disarmament."

"If peaceful goodwill is available, the permanent future of Danzig can be negotiated, and for this His Majesty's government's good offices are available."

Copy Sent to Roosevelt

Expectations that the door would be left open for further discussion were borne out by the tenor of the following further summary of the British viewpoint:

"His Majesty's government are willing to receive counterviews and countersuggestions for a settlement and to discuss one and all of these points, but the governments must be responsible for creating that calm atmosphere in which alone successful conclusion can be reached.

"Likewise, the governments must be responsible for actions likely to precipitate hostilities through the wrong use of statements, through threats or through precipitate action."

Copies of Chamberlain's complete reply were sent to President Roose-

Europe in Summary

FUEHRER HITLER is expected to answer Britain's message today or tomorrow, after receiving it in a meeting with the British ambassador lasting more than an hour.

GREAT BRITAIN warned Hitler her pledge to Poland is unimpaired but indicated willingness to join a conference to settle Europe's problems if tension can be dissolved.

PARIS DIPLOMATS believed Britain's note to Hitler would result in long-drawn negotiations, but France continued to rush defense preparations with 3,000,000 men under arms.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI stood ready to mediate the German-Polish dispute but Italian newspapers reported increasing "doubt of a negotiated solution." Page 6.

PEACE SUGGESTIONS of the British cabinet and Mussolini's reported compromise plan differed mainly on the disposition of Danzig. Page 4.

Berlin's Mood Optimistic Though City Is Dominated by Troops and Planes; Henderson Spends 80 Minutes With Fuehrer

By Joseph Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post

Berlin, Tuesday, Aug. 29.—For one hour and 20 minutes last night Sir Nevile Henderson, the British Ambassador, talked to Adolf Hitler at the chancellery here.

He gave the Fuehrer the English answer to the German demands on Poland, with which he had flown back from London this evening.

Sir Nevile had left instructions at Tempelhof airdrome to keep his plane in readiness for a return flight to London, possibly today. The presumption drawn from this was that he expected Hitler to have ready a communication for the British government, and one high Nazi said Hitler would have a reply ready "today or tomorrow."

[The United Press said Hitler would hand Henderson a written reply today.—Editor's note.]

When he had left, no one but Hitler and his closest advisers was any the wiser. The vague and intangible mood which hangs over such fateful meetings was optimistic, but no one could say why.

Henderson drove through the bronze doors of Hitler's new Chancellery at 10:25. A guard of honor stood stiffly in the flood-lighted, paved courtyard to receive him, but even Hitler's picked bodyguard was no more stiff and erect than the British ambassador, as he walked up the steps to see the German leader.

When he left—his usual studied features still overlaid with a grave dignity—a small crowd in front of the chancellery parted to let his car through without a whisper being heard. As one foreigner here said, "I am afraid it looks hopeful."

Henderson had arrived at Tempelhof Airdrome at 8:30 p. m. and was driven straight to the British embassy. On his way there he had a glimpse of Unter den Linden, filled with army trucks, motorcycle troops and artillery rolling steadily eastward.

Crowd Waits All Day at Chancellery

On the Wilhelmstrasse itself, where both Sir Nevile and Herr Hitler live, he saw the surprisingly small crowds which had been standing there all day, patiently waiting to learn the fate of Europe.

In the long day of waiting, this crowd of silent men and women almost took the spotlight away from its leaders. It had formed and broken and formed again for a week now, and by early this morning there were women patiently standing across from the courtyard of Hitler's Chancellery. By dusk the crowd was still small and it remained strangely silent, people talking in whispers or not at all.

There is no doubt here that the last two days have disturbed ordinary citizens in Berlin as much as the Soviet treaty last week cheered them.

Ration cards before a war has even started have depressed even those who have been most confident until now. All afternoon today, squadrons of planes—each 12 strong— roared over the city. Everybody stopped dead to watch them, but there were no cheers and no smiles.

One of the German Fuehrer's visitors during the day—who included nearly all government leaders—was Baron Konstantin von Neurath, protector of Bohemia and Moravia and former foreign secretary. When he came out, someone in the crowd yelled at him: "Fix it up again, Herr Minister." Von Neurath smiled and drove on.

Rumors Show City in Mood for Anything

At 1 o'clock Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, with a few of his closest assistants, walked out of the foreign office and into Hitler's Chancellery next door. He walked quickly, looking straight ahead of him and with a worried expression on his face.

Inside the Chancellery there was a fever of comings and goings all day and it was believed tonight that other ministers and other government leaders were on hand when the British answer was received. For the first time, Hitler's adjutants, including Wilhelm Brueckner and Schaub, wore the gray field uniforms designed for active war service.

All day Berlin was a hotbed of rumors, Col. Josef Beck, the Polish foreign minister, was said to be here and to have been recognized by a traffic policeman who knows his face well.

Marshal Goering was said to have conferred with Josef Lipsky, the Polish Ambassador. All postal service inside Germany was said to have been stopped for two weeks. As far as could be learned there was not a suspicion of truth in any of these tales, but they betrayed a city in a mood ready now to believe anything.

The round pillars on Berlin's street corners, on which official notices are posted, carried another red placard this morning announcing that a 20-year-old German in Friederichsperzel had been beheaded for espionage in behalf of France. It also carried an official notice extending the ration system to gasoline and restricting its sale only to those with official or governmental permits.

Reich Increasingly Cut Off From Europe

There was open evidence of formal censorship for the first time here today when the Vienna edition of the Voelkischer Beobachter appeared with a surprising white space in the middle of a story.

Germany's contact with the rest of Europe continued today to fray out like a slowly breaking rope. Trains left Berlin for the Belgian and Swiss frontiers, but no one knew how far they would go. The Dutch and French frontiers were closed to all railroad traffic. From the Potsdamer station, one of Berlin's largest, only five express trains left today.

Nazi political circles said the Fuehrer had made up his mind not to budge from his position in Europe's critical hour.

This position is that Poland must deliver up Danzig and the Polish Corridor and make other adjustments along the Polish-German border.

Sir George Ogilvie-Forbes, counselor of the British embassy, said the embassy would issue no statement or communique concerning the meeting of Hitler and Henderson.

"We have received telephonic suggestions from the foreign office that all announcements be made in London," Sir George said.

The time spent in the Fuehrer's study clearly indicated there had been discussion of the British answer, described in London dispatches as steadfastly unrelenting

U. S. Woman Finds Nazis Ask Family History for Bar of Soap

Americans in Berlin Forced to Join Queues With Ration Cards at Food Shops; Those Owning Two Dresses Can't Buy More

By Dorothy Oechsner
By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—I have been an American "hausfrau" in Berlin for almost 10 years, but today was the first time I had to give my family history to get a bar of soap.

For a marriage license, a driving license, a dog license—yes. You get used to that. But for a bar of soap—well, I couldn't see the connection with vital statistics.

You see, we received our ration cards yesterday. Two red-faced little community nurses trudged the hot August pavements from house to house delivering them. I told them we were Americans and half-jestingly asked whether we needed or were entitled to cards.

They looked puzzled, conferred together, and finally consulted the inevitable "Vorschriften" or rules of application, without which you can't open a tin of soup in Germany.

All Americans Get Them

Excited discovery, then proudly: "Yes, look here, it says cards shall be issued without distinction of nationality or race."

So they gave us one each, for my husband, my maid and myself. A round of telephone calls to friends in the American colony revealed they had all been similarly favored.

This morning I set out on my usual Monday morning shopping, determined to test the efficiency of the rationing system which burst on amazed Germans a little over 24 hours before.

Any thought I may have had of trying to get by without producing the cards vanished when the clerk put his gimlet eyes on me and said "ausweise bitte" (identification, please). I gave him the three pink slips and the catechism started.

My husband's name—my name—the maid's name—my husband's occupation—where we lived—how many in the family—what I wanted.

"I'll take laundry soap, bath soap and a large box of powder."

"You have three persons in your household, madam," he said. "You are entitled to this much," bringing out three small packages; "that is your supply for a month."

The serious side of this whole rationing business is apparent enough. By 8 o'clock this morning long queues were forming in front of shops and at some points the congestion was so great police were called. Some shops apparently closed voluntarily because they were unable to handle the rush

There was no panic of any sort, but very little smiling either. Shopkeepers were unfailingly reassuring, and kept telling people to buy only what they needed and have no fear of a shortage later.

My delicatessen shopkeeper, in fact, told me behind his hand that he had been to one of the huge storehouses where reserve supplies are kept and he figured they must have enough for three years. He saw 125,000 Swiss cheeses, each weighing 150 pounds. He had driven through a meat storage plant in a car at a good clip and had taken 12 minutes to pass the hams and sausages alone.

Women May Have Two Dresses

Berlin, Aug. 28 (AP).—The new German rationing law places no restriction on the amount of clothing a German woman may possess, but she must be almost down to the extremity of "not having a single thing to wear" before she may buy something new.

A woman in Germany, under the present regulations, may not buy anything new if she has:

Two dresses, three sets of underwear, two nightshirts or paja-

Permanent Peace Unlikely In Europe or Asia, Says Yarnell

Clashes between nations, both in Europe and Asia, "probably will continue fo rmany months," Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, former commander of the Navy's Asiatic squadron, declared last night, shortly after receiving the Distinguished Service Medal from President Roosevelt.

Emphasizing that the recent agreement for closer economic and political ties between Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany would do little to insure permanent peace, he indicated he believed industrial mobilization in the United States in preparation for any emergency to be highly important.

Discussing his three years in the Far East, Admiral Yarnell stated that "friendly" relations had existed between American and Japanese forces in China. He said he had been given "a free hand" to conduct affairs and protect American interests and nationals in the Far East.

Admiral Yarnell pointed out his contact with the Japanese forces had been limited to high-ranking

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

My education really began when the tots started to collect stamps. One day I was called in to act as mediator in a trade dispute. Next day I found out about Tannou Touva and the island of Seychelles. Now I realize where President Roosevelt gets his vast zest for understanding of foreign affairs.

Harlan Miller

It dawns on me that stamps should be controlled by the ministry for propaganda and enlightenment. For a stamp is a powerful force. It can convey more, oftentimes, than the letter inside the envelope.

The new Italian and German stamps are simply terrific. A small nervous nation could almost be overpowered by a barrage of their stamps.

Soldiers leap out at you brandishing weapons, scowling. Adolf Hitler broods menacingly on a red stamp against a background that resembles a conflagration. He seems even more menacing on another stamp in the pose of a ham orator.

Even the midget king of Italy is gotten up, on a stamp celebrating the Ethiopian conquest, to look like a powerful gladiator.

"—comic stamp of 1939"

Inside our own borders, too, stamps can be powerful. Jim Farley might win the 1940 election if he issued a 3-cent stamp showing a WPA worker digging furiously like a terrier after a bone, or a stamp showing the downtrodden man with the hoe disguised as a share-cropper, or a caviar picnic on Long Island complete with butler in tail coat and shorts.

* * * *

Or he might lose it with a stamp showing a WPA worker leaning on his shovel in rapt contemplation of a sunset. (I think it was that cunningly hostile NRA stamp that helped defeat NRA.)

A hundred Americans see every stamp over and over for every one who sees the most popular cartoon once. (There were 2,500 different stamps issued in the world the last 12 months.)

* * * *

Stamps are the mass art of the common people. Even humble collectors pay more for a tiny stamp than they'd pay for a full size picture of the same scene or portrait to hang on the wall.

Maybe our Government and others are overlooking a bet. I don't care who writes a nation's songs, if I can design its stamps.

* * * *

Jim Farley now plans to crown his eighth year as our champion issuer of handsome stamps with a series of 35 new ones in 1940, bearing portraits of 35 authors, poets, artists, educators, inventors, composers and scientists . . .

May I suggest that mere portraits are not enough? I call the Postmaster General's attention to the British colonial stamps.

"—dramatic stamp of 1939"

Each one bears a small, sharp oval likeness of England's King and a large scene dear to the colony.

Why not large stamps with small, sharp portraits of the American authors, painters, and so on, and a large scene from their lives or works, more significant than their mere noses and chins? Why not a Dixie plantation scene with Stephen Foster's, for example?

We cannot let the British island of Seychelles or the Russian province of Tannou Touva issue larger, handsomer stamps than ours!

* * * *

And I think that each year there should be issued a comic stamp and a dramatic stamp of the year. For 1939 I nominate the great Thanksgiving embroglio, involving FDR and the turkey, or the scene on Capitol Hill when Congressman Joe Starnes lunged at Fritz Kuhn, the bund Fuehrer.

* * * *

For the dramatic one, I suggest the scene at the White House the night F. D. R. and the Senators pounded the table about the neutrality bill.

I like scenes better than faces on stamps. How pathetic Alfonso and Nicholas, Zog and Hitler and Prajadhipok will look on their stamps some day, without a background to make them significant!

Dies Probers To Give U. S. Pelley Tax Data

Propaganda Work Of Bund Checked For Law Violations

The House Committee on un-American activities directed its investigators yesterday to turn over to income tax authorities the information they have collected about the financial affairs of William Dudley Pelley, of Asheville, N. C., leader of the Silver Shirts and publisher of anti-Semitic literature.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, also instructed Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, to determine whether Pelley, the German-American bund and the Communist Party have violated the law requiring agents of foreign principals to register with the State Department.

He said Pelley and the bund were disseminating propaganda originating in Germany and that the Communist Party also was engaged in propaganda activities.

Restraining Order Denied

At Asheville, N. C., United States District Judge Webb denied a request by Pelley that the Dies Committee be restrained from investigating his personal activities and those of the Silver Shirts. Pelley was not in court. His attorneys said they did not know where he was. Dies Committee process servers have been seeking Pelley.

Webb told attorneys for Pelley that he rejected their motion because their client had, otherwise, "an adequate remedy at law."

The affidavit on which the petition was based was witnessed by Nell Duncan, identified as a notary public of Washington. It was dated August 24 at Washington.

The Dies Committee information concerning Pelley's financial affairs was ordered turned over to the Bureau of Internal Revenue after Robert B. Barker, a committee investigator, had testified that at least $174,014 was received by Pelley and the corporations he controls in the last eight years.

Barker said he determined this by checking Pelley's bank accounts at Washington and Asheville and the money order record at the latter city's postoffice. He added that there was another bank account in New York which had not been checked. The period covered was October 1, 1931, to June 30, 1939.

For the five years, 1934 to 1938, Barker said, Pelley paid a total Federal income tax of $216.36 on behalf of himself, his wife and Pelley Publishers, of Asheville. He said the returns were filed in Vermont, although Pelley was "operating in North Carolina.

The investigator, who spent most of the day discussing the financial history of the Silver Shirt leader, also accused Pelley of diverting $100,000 of assets of one of his publishing companies, Galahad Press, which he described as a religious publishing house operated variously in New York, Washington and Asheville.

Stockholders Lost

The money, the investigator asserted, was converted to Pelley's "own personal use" and to the Foundation for Christian Economics, described by Barker as a Pelley organization chartered as an "eleemosynary institution." As a result, he said, Galahad Press became bankrupt and preferred stockholders and creditors lost between $35,000 and $40,000.

Barker departed from testimony regarding Pelley's financial affairs long enough to relate that the Silver Shirt head is the author of "19 feet of books," including one entitled "Seven Minutes in Eternity."

In this work, Barker declared, the author said he had died and spent seven minutes in heaven while living in Pasadena, Calif., a few years ago.

Gardner Activities Checked

Meanwhile, legal experts of the District Attorney's staff yesterday began investigation of the activities of Fraser S. Gardner, Washington "political researcher," whose indictment for perjury was recommended last week by the Dies committee.

The committee accused Gardner of trying to get a job on its staff of investigators so he could sabotage its work and of giving false testimony about himself.

Chairman Dies sent a file on Gardner to Assistant District Attorney Fihelly, who is in charge in the absence of District Attorney Pine. Fihelly ordered immediate study of the file, which included Gardner's application for the detective job and a transcript of his testimony in committee hearings.

Gardner was alleged to have testified that he had no past or present connection with any of the organizations under scrutiny of the committee. He later testified that for six years he had been working for the Skyland Press, a Silver Shirt publication.

Byrd Warns Legion of Threat to Unity

Senator Tells Virginia Convention Nation Must Meet Menace

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 28.—While peace hangs by a thread in Europe, Senator Harry F. Byrd told Virginia Legionnaires today America must meet the "menace" to its unity "now threatened by class animosities—racial and religious prejudice, and envy, hatred and jealousy between those who have accumulated property and those who have not."

Speaking at the opening session of the legion's three-day convention, the junior Virginia Senator said that men and women, "untrue to our constitutional democracy, are exerting efforts in their secret way to incite disunion, to forment bad feeling between labor and capital, and to weaken the unity of our American economic life . . .

"We must open our minds to the spirit of co-operation, of good will, of good fellowship. What will it accomplish us to achieve sectional unity only to be divided by economic dissention? What will it profit us to rejoice that the unity of States is strong if sappers are permitted to work underground to weaken the very foundation of our system of constitutional democracy?"

The American Legion, he said, is recognized as embodying ideals of democracy which is called "Americanism," and declared recent Congressional investigations showed that the fight against foreign "isms" must be continued.

The Senator, whose address followed welcoming speeches by Gov. Price, Mayor J. Fulmer Bright and Representative Dave E. Satterfield, said Americans must make their democracy secure and attend to their own affairs.

All forms of social and industrial injustice are "enemies of democracy," he said, but added that "no magic wand of legislative panaceas will sweep away all our ills."

"There is no substitute for those time-old virtues of thrift, frugality, self reliance and industry," Senator Byrd told the legionnaires. "Those virtues have made our country great. The character of the average American citizen is our most valuable national possession, a character builded upon American traditions and American achievements. Character comes from self help and industry, not from idleness and shiftlessness. Above all it rests on the firm support of Christian ideals—the common brotherhood of man and the common fatherhood of God."

C. Francis Cocke, of Roanoke, First Virginia Department commander, struck a note of sadness when he responded to the speeches of welcome with the reminder that in 1919 "when we gathered, fresh from victory, we thought we had made the world safe for democracy."

Commander Fred C. Parks told the assemblage of delegates, who were given command, so to speak, of the flag-decked capital city for the duration of their convention, that Virginia membership had reached 11,143 and that 27 of the State's 163 posts had the largest membership in their history. In addition, he reported 45 posts had equaled or exceeded their membership quotas.

No 'Guaranteed Panacea" to Prevent U. S. Involvement in War, Says Wilson

Boston, Mass., Aug. 28 (INS).—There is no "guaranteed panacea" to prevent America being drawn into war if a great conflict breaks out, American Ambassador to Germany Hugh Wilson told the Veterans of Foreign Wars here tonight.

Hugh Wilson

The risk, however, can be cut by legislation and by "an enlightened and vigorous public opinion" which resists foreign propaganda, he added.

Wilson upheld the Administration's program for repeal of the arms embargo, urging that the President be given great discretion in international affairs.

Earlier in the day, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson assailed the neutrality act, branding it a "discrimination act" which would favor Germany.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appealed yesterday to workers throughout the world to "mobilize their moral influence and support in opposition to the threatened war in Europe."

In a letter to W. Schevenels, of Paris, general secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, Green said it seemed "inconceivable that the German workers would give support to the war preparations now being made by their Nazi leaders."

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 28 (AP).—Joseph Bruner, Sapulpa, Okla., president of the American Indian Federation, today attacked Secretary of Interior Ickes and accused the United States Indian Bureau of being a "racket." He spoke at the federation's national convention.

Referring to the federation's plan of educating the American Indian in his rights and privileges, Bruner, full blood Creek Indian, declared, "in this campaign of education we do not expect a fair fight." He referred to opposition which he said Ickes made to the federation's bill in Congress, which provides that each Indian be paid $3,000 in prior and future claims against the United States Government and that these Indians would become full fledged citizens instead of wards of the Government.

dent. When a reporter asked his view of the situation, Pell said: "Anyone who makes a guess is a gambler and anyone who expresses an opinion is a fool."

At his afternoon press conference, Secretary of State Hull said any conversations taking place between American diplomats and foreign governments were for mutual exchange of information only.

He emphasized that American advice was neither being sought or given in advance of action, and that informational exchanges involved no American commitments. Where diplomatic calls have been made on foreign officials, he said, the other Government merely had been told of what was done here, after it was done.

The five-department committee of experts, which has been meeting almost daily preparing a series of neutrality, economic and financial safeguards against a war eventuality, apparently had completed its tasks and held no conferences during the day.

If war becomes certain, the President is expected to immediately summon Congress back, and reiterate his request for repeal of the arms embargo. Government legal aides believe the President meanwhile would be forced to invoke the neutrality act, carrying the embargo, if war comes.

Revised Taxes Seen as Spur For Recovery

Hanes Asks Business For Suggestions to Overhaul Tax Laws

Acting Secretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes, in a radio speech last night, predicted the business appeasement tax bill passed at the last session of Congress would give momentum to the present rise in business.

At the same time he renewed his appeal to business leaders to submit suggestions for overhauling the Federal tax laws at the next session of Congress.

Although the 1939 revenue act did away with the undistributed profits tax and removed certain other points of friction between Government and business, he said, "much remains to be done."

Business Leaders Respond

The response of business leaders thus far to his request for tax revision suggestions, Hanes said, "has been a heartening demonstration of democracy in action."

"From organization spokesmen whom I have addressed personally," he declared, "and from individual taxpayers who have read of our efforts in the press there has come a flood of communications pledging active support. Without exception, they came with good will and constructive intent."

Other developments bearing on the business situation were:

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation revealed that on June 30 the volume of money held by the Nation's banks reached the highest level in history. Deposits in insured banks, Chairman Leo T. Crowley said, totaled $52,326,754,000, a 10 per cent increase in the last year. Banks held $15,038,215,000 in Government direct and guaranteed securities, an all-time high. Loans, however, were lagging behind the pre-recession level.

National Income Up

National income paid out to individuals in the first seven months of 1939, the Commerce Department announced, totaled $37,985,000,000, an increase of $1,143,000,000, of 3 per cent, over payments in the same period of 1938.

Forecasting a continuation of the business rise, Hanes said "business indicators look today more favorable than they did a year ago."

The Government's revenue problem, like some situations arising in business organizations, he declared, requires "compromise and concessions on all sides for the good of the entire group." It was with this in mind, he said, that he invited nearly a thousand leaders in business and agriculture to submit suggestions for tax changes.

Further Changes Needed

Further tax changes are needed, Hanes said, to facilitate the investment of idle funds in productive enterprise, without which the unemployment problem cannot be solved.

He reviewed the changes made in the business appeasement tax legislation. Besides repealing the undistributed profits tax, he pointed out, the 1939 revenue act provides for carryover of business losses, deduction of long-term capital losses from ordinary income, upward revaluation by corporations of their capital stock in the next two fiscal years for the purpose of capital stock and excess profits taxes, and reduction of debts by debt-ridden corporations without incurring income tax liability.

Mayo Clinic physicians said he was ordered to the hospital to complete diagnostic studies.

European War Seen as Aid To U. S.-Latin American Trade

By Lee Rashall

International News Service Staff Writer

A sharp rise in trade between the United States and South America would be an inevitable result of any European war, Commerce Department experts predicted yesterday.

Settlement of the knotty Mexican oil controversy might even be produced by the fundamental shifts in Latin-American trade relations, which would occur, Grosvenor Jones, finance chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, said.

Mexican oil shipments to Germany would be cut off by a British blockade of the Atlantic Ocean, Jones said, as well as German machinery supplies, now being shipped, in reciprocity, to Mexico.

Mexico thus might be promptly disposed to consider favorably pending compromise plans in the expropriation dispute, and even consent to the return of the oil lands to American companies, upon a basis of joint operation and profit-sharing with the Mexican government, he said.

American exports generally to South America would substantially increase as the nations to the south found readier markets for their own products in the European parliamentary nations, department experts said.

This Nation would also benefit by replacing the totalitarians—Germany and Italy—whose present heavy barter trade with the continent would be constricted, both because of unavailable products for exports and an assumed British command of the Atlantic, the Government analysts said.

Texas Extends Oil Shutdown

Austin, Tex., Aug. 28 (AP).—A two-day extension of the Texas oil field shutdown was decided upon tonight after an all-day session of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Chairman Lon A. Smith of the State's oil regulatory body, said production would be resumed at 7 a. m. Friday, September 1.

The Texas shutdown originally was scheduled to end tomorrow night.

Smith said a new probation order to govern production after fields are reopened would be drawn between now and next Friday.

Loss of Insurance Values Related

A Federal monopoly sub-committee heard testimony yesterday that many holders of small insurance policies never bother to read them and lose insurance values as a result.

Alexander M. Schwartz, insurance adviser in the District of Columbia public assistance division, was the witness.

Schwartz testified that many relief clients had policies which would have had a cash value if cashed before the payments lapsed.

Britain Issues New Dictatorial War Decrees

Hopes for Peace But Prepares Nation For Any Emergency

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 28.—Though still hoping that some development—possibly something in their own message to Berlin—will serve to steer Fuehrer Hitler away from the dangerous course he is pursuing, the British government is taking no chance.

In line with the program of girding this country for a possible war, the government issued today a series of stringent decrees under the dictatorial powers granted it last Thursday. The majority of these measures will go into effect only on the opening of hostilities, or when it is clear that war cannot be averted.

Among other points, the decrees make provisions against interference with communications, bar communications with persons believed to be "assisting an enemy," prohibits the receiving or dispatching of pigeons, except under license, provide for the careful examination of persons leaving or entering the country, and prohibit British subjects from entering "enemy territory" or boarding enemy ships or aircraft without British permission.

Blackout Enforcement

The defense ministers are empowered to bar unauthorized persons from special areas under certain circumstances, and the ministry of health is authorized to enforce billetting where necessary, including the provision of food and lodging for urban populations evacuated.

Provision is made for enforcing "blackout" regulations and in general for the control of industry, agriculture and transport in the national interest.

Having assumed full control 36 hours ago of all British merchant shipping, the admiralty issued orders today, which, in effect, close the Mediterranean and Baltic temporarily to all vessels flying the British flag.

Ships are being halted at either end of the Mediterranean, and it is believed that most of them are waiting at Gibraltar or Aden for further orders. Though vessels already within the Mediterranean are continuing their voyages, they are understood to be under instructions to make their exit as soon as possible. Likewise vessels at Baltic ports have been instructed to leave.

Children Assemble

The measures indicate that in case of a war in which Italy was aligned with Germany, Britain would make no attempt to maintain regular sea communications with the Orient via the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal. A policy of this sort has been suggested by experts, in view of the airplane threat, coupled with that of submarines.

Though normally school would not start until later in the week, the bulk of the 1,000,000 school children of Greater London responded to a call to assemble at their various institutions at 6:15 o'clock this morning, as a precautionary measure, as well as a test of the first stages in the program for evacuation in case of war.

Apart from a wrap of some kind, each child carried his gas mask in a cardboard box, and a small satchel bag or haversack to contain emergency rations for at least 12 hours.

Though this call cut short by a few days the regular summer vacation period the great majority of children seemed to enter into the adventure with eagerness. Obviously they liked the excitement and were little concerned about the possibility of bombs being dropped in their midst.

Prepare for Emergency

At most schools the children were kept assembled for several hours though without classes. The bulk of the period was given up to a prolonged "recess."

In case of emergency, the children are to be evacuated, in charge of their teachers, to towns and villages well outside the metropolitan area. Similar evacuation plans have been elaborated for mothers, their children under 5, expectant mothers, cripples and the blind.

Rehearsals similar to that held today in London were conducted in large provincial centers.

The increasing international tension, coupled with incidents such as these, has resulted in stringent precautionary measures in and about the various ministries. Today all members of the staff of the foreign office were issued special identification passes and newspaper correspondents were told that from today on they would be barred from the foreign office unless they showed their regulation press cards. In the past there has been much laxity in this respect.

Harrisonburg Man Killed in Crash

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—John D. Kratzer, 39, Harrisonburg laborer, was killed instantly this afternoon when his automobile collided with a poultry truck on a curve on the Brooks Gap highway near the West Virginia line.

Paul Flick, 31, Harrisonburg mechanic, his only companion, was not hurt. Flick told State Trooper Kiser that Kratzer was driving at a high rate of speed on the inside of the curve and that he swerved in an attempt to miss the oncoming truck but it was too late. The truck was driven by Ward Caricofe, of Dayton. He and two companions were unhurt.

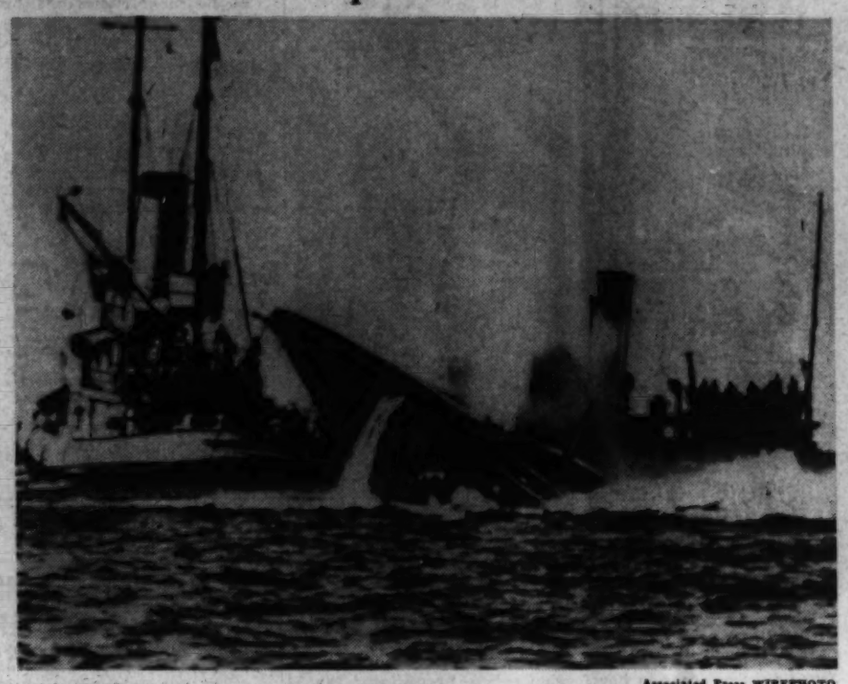
Argentine Peso Pegged To Dollar as Pound Falls

Buenos Aires, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Argentine peso, which has been pegged to the British pound, was linked to the dollar today at an official rate of 3.5295 pesos to the dollar.

The change was made to avoid the continued drop of the peso which accompanied the fall of the pound.

Squalus Plunges to Bottom After Breaking Surface on Third Operation to Raise Her



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Up from the depths, the bow of the submarine Squalus, death trap for 26 seamen, wallowed on the surface a few moments yesterday off Portsmouth, N. H. She broke her chains when she came up on July 13, but this time salvage workers had her under control. The bow sunk slowly again and efforts were continued to raise the sub on an even keel

By the Associated Press

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 28.—For the second time in three months the bow of the ill-fated submarine Squalus thrust itself above the surface of the Atlantic in a wild smother of foam today, but once again the craft and her 26 dead settled back to the bottom.

Still 90 Feet Under Surface

Today's lift, which brought both the bow and the stern of the $4,000,000 craft to or near the surface at different times, left the Squalus in 90 feet of water about 2 miles from the Isles of Shoals. If successful, the projected hoist and tow would have landed the submarine in drydock at Portsmouth tonight.

Instead, the bow rose at 9:44 a. m., Eastern standard time, but after about 25 feet of the craft had thrust above the surface, showing a sharp list, it sank within half a minute. Forty-five minutes later, the two pontoons attached to the stern burst into the air, but settled back.

The salvage ship Falcon pumped air into the bow, but only occasional bursts of bubbles came up as a reward. Finally, at 2:15 p. m., Admiral Cole decided to sink the stern back to the bottom.

Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, in charge of operations, said another lifting attempt probably would be made Wednesday morning.

An inspection dive revealed the Squalus lay on even keel fore and aft with about a 30-degree list and only slightly embedded in the soft mud bottom.

Thetis Moved 8 Miles

Liverpool, England, Aug. 28 (AP). The British submarine Thetis, in which 99 men lost their lives on a test dive in Liverpool Bay, June 1, was dragged 8 miles toward the shore today in the first successful lift by salvage experts. Eight additional lifts will be necessary before the Thetis can be beached.

Pastor Admits Hiring Slayer Of Daughter

Ex-Suitor and Cleric To Be Charged With Murder Today

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., Aug. 23.—County Prosecutor Samuel P. Orlando announced today that a former sweetheart signed a statement he killed 18-year-old Wanda Dworecki at the "solicitation" of the girl's father, a Camden clergyman.

Both the sweetheart, Peter Shewchuk, 21, and the father, the Rev. Walter Dworecki, 42, will be charged with murder tomorrow, Orlando said.

The girl's body, beaten and strangled, was found August 8 beside a little-used roadway on the outskirts of Camden—a corsage of roses pinned to her coat.

Orlando said "the father hoped to obtain the insurance on the girl, which would amount to between $5,000 and $6,000 with double indemnity."

Miss Dworecki's death came just four months after a previous attempt on her life. She was abducted in April by two men, beaten, choked and left unconscious on a country road 25 miles from home.

Shewchuk, a one-time boarder at the girl's home, was the object of a wide search after the murder. He surrendered to police Saturday in Chester, Pa., his home town. Later, the clergyman was taken into custody.

After hours of questioning, Orlando announced late today:

"Statements have been made by both admitting the scheme which resulted in the killing of the young lady. The murder was committed by Peter at the solicitation of the father.

"Shechuk was to receive the sum of $100, but the father never paid."

Orlando said he had evidence to corroboratie the stories told by Shewchuk and Dworecki, including information that Shewchuk had a "date" with the girl the evening of August 7.

He qquoted Shewchuk as saying he met the girl near her home, took her to a "lover's lane," strangled her, and beat her head with a rock.

Liquor License Plea Protested In Northeast Area

The Alcholic Beverage Control Board yesterday heard protests to the application of Peter Harris for a beer and wine dispensing license on the premises of 501 C street northeast from residents of the neighborhood and from Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, president of the Peabody-Hilton Parent-Teachers Association.

Harris' application for a license was denied last year.

Mrs. Kennedy emphasized that the premises were across the street from the Peabody school and that special classes were held in the building for children older than the usual elementary grade students. It was pointed out the street often is blocked by police as a play area.

L. M. Nebeker's Body Recovered Near Three Sisters Island

Lyman M. Nebeker, 40, son of Frank K. Nebeker, former special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of prosecuting I. W. W. cases, was drowned last night off Three Sisters Island, just above Key Bridge in the Potomac River.

NEBEKER

Police said Minerva Crampton, of 4036 K street northwest, told them she saw Nebeker standing in the bow of an 8-foot rowboat when he toppled over and apparently sank at once. He was said by police to have rented the boat from Crampton's Boathouse, opposite Three Sisters on the District side of the river. He was a boat builder.

His body was found by harbor police after dragging 15 minutes. He was pronounced dead of accidental drowning by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner. Nebeker was identified by a brother-in-law, Maj. Sidney H. Young, U. S. A., retired, of 3409 Woodley road northwest, where Nebeker lived with his father.

He is survived by his parents; a brother, Frank K. Nebeker, jr., of San Francisco, Calif., and four sisters, Mrs. Marjorie Young and Mrs. Joyce N. Moyle, both of Washington, and Mrs. Ruth N. Hannegan, of Panama, C. Z., and Mrs. Delia N. Taylor, of Fort Sheridan, Ill.

He was graduated from Western High School here.

Last Member Of Bank Robbery Gang Arrested

By the United Press.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents in Chicago late yesterday arrested Joseph Paul Cretzer, 27, last alleged member of a Pacific Coast bank robbery gang, and his wife, Edna Mae Cretzer, it was announced here last night.

The couple will be arraigned today to facilitate removal to the West Coast, the F. B. I. said.

Cretzer, G-men said, participated in bank robberies as an accomplice of James D. Courey, who committed suicide in Los Angeles when they attempted to arrest him. Cretzer's wife, they said, has been charged with harboring her husband.

Bethesda Volunteer Firemen Charged With Trespassing

Three Leaders in Community Quarrel Rally Supporters at Meeting Place Which Town Board Barred to Them

Three leaders of Bethesda's embattled volunteer firemen last night were charged with trespass after rallying their supporters at a meeting in Bethesda Firehouse. The town fire board last Friday barred volunteers from the building.

Twenty-five members of the Volunteer Fire Department of Bethesda, Inc., formed three weeks ago in protest against the town's new fire-fighting set-up, "brushed past" George W. Bryan, board president, and entered the department meeting room with a skeleton key, he told The Post.

Bryan summoned Bethesda police, but officers said the gathering was peaceable and they had no authority to break it up. After the volunteers disbanded, however, their leaders reported to the police station, where the warrants sworn out by Bryan were read to them. Those charged with trespass are Samuel T. Robertson, president of the volunteer group; Hiram Musgrove, chief, and Robert Fremeau, sergeant at arms, all of Bethesda.

Justice of the Peace Alfred Wilson took the men's personal bond for their appearance Friday before Trial Magistrate James C. Christopher. Meanwhile, a committee appointed by the fire board is to meet Thursday with representatives of the volunteers to discuss proposals for settlement of the two-month controversy.

The dispute began when A. J. Bargagni took office as paid chief of the department over protest of volunteers, who have refused to recognize his authority, insisting that Musgrove continue as head of the department.

Uniform Pay Scale Drafted For Maryland

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones was at work today drafting uniform salary scales for all State jobs, under directions of the Salary Standards Board.

Jones and Walter Kirkman, State budget director, are ex-officio members of the board and the third, Joseph Healy, was appointed by Gov. O'Conor. The board held its first meeting last week and will meet again when Jones finishes the tentative draft of salary scales.

"The standards are a forward step in State personnel administration and follow the example of the Federal Government and the city government," Jones said.

"They will provide a system whereby the cream of the personnel will be permitted to rise to the top."

The law establishing the scales provides that no present employe shall have his salary cut by the new scales. However, minimum and maximum pay will be set up for each job and new appointments will be made at the minimum pay. Thus a stenographer who receives $1,600 per year will not be cut in pay although the scale for the job may be from $1,200 to $1,400. However, if this stenographer resigns and is replaced, the new appointee will be paid only $1,200.

Woman Charged In Beating Case

Nellie Harris, 28, of 433 G street northwest, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon at the Woman's Bureau yesterday, following the near-fatal beating in the early morning of J. J. Purcell, 50-year-old carpenter, of Mount Rainier, Md.

Police were looking for three men in connection with the attack. One is 35, walks with a limp and has a fresh cut over one eye.

Purcell, who was taken to Casualty Hospital, was in critical condition last night and had not recovered sufficiently to tell police what happened. Officers from No. 1 Precinct found him unconscious on the second floor of a house in the 400 block of G street northwest after responding to a telephone call that a man was injured.

2 U.S. Lines Cut Stops at Polish, German Ports

High War Risk Insurance Rates Blamed for Order

The United States Lines and the American-Scantic Lines have ordered their vessels to omit stops at German and Polish ports in the Baltic and the North Seas, the Maritime Commission announced last night.

High war risk insurance rates demanded by Lloyds on ships traveling in these "danger zones" were given as the most important reason for the order. The commission scouted the report that it was issued to expedite transportation of United States citizens home from ports in that region. It was pointed out that other countries have lines which should be adequate to care for an exodus of Americans.

At the same time, at least 35 United States vessels would be available in Atlantic service, the commission said. The American-Scantic vessels number eight; American Export, four; United States Lines, 11, and American President, 12.

S. S. Manhattan Affected

Among vessels affected by the order are the Manhattan, originally scheduled to stop at Hamburg, but now on the way to Le Havre, France; the President Harding, originally scheduled to sail tomorrow for Hamburg; the Scanpenn, originally scheduled to sail for Gdynia, Poland, Friday, and the President Roosevelt, which already has omitted a Hamburg stop and is returning from Le Havre.

Meanwhile the Coast Guard disclosed its cutter, the George W. Campbell, would make a regularly scheduled stop today at Bergen, Norway, and that it might bring home Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and his family. Morgenthau, who has been vacationing in Scandinavia, has booked passage on a private liner sailing tomorrow from Oslo, but might board the cutter if the schedule of the liner is altered.

It was believed the evacuation of Americans could be carried out in orderly fashion. The American Embassy in London was making arrangements for the immediate passage home of 6,800 nationals.

Passage for 1,100

The Holland-American Line chartered the 19,429-ton liner John Van Olden Barneveldt from the Royal Netherland Co. to carry 1,100 Americans to New York. The vessel, which normally operates on the Far Eastern run, will call at Southampton Thursday and leave for this country.

The Cunard-White Star line took over the Lamport and Holt liner Van Dyck and the Blue Star liner Arandor Star to speed Americans home. These ships will sail soon with 500 passengers.

The Queen Mary will leave Southampton tomorrow for the United States.

Another 1,000 Americans will be picked up at Glasgow next Monday by the Swedish-American liner Drottningholm.

Many Americans are proceeding to "neutral" ports in Scandinavia, where they expect to obtain passage with little trouble on Scandinavian lines.

Blackouts on Normandie

Chief problem in the exodus of Americans from France, according to the consulate, was the handling of crowds that sought information, visas and protection. All were told to start home immediately. The Manhattan will leave Le Havre tomorrow night with 1,700 passengers for Southampton, Cobh and New York.

The United States consulate at Rome revealed that several of 725 Americans seeking passage home may sign as sailors on the American freighter President Monroe in order to leave Italy as soon as possible. A special charter must be granted before the freighter can carry passengers and regulations also demand that 75 per cent of the crew be Americans if passengers are carried.

While the evacuation from Europe was being speeded, it was observed that Germany's merchant liners were being swept from the seven seas. Following orders from Berlin to return to home ports, the German liners New York and St. Louis abandoned schedules and passenger lists, and were in full flight back to Germany. The Bremen, which arrived in New York last night, is expected to turn back today without passengers. The German liner Europa, scheduled to stop at Cowes Road, England, did not call at the British port, but continued direct to Bremerhafen.

Earlier yesterday, the French liner Normandie docked in New York, many of her passengers nervous. They reported there had been practice "blackouts" in the eastern Atlantic.

Among those arriving in the Normandie were Constance Bennett, James Stewart, George Raft, Lee Shubert, Sonya Henie, Lily Dache, Hattie Carnegie and Roland Young.

Women Leave Warsaw

Warsaw, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—With the departure tonight of four United States women, only a handful of Americans of non-Polish stock will remain in Poland's capital to face possible war.

The women, scheduled to go to Stockholm and Oslo via Latvia, Estonia and Finland are Mrs. William M. Cramp, wife of an American consul; Mrs. C. Burke Elbrick, wife of a secretary of the embassy, and Mrs. M. Williams Blake and Mrs. E. Tomlin Bailey, wives of vice-consuls.

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., wife of the American Ambassador; her daughter, Miss Boyce Thompson Schulz, and her secretary, Miss Mary MacKenzie, will be among the few American women remaining in Warsaw.

Nazi Ships Out of Canal

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Aug. 28 (A.P.).—For the first time in many years not a single German vessel was in Panama Canal Zone waters late tonight.

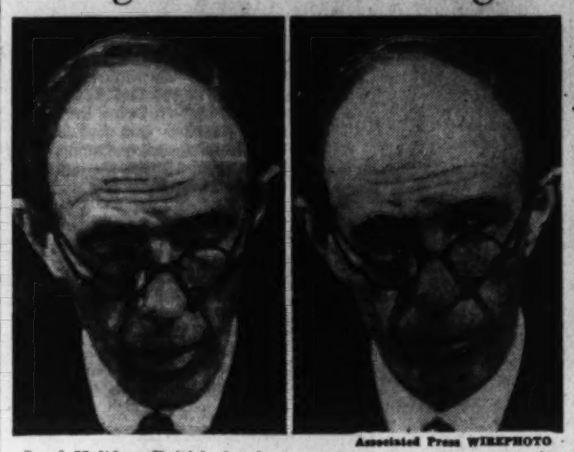
The small coastwise freighter Durazzo sailed tonight for "the high seas for orders," after taking on a large cargo of coal.

The liner Cordillera, due today, had not been heard from. The liner Leipzig, due tomorrow, failed to radio her approach.

Black Sea Cleared

Bucharest, Aug. 28 (A.P.).—All German and Italian ships in Rumanian waters were ordered tonight to leave immediately for home ports.

Chamberlain Note Tells Hitler To Negotiate or Britain Fights



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary, presents a portrait of a man with worries. He was pictured during a radio broadcast last week from London. Yesterday he and other British officials drafted and dispatched a reply to Hitler's demands on Poland velt, Premier Mussolini, the British dominions, France and Poland. The latter three approved the text of the reply before it was dispatched to Berlin.

In addition to the cabinet reply, Sir Nevile also carried to Hitler a personal letter from Chamberlain. In the latter, Chamberlain made clear he is anxious to retain friendship with Germany and is anxious for settlement of European differences by negotiation. But he told Hitler again that Britain is resolved to keep her pledges. The latter, although a personal communication, also had the full cabinet approval.

During the final preparation of the reply to Hitler, a note containing Mussolini's compromise scheme and communications containing the British compromise proposals regarding Danzig and the Polish Corridor was sent to Rome, Paris and Warsaw.

Authoritative diplomatic circles interpreted this interchange of views as indicating these proposals are being held in readiness for discussion should Hitler prove willing.

[According to one report, The Post's special correspondent says, favorable mention is made in the response to President Roosevelt's message to Hitler and the President of Poland, in which he suggested as an alternative to direct Polish-German negotiations, some form of conciliation through a third party.—Editor's note.]

Ready for Any Result

As Henderson arrived in Berlin the general feeling in high London quarters was that the British feel further replies from Germany should be forthcoming.

It was emphasized everywhere, however, that Britain nevertheless is fully prepared for any action Der Fuehrer may decide to take.

A stir was caused in doplamtic quarters here tonight by reports that the projected comprehensive agreement between Britain and Turkey to supplement the Mediterranean agreement already reached would be signed tomorrow or Wednesday.

Parliament was called into session tomorrow to hear Chamberlain's full report on the situation, including his official revelation of Hitler's communication and Britain's reply.

Chamberlain was received today by King George at Buckingham Palace.

The cabinet met in a tense 50-minute session at which Henderson was given his final instructions before taking off for Berlin.

Informed quarters described the situation tonight as "steadily moving toward a climax," and it was felt the most crucial period may be reached tomorrow.

This opinion was based upon belief that Hitler again might communicate with London, or else decide all hope of amelioration has passed and slam the door on any possible further negotiation.

Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax remained at No. 10 Downing street in close consultation throughout most of the day.

The war office broadcast an appeal for voluntary contributions of 3,500,000 blankets to be used in the billets where children are to live throughout the countryside following the evacuation of London in case of war. It is expected country dwellers will take care of at least 1,300,000 children from the cities.

The government has supplied 20,000,000 sandbags which have been distributed throughout Greater London, 50,000 of them packed around Westminster Hospital to the height of the second floor.

The balloon barrage to snare possible night-attacking planes was sent up tonight on the eastern side of the city, and Westminster Cathedral remained open 24 hours per day for peace prayers.

The cabinet was said reliably to be fully united on the stand it had taken and in circles close to the government there was said to be a complete absence of sentiment within the cabinet for any form of "appeasement" unless Germany showed a willingness to abandon her present policy.

There was talk that Chamberlain would reconstruct his cabinet, bringing in such "antiappeasement" conservatives as Winston Churchill, Anthony Eden and Alfred Duff Cooper. But the best informed opinion was that such a reconstruction would await the actual outbreak of war—if war came—and that leaders of the Labor and Liberal opposition parties likewise would join any "war cabinet."

The national debt commissioner announced arrangements governing bank withdrawals, the orders to go into effect immediately upon evacuation of the city. Citizens during the first month would be permitted to draw three pounds (approximately $13.50) each time until 12 pounds had been withdrawn. Then further restrictions prevail.

Underwriters virtually doubled war risk insurance rates.

Some hope for peace was held out by the fact that contact still was kept among Berlin, London and Paris.

Nevertheless, the French government continued its preparations for war by decreeing censorship of news and photographs. Effective immediately, all printed publications, radio broadcasts and motion picture newsreels must be submitted for approval to a newly formed General Information Service.

The nation approached the last stages in full preparedness. There was progressive mobilization of troops, and requisition of transportation facilities.

Lighted signs were banned in the capital. Householders were told that their electricity would be cut off if they allowed light to shine out of windows or doors.

The week-end exchange of letters between Hitler and Premier Daladier was made public at noon by the foreign ministry. It showed that France's proposal for direct negotiations between Poland and Germany had been rejected by the Reich.

Originally, a responsible source said, Daladier intended to send a second letter to Hitler, but the wording of the first exchange and Berlin's publication of the texts last night 12 hours before issuance in Paris complicated the situation.

An outline of France's position was given in its leading editorial by the newspaper Le Temps.

"Events are rushing headlong, and we now perhaps are within a few hours of the decision of the Fuehrer which will determine the destiny of Europe and will mean peace or war for the peoples.

"When the terms of the British government's reply to the communication brought from Berlin by Henderson are known, and when the British ambassador has given the German chancellor the text drafted by the British cabinet in close and permanent contact with the French government, the Fuehrer will have to take his responsibilities.

"Generally it can be seen from the Fuehrer's letter that Berlin rejects the procedure of conciliation and direct negotiations, which amounts to closing the door to any peaceful solution and arousing this dilemma: Capitulate or make war.

"But the spirit of maneuver which guides all German policy must always be taken into account.

"It is not excluded that Berlin, in rejecting direct negotiations and the procedure of conciliation, is waiting to suggest a conference which, without Poland and over her head, would settle the fate of this country in the sense of German claims which naturally would be unacceptable."

The military mission which the government had sent to Moscow to negotiate an Anglo-French-Soviet pact returned to the capital. The mission's leading military tactician, Gen. Edouard Doumenc, immediately conferred with Premier Daladier.

The French premier also talked at length with several other army and navy chieftains, including Gen. Gamelin, supreme commander of French armed forces.

Paris Papers Calm

Paris (Tuesday), Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Paris morning newspapers generally took a calm view of the European situation, asserting France and Britain have spoken and it now is up to Adolf Hitler to decide whether there shall be war or peace.

Editorials vigorously reiterated the determination of Britain and France to stand behind Poland, and, while admitting the situation was very grave, suggested Hitler will take the road away from war.

Japan Is Heavy Wheat Purchaser

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 28 (A.P.).—The Argentine wheat board was reported in informed quarters tonight to have disposed of about 500,000 metric tons of its surplus wheat in the last few days.

About half of this went to Japan, its was said, and the rest was sold to "European interests," supposedly for England.

Poland Places Peace Hopes On Mediation

Western Frontier 'Hermetically Sealed' as Nation Tensely Waits

By the Associated Press

Warsaw, Aug. 28.—Poland, with its western frontier facing Germany blockaded, set herself tonight for more tense hours of waiting for peace or war signals from Berlin or London.

Informed sources expressed belief the Polish government pinned most of its hopes that war could be averted upon the possibility that mediation of the German demands for Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) might be arranged through a third party.

These sources said Fuehrer Hitler apparently had closed the way to direct negotiations between Berlin and Warsaw, and that arbitration would not be acceptable.

Poland is firm against German threats of force and insists the nation's sovereignty must be respected, it was asserted.

Frontier Completely "Sealed"

The Polish ministry of communications said the entire frontier was now "hermetically sealed" from the German side. Highway, railway and air traffic was cut off.

Tension mounted in Warsaw. A number of foreigners, including Americans, left the capital.

Trains were crowded with Polish families leaving Warsaw for safer residence in rural communities.

Poland was estimated to have at least 1,000,000 men under arms.

Polish sources reported the German schoolship Schleswig-Holstein anchored in Danzig Harbor had changed its position so that its 11-inch guns were trained directly upon Gdynia, Poland's seaport opposite the Free City.

Officials and citizens alike expressed confidence there would be no weakening by Great Britain and France as guarantors of Poland's independence and territorial integrity.

No "New Munich"

Newspapers declared that there would be no "new Munich."

Polish sources reported fresh Polish-Nazi incidents today in Danzig, including arrests of two Polish customs inspectors on a charge that they had tried to destroy barbed-wire constructions. The beating of a number of Polish railwaymen by Danzig storm troopers was reported also.

[Poland accused the Danzig government of seizing two Polish freight trains loaded with iron ore and coal, and charged that German military planes committed 30 violations of the Polish frontier in the last 48 hours, the United Press said. Fourteen shooting incidents in the same period were reported. The Danzig Senate replied that goods and trains will not be admitted to the Free City from Poland in the future.—Editor's note.]

Markers appeared on buildings in Warsaw pointing the way to impromptu air-raid shelters. The digging of trenches in public parks and squares was accelerated.

Buildings Sandbagged

Foreign Minister Beck conferred with British, Turkish, Spanish and Lithuanian envoys.

Sandbags for the first time were placed on the roofs and around government buildings in the capital and special fire precautions were put into effect.

Terror Stories Denied

Striking back at Nazi charges that Poland has been "mistreating the German minority" the Polish Embassy here last night issued the following statement:

"The Polish Embassy received today the following official communique from Warsaw:

"For some time past the German press has conducted a campaign accusing Poland of mistreating the German minority and citing facts which were not only erroneous but pure fabrications. For as long as this campaign remained only within the limits of newspaper propaganda even though directed by a press completely controlled by the government, Poland limited itself to denying such information and to submitting correct version to those who requested it for legitimate purposes.

"In the meantime in the course of the last few days those completely false stories have been repeated by the highest personalities in Germany. In this manner the German government is apparently anxious to convert imaginary stories into an asset to be used for purposes of diplomatic pressure. Because of this the Polish government finds itself compelled to protest categorically against such methods which are used for the sole purpose of misguiding foreign opinion and governments.

"Without entering into too much detail at the present time it is necessary to emphasize that all the recently reported stories of atrocities, such as the wholesale murder of 24 Germans near Lodz and of 8 Germans near Bielsko, etc., are completely unfounded."

Gen. Abe Forming Cabinet For Japanese Isolation Policy

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma yesterday carried to Emperor Hirohito of Japan the resignation of his entire cabinet. He stated that the German-Soviet nonaggression pact, causing Japan to about-face in her foreign policy, necessitated the government's resignation. Insert—Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, who under the command of Emperor Hirohito, will form a new cabinet

Former Acting War Minister Faces Task of Maintaining Middle Course; Conciliatory Attitude to U. S. Forecast

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 29.—Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, a moderate called from three years' retirement, began today constructing a new government to carry out the isolationist policy to which Japan turned after Germany concluded her nonaggression pact with Soviet Russia.

Emperor Hirohito last night called on the 64-year-old Abe (pronounced Ah-Beh, without accent) to form a cabinet to replace that of Baron Kitchiro Hiranuma. The latter stepped down because of the empire's about-face from the old foreign policy—symbolized by the Japanese-German-Italian anti-Comintern Pact—which he and his ministers championed.

With Japan's attention centering on Soviet Russia for any possible major move against Manchukuo or North China, Abe faces a difficult task in keeping clear of international complications which might threaten the Japanese campagin in China.

At the same time Abe, former inspector-general of military education and once acting war minister, faced the task of maintaining a middle domestic course between extreme nationalists and liberals.

The later favor friendship with the United States and Great Britain, a policy toward which Abe was reported authoritatively to be inclined.

Informed observers were of the opinion that immediate steps toward conciliation with the United States would be forthcoming. Growing concern has been manifest in military circles over Washington's abrogation of its trade treaty with Japan—a move which carried an implied threat of arms embargo.

These sources believed, however, that the anti-British campaign had gone too far for an immediate shift, although a gradual slackening in this drive was expected.

Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the privy council and minister without portfolio in the Hiranuma cabinet, was expected to retain his cabinet post.

Mamoru Shigemitsu, Ambassador to Britain, was mentioned as the most likely foreign minister.

Nazi Ration Cards Hit Americans

mas, two petticoats, six pair of stockings, six handkerchiefs.

Men have to get along with two suits and three shirts. But they are permitted only one stick of shaving soap for five months.

Two pair of shoes will suffice for both men and women.

Men, however, are favored by the government in that they are permitted to possess two pairs of winter gloves, whereas a woman has to get along with one pair.

Food provisions of the ration card are as follows:

½ pounds per week of meat or sausage
¼ pound per week of sugar
.26 quart per day of milk
.14 pound per week of coffee.
1/3 pound per week of grits-cereals.

War Scare Fails To Bother Parley

Cancellation of reservations by some foreign delegates to the convention of the International Association of Geodesy and Geophysics will not seriously affect the convention, it was announced yesterday by Dr. John Fleming, secretary.

"Only a few have said they were not coming," he declared, including several Germans and a few from other European countries. The convention is to open Monday at the Hotel Washington.

British Palestine Prepares for War

Jerusalem, Aug. 28 (A.P.).—The Arab-Jew controversy today suddenly sank into the background as the government hurriedly made war preparations. Emergency decrees ordered food control, enrolled British subjects in the army, speeded air raid precautions and prepared to oust undesirables. Twenty-five thousand Jews expected to enlist and Arab moderates announced their adherance to Britain.

Canada Guards Welland Canal, Controls Ships

Toronto, Ontario, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Four hundred volunteers and soldiers patrolled the Welland Canal today as Canada put herself in a state of alertness during Europe's tension.

The government announced it had assumed control of merchant vessels of Canadian registry to govern sailings and routine.

Following the calling Friday of 10,000 members of the nonpermanent militia to voluntary service, guards were posted at all vital locks, hydroelectric plants, docks and terminals, airports, arsenals and radio stations.

Swedes Urged To Strictest Neutrality

Five on Boat Sunk by British Sub Rescued; Link to Pound Cut

By Wilfrid Fleisher.
Special Cable to The Post

Stockholm, Aug. 28.—Five Swedes whose fishing boat was rammed and sunk by a British submarine in the North Sea last night were returned today to Gothenburg.

They said that the accident occurred in foggy weather 150 miles west of Lindesnas. They were rescued by the submarine and later transferred to another Swedish fishing boat.

Sweden's determination to remain neutral in the event of a European war was stressed by Premier Per Albin Hansson in a speech in Stockholm last night. He appealed to the Swedish people to help the government in every way to preserve Sweden's neutrality.

Large Grain Reserves.

"Sweden's policy is quite clear," Hansson declared. "It is to observe strict neutrality. But this is not only the policy for government officials to follow, for all must be careful in voicing opinions."

"The government has taken all steps for protection and measures will be increased gradually as may become necessary. There is no cause for panic. We are more self-sufficient than ever before. We have in reserve 400,000 tons of flour and there is a surplus grain crop of 2,000 tons sufficient for two years.

"If we consider our resources and preparations, it appears that we should be able to withstand any eventual pressure. We still hope that the catastrophe of war is avoidable, but if it comes we must meet it with calm and work unitedly for the peace and welfare of Sweden."

Sweden abandoned the so-called British pound bloc today with announcement that the exchange rate for the pound has been lowered from 19.4 to 17.9 crowns.

The first result of the uncoupling of the two currencies was refusal of exchange banks to exchange English money into Swedish funds because of expectation there will be a further drop in value of the pound.

Ready to Fight Beside Nazis

By the Associated Press

Bratislava, Slovakia, Aug. 28.—German military preparations in Slovakia were completed tonight for any eventuality.

Mechanized divisions of Adolf Hitler's army occupied every strategic point along the 250-mile Slovak-Polish frontier, while three supply lines were established from former Austria to the forces in the north.

German officers directed the operations of the Slovak telephone and railway systems from central headquarters in Bratislava.

The little capital city was decked with Nazi and Slovak flags. Its railroad station was guarded by German soldiers with fixed bayonets.

The Slovak national government maintained authority over nonmilitary zones, but German troop movements were so widespread that many Slovaks were at a loss to know where German rule ended and Slovak rule began.

Bratislava newspapers attributed to Premier Josef Tiso a statement that "Slovakia is not only under Germany's protection but is ready to fight side by side with Germany."

Nazi Bombers Over Capital

[The impending march of German troops through Slovakia was announced by Tiso in an appeal to Slovaks to greet them as "friends and extend all help to them," the United Press said.

["For the protection of the independence and integrity of our young Slovak state against Polish threats," Tiso said, "German troops will occupy Slovak territory in order at the proper time to keep the enemy from the frontier, shoulder to shoulder with the brave Slovak army in accordance with the treaties between the Slovak and German government and agreements between the two governments."

[Three additional classes were called to the colors by the Slovakian army, International News Service reported—Editor's note.]

Eighty heavy bombers bearing the insignia of the Nazi Reich passed over Bratislava this afternoon, flying northward.

Rumania Expects To Remain Neutral If War Develops

Bucharest, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Government quarters were confident tonight that Rumania would be able to keep out of any European war, at least in its initial stage, because Rumanian neutrality would benefit Germany.

Germany is interested in free access to Rumania's oil and wheat and if the Reich should become involved in an attack on Rumania, this country's oil wells might be destroyed.

One of Germany's greatest advantages from the Soviet pact, it was said here, would be access to Russia's great natural riches and it would be natural for Germany to want to transport Russian oil through the Danube.

Clashes in Europe, Asia, Probably to Continue, Permanent Peace Unlikely, Says Yarnell

For protecting the lives of Americans in war-torn China, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, retiring commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet, received the Navy's Distinguished Service Medal from President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday. Shown as the President cited Admiral Yarnell for the skillful handling of the "many delicate situations that arose during the continued emergency in China" are (left to right) Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Capt. M. L. Deyo, and Commander L. P. Lovett naval and military officials, and refused to discuss reported mistreatment of Americans in China.

As an example of Japanese cooperation with his wishes, Admiral Yarnell asserted the invading forces tried to avoid striking American ships "and firing was stopped whenever we asked it."

He disclosed he had followed a policy of sending ships where they were needed, keeping the Navy Department fully informed of the situation and his actions.

Will Retire November 1

On some occasions, he added, the Japanese informed him that operations at a particular Chinese port were under way and United States ships, under such conditions, were sent only if absolutely necessary.

He explained he was on temporary duty here awaiting retirement November 1.

While his plans are indefinite, Admiral Yarnell asserted he hoped shortly to go to Newport, R. I., "which is Mrs. Yarnell's home and the nearest place I have to a home."

He explained that Newport is "quite a naval station" and that a torpedo factory was located there.

He was greatly interested in activities now under way at the recently opened torpedo factory in Alexandria.

Lauded by Other Nations

During the ceremonies at the White House, he had not had an opportunity to discuss world conditions with President Roosevelt, he said.

The citation accompanying the medal declared Admiral Yarnell "has shown such exceptional ability, tact and devotion to duty in protecting American interests and in handling with the greatest skill and diplomacy the many delicate situations that arose during the continued emergency in China that he deserves the Nation's highest praise.

"His conduct of affairs in the Far East not only has received commendation of our nationals in China, but the nationals and military of other nations have looked to him for mature and valued counsel and leadership during hostilities in China."

Congress Granted Medal

During the day, Admiral Yarnell made formal calls on Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and Admiral Harold R. Stark, new chief of naval operations. Although refusing to discuss his conversation with Edison, he said he expected to make a formal report and to confer with Admiral Stark in the near future.

Third ranking officer to receive the Distinguished Service Medal this year, he was granted the award by act of Congress.

Although President Roosevelt recently awarded the medal to Gen. Malin Craig, retiring chief of staff, and Admiral William D. Leahy, former chief of naval operations and governor-designate of Puerto Rico, "the granting of the medal by Congress gives it enhanced importance," naval officials said.

Newspapermen Started Move

The resolution authorizing the award was sponsored by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who hales from Admiral Yarnell's native State. The proposal was brought to his attention by Washington newspapermen who, in turn, had been urged by members of the Far Eastern press corps to see that Admiral Yarnell receive some recognition for the masterly way he handled the ticklish situation in China.

Admiral Yarnell entered the Naval Academy in 1892 and the Naval War College in 1913. When the United States entered the World War he was in command of the cruiser Nashville, and for nearly eight months was aide on the staff of the commander of United States naval forces in European waters.

After the armistice he served for two years in the Office of Naval Operations here and then was named commander of Destroyer Flotillas 1 and 9, Squadron 1 of the Atlantic Fleet.

Also Holds Navy Cross

His subsequent assignments included chief of staff to the commander of destroyer squadrons of the Atlantic Fleet, commandant of the Hampton Roads (Va.) Naval Air Station, commander of the aircraft squadrons of the Scouting Fleet and engineer in chief and chief of the Bureau of Engineering. In 1930 he served as naval adviser at the London Disarmament Conference.

For his World War service he was awarded the Navy Cross by the United States and was made a companion of the Order of the British Empire and also the order's diploma of the Grant of Dignity.

Lloyd's Transfers Millions to U. S. As Claim Reserve

New York, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Lloyds of London, the world's leading insurance syndicate, is transferring $40,000,000 to the United States "to prevent a European war from interfering" with the payment of American claims, it was disclosed today.

The American law firm representative of the syndicate, Duncan & Mount, announced that a committee of Lloyds had decided "to transfer jurisdiction" over American dollar premiums from trustees in England to a newly designated American trustee. Aproximately $28,000,000 of the total, it was understood, will be in cash, and the remainder in United States Government bonds.

British, Italian Plans Ready For Hitler

Both to Be Submitted If Fuehrer Says He Is Willing to Negotiate

By International News Service

London, Aug. 28.—The British plan for settlement of the German-Polish crisis, which has been the subject of diplomatic correspondence between France, Italy and Britain, and which may be submitted to Chancellor Hitler for negotiation if he is willing, proposes:

Danzig, with an additional strip of territory, to become a free state under the aegis of Germany and Poland, and guaranteed by Britain, France, Poland and the Reich.

Danzigers to have free electoral rights and self-government under the new state.

Danzig customs receipts to be divided 50-50 between Germany and Poland.

Germany and Danzig to share port facilities on a 50-50 basis.

Poland to lease a road through the Corridor to Germany.

Britain and France to stand by their guarantees to Poland. If a four-power conference is held in order to attain a four-power pact, then all four countries must accept the Franco-British guarantees to Poland as unalterable.

Duce's Plan Goes Further

Rome, Aug. 28 (INS).—Premier Mussolini's plan for settlement of the German-Polish crisis, which has been the subject of diplomatic correspondence among Britain, France and Poland and which may be submitted to Chancellor Hitler for negotiation if he is willing, proposes:

Danzig to be governed by Germany through Albert Forster as Reichstatshalter (Reich state leader).

The national rights of Danzigers to be the same as those of Germans.

Germany to have control of Danzig customs for ten years.

Germany and Poland to share port facilities.

Germany to have a road through the Polish Corridor with a strip of land bounding north and south of this road to become German territory.

Britain and France to give up their direct guarantees to Poland, but guarantee the eventual boundaries of Poland to be evolved by a four-power pact among Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

Weather Delays Japanese Fliers

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 28 (AP).—Airport officials were advised late today the Japanese around-the-world good-will plane would be held at Nome at least overnight because of unfavorable weather.

The twin-motored monoplane, with seven aboard, arrived at Nome yesterday. It was to have been flown to Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, today.

Last 24 Hours Have Shaken German Nerves

People Are Jittery And Irritable Under Danger of New War

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Tears filled her eyes and trickled down upon the steel fragment in her hand.

Moved by the tenseness of the world situation, a German World War widow was showing some of the mementoes of the last war—mementoes which she had found in the garden of her home, close to the French frontier.

There were rusty shell splinters which had falleen to the ground; a battered part of an English warplane which had been shot down.

She is a proud woman, proud of the fighting ability of the German soldier and convinced they don't come any better.

The last war took her husband. And now, she knows, if war comes again the chances are 50-50 it will take her "war baby."

He is somewhere on the Polish front.

"If I only knew where," she says.

The change which has taken place in her within the last 24 hours is remarkable—and she is typical of millions of German men and women today.

It is a change all the more remarkable because the Nazi-inspired press and the government-controlled radio is working overtime to show that the "calm of the German people is unbreakable."

It required Germany's extensive mobilization to shake her full faith in another bloodless victory, in which the Poles, as the Czechs before them, would bow before the mighty German nation.

Now she, like the others, watches tightlipped. Around the corner automobiles and motorcyles are being commandeered. In the school yard, hundreds of horses are being examined and assigned to the front.

A policeman explains: "We need the horses because those lazy Poles haven't got the roads we have. There's nothing but mud and sand over there."

She nods understandingly because, she says, "in the 20 years since the World War I've never really known what peace means."

She rushes past signs reading "to the nearest air raid shelter," to the grocery, to the milk and dairy products store, to the butcher and to the market.

In her hand she crushes the new rationing slip and tries to figure out how she can best take care of her family.

She doesn't come back with much from the store.

"Imagine! A thimbleful of milk," she exclaims.

She watches silently as crews of men with acetylene torches cut down iron fences.

Steps like these have awakened the German people—almost overnight—to the danger of another war.

It has made them nervous and irritable.

Friends call on friends, to comfort each other, to talk over chances of war or peace.

"We went through one world war and haven't recovered yet," one says. "And now we face another. God, I hope everyone can get together again as they did last year and settle it over the conference table."

"Well, at least we won't have to fight the world," interposes another. "How can the English and the French help the Poles? I think reason will prevail in London and Paris and that if force must be used it will be localized against the Poles."

Someone turns on the radio to catch the last-minute news. But only martial music blares forth, as it has almost constantly for the last three days.

Franco-German Union Denounces Russian 'Betrayal'

Paris, Aug. 28.—German emigres, united in an organization called the Franco-German union, today issued a manifesto denouncing the Soviet government for its "betrayal" of the peace front, and pledging themselves to "fight with all our forces for a free Germany against Hitlerian imperialism."

Signatories included Otto Klepper, former Prussian finance minister; Herman Rauschning, one-time Nazi president of the Danzig senate; Novelist Franz Werfel, and Biographer Emil Ludwig.

Two Communist deputies in the French Chamber of Deputies have already resigned from the party in protest against Stalin's non-aggression pact with Hitler, and more are reported to be on the verge of doing so. Two thousand workers in the big Renault motor plants have also quit the Communist ranks.

German Husband Shoots Polish Wife

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Charles Bollmeyer, 57, is of German extraction, his wife of Polish descent

The farm couple discussed the issues which drew Europe to the brink of war. They traded hot words, climaxed, police said, when Bollmeyer shot his wife in the hips, chest and stomach. Bollmeyer was held on assault charges. His wife was reported in fair condition.

Canada Frees German Freighter

Quebec, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press). The admiralty court tonight released the German freighter Konigsberg, which had been held in port since Friday after warrants were sworn out for her seizure when she failed to deliver cargo to Canadian buyers

The freighter was expected to sail for home in a few hours. Capt. Wilhelm Siegert posted a bond of $20,000 covering claims of four Canadian concerns.

Lord Lothian Arrives Today As New British Ambassador

European Crisis Adds to Work of Incoming Envoy

Philip Henry Kerr, eleventh Marquis of Lothian, arrives in Washington today to take over what may prove to be the most vital post on Britain's world-wide diplomatic front.

The new British Ambassador to the United States is aboard the Aquitania, expected to dock in New York at 8 a. m. today. He will be met at the pier by Sir Ronald Lindsay, retiring ambassador, and members of the embassy staff.

Sir Ronald and his successor, according to embassy officials, will proceed immediately to a conference on the European crisis. Lord Lothian is expected to reach the Capital early this afternoon.

King George VI will be without the services of an ambassador here, technically, until Lord Lothian has presented his credentials to President Roosevelt. The ceremony "presumably" will take place this week, said embassy aides, who explained that "we write a note to the State Department and ask when it would be convenient for the President to receive the Ambassador."

Lord Lothian served as secretary to Prime Minister Lloyd-George during the World War. He was parliamentary undersecretary for Indian affairs in 1931-32. Owner of one of Britain's largest estates, he holds half a dozen titles, the earliest dating from 1591.

Sir Ronald, who is retiring from the diplomatic service, will return to England on the Aquitania, sailing tomorrow.

British, French Plane Orders Here in Peril

Deliveries Ahead of Schedule But Might Be Stopped if War Comes

More than $120,000,000 in British and French military plane orders placed with American companies would be threatened with embargo far short of fulfillment of contracts should war break in Europe, an unofficial survey indicated yesterday.

One informed source said work on combined British and French plane and engine orders generally is proceeding ahead of schedule, but estimated British deliveries at 50 per cent of orders, and French deliveries at nearer one-third.

Invocation of the neutrality act, once war broke in Europe, automatically would embargo further deliveries unless or until Congress met again to consider the President's reiterated request for repeal of the proscription.

To Bank on Repeal

As many of the companies building aircraft for the two war-threatened nations have contract clauses providing for delivery in this country, it was said work probably would proceed, in event of an embargo, with later action by Congress necessary before the remainder of the craft could be shipped abroad.

Of $63,000,000 in orders placed with three West Coast companies—Douglas, Lockheed and North American aviation—it was said $28,000,000 had been filled and deliveries were being made at the rate of $7,500,000 a month. The three companies combined were 93 planes ahead of schedule.

North American Aviation, building 400 British and 230 French basic combat planes, was reported to have filled 75 per cent of its orders.

$45,000,000 Contracts

Principal French orders for bombers are with the Douglas and Martin companies, which have begun testing the first of the new small and fast French bombing ships.

Douglas has an $11,000,000 contract for 100 of the ships and Martin is building 215 for France at an approximate cost of $34,000,000. None of the bombers has been delivered, and it was estimated it would take until the first of the year to complete the contract.

One company building 300 reconnaissance planes for Britain was reliably said to have completed and delivered 40 per cent of the craft, requiring the rest of the year to complete the order.

The Curtiss-Wright company completed a plane and engine installation contract of unannounced volume for the French last month. No information was available on the status of Britain's order for Pratt & Whitney engines.

Representatives of several of the companies in Washington said the foreign orders placed in advance of new Army and Navy aircraft construction authorized by Congress had served to "tool" their plants in personnel and equipment to handle swiftly and smoothly this Government's own orders.

Il Duce Ready To Mediate Nazi Demands

Fascists Warn Not To Pin Too Much Hope On Waiting Period

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 28.—Premier Mussolini stood by tonight ready to mediate the diplomatic conflict between Berlin and London over Germany's demands on Poland.

Italian newspapers reported that "a government," which they did not name, had appealed to the Duce to intervene. At the same time they reported an "increased doubt of a negotiated solution."

Fascists said some change in positions might result from the British reply to Adolf Hitler's peace proposals to London. Europe, they said, was awaiting an "act of mediation," but they warned that "no bright hope" should be drawn from the present waiting period.

Virginio Gayda, who often speaks the mind of Mussolini, wrote that Il Duce could not perform the "miracle" of averting war alone. He said any appeal for mediation must entail "understanding and respect" of the needs and rights of all.

Hitler has demanded Danzig and the Polish Corridor. Italy has been demanding, as a need and right, advantages in Tunisia, the Suez Canal and Jibuti.

At Vatican City officials were described as somewhat less optimistic than during the week-end.

Meanwhile, a decree signed by Premier Mussolini forbade all civil aircraft except those operating on regularly scheduled commercial services to fly over Italy or Italian colonial territory.

Swiss Mobilize 100,000 Troops As Border Guard

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 28 (AP).—Switzerland moblized 100,000 troops as a covering squad for her frontiers today in case of war and at the same time put into effect a decree forbidding purchase of many foodstuffs.

The troops were ordered to be in position along the mountainous frontiers by 5 a. m. tomorrow. All frontier towns were filled with troops tonight.

At Basel, where the Swiss border meets the boundaries of Germany and France, excitement was prevalent, and families were beginning to move into the interior.

The Swiss Federal Chamber was ordered to meet at 5 p. m. Wednesday to vote full decree powers to the government and to elect a general of the armies.

Netherlands Orders General Mobilization

First European Nation To Take Step, Despite Hitler's Assurances

By the United Press.

The Hague, Aug. 28.—The Netherlands today ordered general mobilization of the army and navy, the first European nation to take this step, as German troops dug in across the border and blocked most highway communications.

It was estimated that, under the mobilization, the Netherlands would have 650,000 first-line troops under arms within 24 hours.

Queen Wilhelmina, in a radio talk to her subjects throughout the world, said the Netherlands will try to remain aloof from any war as it did in 1914 and will "exert all its strength to maintain strict neutrality."

Americans Ordered Out

"Not all hope of a solution between the powers concerned need be abandoned, as discussions have not yet broken off," she said.

Advertisements in newspapers today gave urgent notice to all Americans to leave as soon as possible. Netherlands authorities said Americans who entered from other countries must leave in a few days or face deportation to the countries from which they came.

The government imposed strict food regulations and restricted the export of certain goods to insure supplies at home.

Housewives began to lay in food stocks but there were no runs on stores.

Reynders Heads Army, Navy

The Netherlands government was understood to have a food and coal supply sufficient for even a lengthy European conflict, which might upset the country's long empire communications.

The Queen, before making her radio talk tonight, appointed Lieut. Gen. I. H. Reynders, chief of the general staff, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy.

The mobilization affected all classes from 1924 up to and including the class of 1939.

Assurances Ignored

The nation remained calm and there were no crowds in the streets.

It was significant that mobilization was decided upon only two days after Fuehrer Hitler sent a message to the Queen assuring her that Germany, in event of war, would respect Dutch neutrality.

Hitler sent similar messages to Belgium and Switzerland. All three of the small nations previously had been given formal neutrality pledges by Germany and Hitler, on Saturday, reaffirmed them.

Wars Over Forever, Says Henry Ford

South Sudbury, Mass., Aug. 28 (INS).—Wars are over for all time, Henry Ford said today at his Wayside Inn retreat in predicing that the current European crisis would be solved peacefully.

"They don't dare to have a war—and they know it," he said. "If they do, they are crazy."

Hopes of Peace Rise in Berlin

in the British determination to stand by her ally, Poland.

With Hitler at the conference were Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop negotiation is possible is for Britain and France to put pressure on Poland to cede Danzig and the Corridor."

This will be necessary, it was intimated, regardless of how negotrop and Dr. Paul Schmidt, Hitler's interpreter.

"If others want peace they will have to bring it," Nazi quarters said before Sir Neville arrived.

Germany is willing to negotiate, these quarters said, but "the only tiations might take place—either direct or through a mediator.

[Hitler will not keep the world waiting for his answer, it was stated semiofficially, according to the United Press.

["It took Britain 48 hours to reply to the Fuehrer's proposals but it won't take him that long to give his answer—whatever it may be," it was said. Nazi leaders were confident Hitler would repeat his demands for Danzig and the Corridor before any further settlement.—Editor's note.]

Redefining of the German position came at the end of another tense day of waiting during which diplomats and common people many times asked themselves whether, after all, it would be possible to maintain peace, now that war preparations have been made and such strong positions taken by both sides.

The only basis for negotiation acceptable to Hitler, Berlin political quarters said, was the proposal made by President Wilson in 1918, according to which Poland was to be given only such territory as was inhabitated by Poles and free access to the sea.

The thirteenth of Wilson's famous 14 points of January 8, 1918, called for establishment of "an independent Polish state . . . which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and assured access to the sea and whose political and economic integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant."

Mining Area in Question

The German argument ran that Poland got territory inhabited by more than 50 per cent Germans and that the "free access to the sea" provision did not mean Poland should get it by a grant of territory where such would involve inclusion within Poland of Germans. The Germans say that this free access could be provided for Poland through internationalization of the Vistula River.

Germany demands what now is Polish territory from the Baltic Sea southward to between Bydgoszyz and Posnan. This region, soon after the war, it was said, returned a majority of German votes.

In addition to these territorial claims, Germany wants Poland to bind herself to a "just treatment of minorities."

Efforts to discover what was implied by the Fuehrer when he used the term "Macedonian conditions" (terrorist conditions), which he said existed along the Polish-German frontier, were not conclusive.

The Fuehrer employed that expression in his letter to Premier Daladier. Some observers wondered whether this might not later involve further territorial demands as far southward as Polish Silesia with its important mining area.

The Nazi proposals would take the harbor of Gdynia from Poland, but would leave that country the big provincial city of Poznan, which lies on the main railway connecting Berlin and Warsaw. The line would be drawn somewhere between Poznan and Bydgoszyz.

Information tonight indicated that one main purpose of the chancellor's letter to the French premier was to establish war guilt—if war is to come.

"In his answer to the French premier, which speaks for itself, the Fuehrer laid down the moral, political and legal basis of the German nation in a document of historical and moral greatness, in case the nation is forced to defend its right with the sword," the Boersen Zeitung said in an inspired editorial.

"Without a solution of the question in the east," the editorial said, "Europe never again will have quiet."

The strategical position of Germany was bettered by the German-Russian nonaggression pact, the paper said. The "threat of a blockade is no longer a trump card."

In all the efforts to avoid war, no public mention has been made in Berlin of President Roosevelt's two telegrams to Hitler.

The Fuehrer again today remained closeted in his palace, he has not left the chancellery, as far as could be learned, since he entered it on arriving from Berchtesgaden last Thursday night.

D. C. Doctors Get Nazi Cards From Danzig

They're Unimpressed By Plea for Return Of Port and Corridor

Dozens of District doctors are wondering how they landed on the Nazi mailing list.

At least half the Capital's physicians and surgeons yesterday and Saturday received postcards from Danzig, urging return of the Baltic port and Polish Corridor to Germany.

A telephone sampling of local doctors showed that almost every man who had not received a card himself knew several others who had.

Several recipients were quick to point out that the cards, mailed from Danzig August 15, 16 and 17, were sent before the Polish crisis "broke," but apparently were timed to reach this country at the most critical stage of the dispute.

Doctors Unimpressed

The doctors were unanimously unimpressed by the Nazi arguments, though some are keeping the cards as an "interesting souvenir."

The cards, handsomely printed in four colors, carry two maps, one showing Germany, Poland and the corridor. The other illustrates a hypothetical partition of New England, with Vermont, New Hampshire and part of Massachusetts annexed to Canada, cutting off Maine from the rest of the country. Boston is a "free city" at the mouth of the corridor.

"What would you say," the card inquires, "if the United States of America were to be treated in this way and made to look like Germany does? Would the United States be willing to agree to such frontiers?"

Gen. Smuts, South African delegate at the peace conference, is quoted as describing the "exaggerated enlargement of Poland" as "one of the cardinal errors" in the Treaty of Versailles, menacing European peace.

Hitler's edict reads "Let us settle the matter in peace; all Germany asks for is a road and a railway."

The Poles are represented as demanding East Prussia "and the whole Baltic coast up to Stettin!"

Similar cards have been received by doctors in Baltimore and New York, according to newspapers in those cities. Only medical men, as far as could be learned, have received the messages.

Had His Initials Wrong

"Doctors are on all sorts of sucker lists, you know," said Dr. Howard M. Payne, 41 Quincy place northwest. "We get free magazines and such stuff all the time. The theory seems to be that doctors do a lot of talking so that a lot of people can be reached through them. It would be very easy for someone in Germany to get hold of an American medical directory." Dr. Payne dismissed the cards as "lousy propaganda."

"They even had my initials wrong," he added.

"Propaganda" also was the reaction of Dr. Edward A. Krause, 1746 K street northwest, who promptly threw his card away. Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, 1322 Park Road northwest, said, "I don't know why they sent the thing to me. It didn't interest me in the slightest."

Wilhelm Tannenberg, first secretary of the German Embassy, denied any knowledge of the cards' origin. He obliged, however, with a translation of the German slogan stamped on the outer envelope next to the Danzig postmark:

"Where is there another city with one bathing beach after another?"

Luxemburg Prince and Son Bid Farewell to Washington

Harris & Ewing

Rainbow Veterans Name Officers

Elmer F. Nagle, of Washington, national president of the Rainbow Division Veterans, has made appointments as follows: Joseph Justad, St. Louis Park, Minn., treasurer; Albert Hoyt, Cleveland, secretary; Harold Barnhard Rodier, Washington, national editor of the monthly publication, The Rainbow Reveille, with Frank West, Minneapolis, and Fred Cornelius, San Antonio, Tex., as associate editors.

This group of veterans, it was pointed out, "has steadfastly refused to enter into political or other controversial matters since its formation on German soil following the World War."

Hiking Club Plans Chain Bridge Trip

The Capital Hiking Club will leave Stop 20 on the Cabin John car line at 7:45 p. m. today for a moonlight walking trip near Chain Bridge.

Robert Shostock will lead the hike. James Benn, of the Minerology Division, National Museum, will lecture on shooting stars during the campfire program.

Sousa Stamp May Be Sold First in Capital

The Capital was being considered yesterday as the first American city in which a postage stamp honoring John Philip Sousa, composer of "The Washington Post" and other stirring marches, would be placed on sale by the Postoffice Department.

Officials informed the Associated Press they were awaiting the return from Europe of Postmaster General Farley before announcing the date and place of the first-day sale.

The stamp honoring Sousa, a native Washingtonian, will be the first in a series of 35 in memory of American writers, artists, educators and scientists, it was said.

2 Physicians Lose $195 to Burglar

Two physicians, one of them a police surgeon, were salving their feelings yesterday as police sought an unknown housebreaker who removed $195 from the desks in their offices at 1720 Connecticut avenue northwest.

The police surgeon is Dr. John A. Reed. He lost $120. The other physician was Dr. William J. Malory, who found about $75 missing from his ransacked desk.

FHA's $2,500 House

There is no reason to suppose that the FHA has solved the low-cost housing problem by its new plan to insure mortgages on homes costing less than $2,500. But it doubtless will aid a considerable number of individual families in the low-income group to improve their living conditions.

The weakness of the plan is that it permits the insurance of mortgages on a less desirable type of housing, instead of reducing the cost of building first-class dwellings. More expensive homes must be located in well-protected neighborhoods to obtain FHA-insured mortgages. The objective has been to prevent loss of investment in a house because of a bad environment. To make possible the use of cheap land in outlying areas, where zoning regulations are not in effect, some of these restrictions have now been relaxed for small homes to be built under this supplementary plan.

A would-be home owner with as little as 5 per cent of the cost of the structure he wishes to build will be able to take advantage of this arrangement. But he will have to make higher monthly payments than the beneficiaries of mortgage insurance living in protected communities. For his obligation, which involves risks avoided in well-zoned residential areas, must be fully met in no less than 15 years.

However, it is believed that the advantage of a 5 per cent down payment will make it possible for many families in some localities to acquire modern, although modest, homes of their own. Particularly in some parts of California and Texas, where homes are not equipped with heat facilities, the construction of low-cost bungalows in outlying areas has already become popular.

The chief advantage of the plan is that it gives greater diversity to the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance system. Moreover, this aid is given where it is most needed—in the low-cost housing field. The only disappointing fact is that the new low costs are to be achieved by waiving desirable standards, instead of through a modernization of the building industry. Unfortunately, this latter transformation cannot be effected by the FHA. It must await the awakening of builders and the building trade unions to the opportunities of mass production in the housing field. And that seems to be a painfully slow process.

Confusion In Japan

The revolutionary change in German-Russian relations has been a blow of major dimensions to Japan. It has upset all Japanese calculations as to the trend of European affairs and their bearing on the Far Eastern situation. It has compelled the island empire to revise its foreign policy at a moment when, because of past attitudes and present necessities, it is particularly difficult to do so. The result is confusion.

To resolve that confusion, a new government has taken over in Tokyo. There is a paradoxical aspect to this development, for it was the army that was most insistent on closer relations with the axis. It was the government, headed by Baron Hiranuma, which resisted that move on the ground that it was more to Japan's interest to remain neutral in the event of a European war than to pool her interests too definitely with those of Germany and Italy.

The government proved to be right; the army wrong. But the responsibility for Japan's present plight has been assumed by the government, thus illustrating once again the fact that the Japanese militarists often capitalize their mistakes as well as their successes.

The new premier, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, is not an army extremist, however. A scholar, as well as soldier, he belongs to the moderate group. His appointment would seem to signify, therefore, a more cautious policy in foreign relations than that hitherto pursued, a possibility born out, temporarily at least, by the withdrawal of troops on the border of the British-leased territory of Kowloon. For the time being, apparently, there is to be no blockade of Hongkong.

There is a possibility that increased dangers from Russia may make Japan a little less cocky toward the Western powers in China than she has been hitherto. Without friends except for Italy, which counts for nothing in the Far East, Tokyo finds itself in a dangerously isolated position. It is possible that the new Japanese government will decide that a friendlier attitude toward Great Britain, France and the United States is peremptory.

Turn Of The Tide

It is already apparent that last week-end witnessed a fundamental change in the character of the European crisis. A tide which up to Saturday was flowing in Germany's favor has begun to ebb. Unfortunately, it cannot be said with any assurance that this turn makes war less probable. In some respects it may even lessen the odds for peace. But, from any long-range viewpoint, the change is for the better.

Over the week-end Germany, for the first time, began to realize that the policy of conquest by terrorization is played out. The German people, heretofore blandly confident that the Fuehrer would pull it off again, awoke to find supplies of every description rationed and air-raid precautions going forward in grim earnest. Prior to Saturday the German war preparations were mainly designed to impress potential enemies. Now it is being brought home to the Germans themselves that they are on the very brink of war.

The same, in even greater degree, applies to Italy, dragged by the Nazi chariot wheels into the forefront of appalling danger. The pronounced Italian delay in taking urgent preparedness measures is obviously due to Fascist unwillingness further to alarm a populace which is already in a state of extreme nervous tension. But last week-end, in spite of censorship, the Italian people also began to realize that the abyss is before them.

It is the great strength of the British and French position that those countries have come, step by step and voluntarily, to realization that it may well be necessary to halt Hitler by force of arms. It is the equivalent weakness in the German and Italian position that full appreciation of the likelihood of this outcome has only just begun to dawn. Italians and Germans have lived so many years in an elated atmosphere of self-glorification, have become so accustomed to hearing the democracies described as decadent and pusillanimous, that the probability of a fight to the death catches them unprepared. They are now habituated to every aspect of war except actual combat. For that they are, in the sporting phrase, over-trained.

A full appreciation of this situation was apparent between the lines of the subtle letter which was rushed by Hitler to Premier Daladier of France on Sunday and first made public, significantly enough, in Berlin. In this letter, addressed to his own people rather than to France, the Fuehrer dropped all ranting and all bombast. The pacific character of his intentions was emphasized throughout. It is clear, he says, that "Danzig and the Corridor must go back to Germany." Nevertheless, Hitler would "despair of an honorable future for my own people if we were not determined under such circumstances to solve the problem in one way or another."

These are the words of a man who is carrying water on both shoulders, who does not hate war, but who fears it, who is trying to rally his people, from whom the utmost in self-sacrifice has already been demanded, by telling them that it will be the fault of others if war comes. The same sort of alibi is now to be expected from Mussolini. And the fact that it has not yet come from Il Duce is the best possible evidence that he does not know how to make such an alibi effective.

From Chamberlain and Daladier, on the other hand, no alibis are needed. They hate war but do not fear it, as is the case with Hitler and Mussolini. The people of Great Britain and France, solidly united and spiritually prepared for the worst, do not need to be coaxed, cajoled or commanded in order to face with equanimity whatever may lie ahead. There is the essential difference between the democratic and the totalitarian powers at this crucial moment, and in this distinction lies the weakness of the latter.

Whether Hitler will back down now is problematical. He has never done so yet and major concessions in his defined demands will not be easy. To save his face sufficiently to make a withdrawal palatable will require the acme of statesmanship from the premiers of Great Britain and France. But every step they have taken in this crisis indicates possession of all the qualities necessary to maintain peace, if it is humanly possible to do so.

And time fights on the side of the democracies. With every passing day they become materially better equipped to fight, as Germany and Italy—particularly the latter—become morally less ready. The present war of nerves is only slightly less dreadful than the real thing would be. But in this war of nerves, as would be the case if Hitler should finally force the showdown, the intangible, yet vital, qualities of the democracies are already showing their value.

Potential Double Play

Richmond's game warden, who has been putting up a game fight against the ubiquitous starling in that city, is not dead sure that the game is worth the Roman candles he has been burning at both ends to give the birds the bird. So he is now prepared to quit shooting off fireworks (which delight the children but failed to dislodge the starlings) and to start using shotguns. Later he may call on the Richmond Blues for a mass attack.

If the latter course is adopted, the war should be preceded by some intelligent propaganda designed to prove that starlings are delicious in pies, far exceeding in tastiness the four-and twenty legendary blackbirds. It may also be pointed out that enough starlings are so good a substitute for turkey that a celebrant wouldn't care whether the Thanksgiving date is November 23 or November 30.

Thus a sage who knows his onions will knock the stuffing out of both problems, killing, as it were, two birds with one stone.

Turkey's Vital Role

With the world precariously poised between peace and war, even the attitude of nations seemingly remote from the potential scene of conflict can be of decisive importance in determining the ultimate balance of power.

That explains why Germany has been making a tremendous last-minute effort to wean Turkey away from the peace front, at least to the extent of insuring that nation's neutrality in the event of a general war. For the same reason, the British and the French have been utilizing every resource of diplomacy to nullify this maneuver. It is of the utmost importance to them that Turkey remain faithful to her newly concluded alliances with London and Paris.

Now, as at the time of the World War, Turkey occupies a vital strategic position. She is in close proximity to vital British and French interests in the Near East. More important, the Turks control the passageway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. Should Turkey throw in her lot with the axis powers, the only means Great Britain and France now have left of reaching their eastern allies would be cut off; the land route is now entirely in the hands of the axis. Thus Turkey holds the key to the fate of the Balkans should Europe plunge into war.

Students of the World War argue that had Turkey joined the allies in 1914, instead of becoming Germany's partner, the conflict might have been shortened by two years. Turkey's entrance on the side of Germany cut off Great Britain and France from their ally, Russia, and thus contributed considerably to the collapse of that country.

When Turkey joined the peace front it was still being assumed that Russia would conclude a mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France. Russia, long Turkey's enemy, has been her friend and ally since 1920. This assumption has gone a-glimmering. Far from joining the Anglo-French camp, Russia has made what is tantamount to a defensive alliance with the Third Reich. This circumstance Turkey cannot ignore. She now finds herself in the peculiar and, it may be, untenable position of being at one and the same time allied to Germany's strange new friend and to Germany's potential enemies.

Much depends on the direction in which Turkey now decides to move. If she chooses to follow the Russian course, the Balkan front as a possible barrier to German and Italian expansion is certain to crumble. If, on the other hand, she stands by Great Britain and France, the British and French position in southeastern Europe is strengthened. No wonder, therefore, that the reports from Ankara suggesting that Turkey plans to pursue the latter policy has been received with enormous gratification and relief in London and Paris. It has long been assumed that would be Turkey's position. She has nothing to gain, much to lose, by the further aggrandizement of the axis.

Wreck Of The Old 97

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia, has disallowed a district court award of $65,295.56 to David Graves George, against the Victor Talking Machine Co., just as every one thought Mr. George had established his authorship of the ballad, "The Wreck of the Old 97," had the money stowed on board, and was about to whistle for the downgrade.

What jolts us in the decision of the high Federal court is that it upheld, according to the Associated Press account of its action, "the Victor Co.'s claim that the ballad in question was made up from the songs 'Casey Jones' and 'The Parted Lovers,' and that he (George) was not entitled to royalties for its use." But didn't the talking machine company consider the ballad original enough, and entertaining enough, to merit a recording for the benefit of a public that was—at the time the record was made—distinctly ballad-conscious?

Successful plagiarism, a learned judge once said, is the penalty unsuccessful authors must suffer for having dealt ineffectively and incompletely with their material. But "Casey Jones" is a successful ballad, that has itself enjoyed a national popularity, and one that offered defiance to any mere imitator. "The Wreck of the Old 97" got as close to the scene of the accident as possible (Mr. George was there) and was built right from the local ground up.

The ballad dealt with familiar landmarks—automobiles now are rolling over old White Oak Mountain by the thousands. The song has always been regarded as an essentially authentic statement of the facts about the wreck that occurred on the north side of Danville in 1903, and there are many of that region who will sincerely regret that a former Pittsylvanian is having such a mighty rough road to royalty.

Distractions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with interest the materials relative to noisy motor horns which you have been publishing recently. May I repeat a notation which I sent to you several months ago, namely, that an editorial might be timely?

At Wilson Teachers College we are doing our bit in a campaign for quieter driving by discussing the psychological implications of "distraction." Our textbook, "Psychology and Life," by Floyd L. Ruch gives some very interesting facts.

The discussions were very interesting. Most of the students, especially the boys, suggested that to indicate your intentions by a slight "tap" of the horn was just as effective and more so than "blasting" your way through traffic. One student said that you had much more self-respect when you "used your brains and your brakes." Still another suggested a campaign for "cerebral" driving.

I thought you might be interested in what some of our young drivers are reading and discussing and what they are really trying to do about applying their classroom psychology to everyday problems.

Whose Enemy?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that the American people can not learn from experience. Twice, when we were small and weak, we had to take up arms against British tyranny. We went into a great war "to make the world safe for democracy" (what a mockery), and helped Britain to turn defeat into victory.

Our reward was $5,000,000,000 worth of solemnly signed and sealed British promises. We are allowing ourselves to drift directly into another war, to help those same people against an enemy who does not even remotely threaten us.

Militarist Control

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: One aspect of the Chinese-Japanese conflict since 1931 may escape the attention of many busy statesmen; but it is peculiarly relevant to the situation. The question is: Can the Japanese government (not only civilians at the helm) control and direct what the Japanese militarists, especially the so-called young officers, have done, are doing and will do?

A review of the tendency for approval of the militarists' actions at Tokyo, even in contravention of an international law, treaty, agreement or pledge binding upon their government, cannot but signal alarm. The consequences of the present Tokyo parley must be considered now with that tendency in mind.

In this connection many a busy statesman may be reminded of the issue involved in the present world-wide perturbation; namely, whether armies and navies are instruments of national policy, or whether, on the contrary, national policy is itself becoming an instrument of war and of the war machine. In the Far East, furthermore, the issue seems to have been complicated with an unruly element in the war machine which has itself become a politico-economic ferment. This condition exists nowhere else in the world, not even in Russia, Germany, Italy.

Asks U. S. To Act In European Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The splendid article by Hedley Donovan in The Sunday Post deserves particular praise for the accurate and profound view of the critical situation now facing European civilization. I have entertained these same views for quite some time.

Europe today is faced with the same kind of turbulent madness as in the time of the two Napoleons. It took nothing less than their downfall to bring about a breathing spell and an era of temporary peace until another madman appeared in the political arena, Wilhelm II. Unfortunately, the downfall of Kaiser Wilhelm II gave birth to a worse madman—Chancellor Hitler.

For all those who know Germany and the German people, one would not wish to find a more industrious, a more peace-loving nation. Unfortunately, the Germans are so moulded and have been for so long taught not to think for themselves that they are easily led by the nose. Bismarck led them. Wilhelm II led them. And now Hitler is leading them to sure ruination.

If Hitler ever gets his way with Poland as he did with Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Hungary are doomed. Russia's turn will be next with the loss of Ukrainia. The German-Russian pact of last week is only another pact, Hitler's style. It will be scrapped overnight whenever it will suit Hitler to scrap it. He has already scrapped all the pacts he made since 1933. With an omnipotent Germany domineering Europe, Italy's turn will be next on the Nazi's slate. Mussolini, helpless in the face of a mighty power to the north, and without friends in the west, will soon lose what Italy gained in the World War.

It must not be forgotten that a mighty Germany by that time would want an outlet to the Mediterranean via the Adriatic, and would never be contented with an outlet to the Black Sea. When that point is reached England and France will have ceased to count as major powers. As for the United States, an imperialistic Hitler will be able to afford to thumb his nose at it, just as the Kaiser attempted to do under the regime of McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

What are we to do? The dictators of Europe seem to know what to do within the stroke of the moment. Why should the countries boasting of democracy, of a free-thinking population be so slow in their actions as to be caught napping? Now is the time or never, to use Signor Mussolini's own words when he tried to forestall Hitler's move against Austria early in March, 1938.

What we need is action, not hot air. Not lengthy meaningless dispatches across the Atlantic, not conferences for a temporary truce to enable Germany to become still stronger, so strong that no power on earth could ever subdue her in another year. And action is what we are lacking today when it comes to the foreign policy of the three major democracies, England, France and the United States.

If President Roosevelt, with the advice and consent of his two committees on Foreign Affairs of the House and Senate, were to tell Europe in general, and Hitler in particular: "We have had enough of that nonsense. We have had enough of that constant threat to the world peace. We have had enough of that threat to the lives of millions of innocent people. If you create any further trouble, our forces and our resources will be on the side of European civilization and world peace," the effect of such a pronouncement would be far greater than that of meaningless dispatches and sugar-coated diplomacy.

Editorial Insight

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial discernment and foresight revealed in The Post of August 25, in which you disclose that by repeated editorials you have foreshadowed the Russo-German rapprochement, cannot be hidden by concealment on a back advertisement page. Your far-seeing discernment of ultimate harmony between these two seemingly wide-apart political, economic and social systems evinces a deep knowledge and keen diagnosis of under-surface social forces rarely found in American journalism.

Your editorial wisdom was not arrived at through divination, but was rather in the nature of a reasoned prediction which foretells coming events through knowledge and analysis of the facts, forces and factors which produce such events. The Weather Bureau warns us of the coming of the storm, not by any mystic familiarity with the occult powers, but by careful study of weather conditions at the moment somewhat remote in time and space.

When Hitler first forced himself upon public attention by his bizarre methods and spectacular tactics, he was hard put for an issue which could be easily dramatized and a slogan which could be easily interpreted to suit the mood of his followers awaiting eagerly and impatiently for a resounding tocsin and rallying cry. The issue of communism, then rampant in Russia, was well suited to serve his immediate purpose. His quick intuition at once realized that the dynamic of hate was more powerful and persuasive than the appeal of co-operation and friendship. With a power of dramatization in which this master rabble rouser of all time delights to indulge, communism was denounced in every mood and tense of condemnation. To the frenzied Nazi communism became the anti-Christ.

With an amazing suddenness, the German Fuehrer reversed the role which he had hitherto played with such effectiveness and struck hard with his erstwhile enemies with a firmness and fervor which leaves the world still gasping in bewilderment. We must still await Hitler's resourcefulness to vindicate his sudden somersault in the eyes of his followers and of the world.

The Post must be congratulated for forecasting the ultimate agreement between communism and Nazism by reason of the inherent harmony of their basic philosophy.

I have been a reader of The Post ever since I entered Howard University as a student more than 50 years ago, and have found in its pages the coverage of essential news of national and world-wide import and importance and comprehensive editorial digest unsurpassed by any other American newspaper. This primacy in the journalistic world has been emphasized under the present management during the past six years. Both in its news service and editorial comments The Post justifies the slogan adopted by Lee Edwards in his morning broadcast over WMAL—"Read The Post and Know the Most."

Appropriate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that Longfellow's "The Arsenal at Springfield" might well be recalled at this moment. Two stanzas alone are worth broadcasting:

"Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals and forts:

"The warrior's name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation, that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead

Home Town

A recent newspaper note to the effect that steamboat traffic has been revived on the Missouri River between Omaha and Kansas City reminds me that I spent my youth on its shore at Peru, Nebr. I've been away a long time, but I remember it well.

The Missouri River flows along the eastern border of Nebraska and past the junction of Missouri and Iowa through a valley of wide but definite proportions. Through this broad valley the river leisurely curls and bends its way, following its downward course hesitatingly, visiting first the eastern side and then the western as if in search of a chance to leave the valley and go charging through some opening in the hills. But the barriers rise steep and stern on each side of the broad bed, seeming to realize the potentiality of the river in their defiant attitude, and the yellow flood of the "Old Muddy" turns and sullenly churns its way off toward St. Louis and the Mississippi.

Below Nebraska City, that once blooming but now decadent and forgotten "entrance to the West," the river follows the Nebraskan hills with but little meandering; but at a point some 12 miles down from the city and a little above the coincidence of Iowa and Missouri, the river swings across the valley, leaving several square miles of rich black, level ground around which the hills curve in an easterly direction until the river returns to join them.

A single track railway leaves the city, and hugs the hills until it comes to Barney, a siding graced with a boxcar station and an elevator, and situated at the upper end of the little plain. Here the tracks angle boldly across to the town of Peru, perched in the hills at the other extremity of the lowlands.

Peru was one of the early Nebraska settlements. During its first years it was a strong trading center, and rudimentary industries began sprouting in the shape of a mill and a brick foundry. Peru was a typical river town, the progeny of steamboat trade.

The steamboat played a large part in the development of the West. The invading Southerners loaded their goods on the spacious decks of these craft, and plowed up the river to settle in the same communities with Northerners who carried their worldly possessions overland in the historic covered wagon. Settlements grew up along the Missouri River, and the country began its great career of production.

The river towns boomed, and the river channel became covered with steamboats bringing up immigrants and carrying back the grain, flour, and fruit of the country. But with the arrival of the railroad, the center of Nebraskan industry moved farther west, and the river towns wilted.

Peru, however, was more fortunate than some of her neighbors. During her years of prosperity, one of her stronger citizens had influenced the State officials to make Peru the seat of a normal school. He had asked, so the story runs, for the State university, and being refused, had demanded the State penitentiary. This was also impossible, but the State fathers, fearing the weight of his wrath, retreated into conference and returned offering him a normal school. "Now, what the hell," he demanded in perplexity, "is a normal school?" But he took it, and the presence of this institution infused enough energy into the town to keep it alive.

In a town of this sort, succeeding years make but little change. True, the wealth of the State made it possible for the normal school to be improved with large new buildings and modern equipment, but the town remained at all times much the same. There was never a building boom, new streets were never necessary; with the change in times, old buildings were put to new use. Since the river had moved back toward the Missouri side of the valley in one of its characteristic changes, Green's Mill, now useless in its old capacity, had become a storehouse for lumber and farm implements.

I shall return to Peru some day. The new commerce carries only freight on tug-propelled barges, I am told, but sometime an old shallow raft, flat-bottomed side wheeler will blow for landing at Peru, and after the roustabouts have put down the gangplank, I should like to be one to disembark there.

Labor And Machinery

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Wage earners complain that the increasing introduction of labor-saving machinery is throwing many of them out of work.

Does it ever occur to the workers that they themselves, by their support of unfair labor laws and labor organizations, are driving their employers, in desperation, to seek relief by installing labor-saving devices?

Repeal the unfair Wagner act! Restore friendly relations between employer and employe, to the benefit of both. They should be partners, not enemies.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Caught Flatfooted

THERE ARE a couple of details in the military treaty by which Nazism and Communism confessed their identity and their community of interest which should be hung around the necks of both parties and their adherents. In this country it would be nice if Fritz Kuhn and Earl Browder could be produced on the same platform at the same time to receive the order of the albatross, but, as that is not just now feasible it will have to be done symbolically.

Browder, it will be remembered, was caught flatfooted by the news of the confession and neither he nor the Communist paper knew the answers until sufficient time had elapsed to permit communication with Moscow. He and the paper then came out with an excuse as long and about as straight as a ball of string in which they said at one point: "In each and every nonaggression pact which the Soviet Union concludes there is a basic clause of the Soviet peace policy which provides that in the event that one of the parties invades or commits an act of aggression against a third nation, the other party (the Soviet Union) is not bound to the treaty, is free to act in defense of peace."

Get that, now. Browder and the Communist paper say this is a basic clause of the Soviet peace policy.

But get this, too. There is no such clause in the Hitler-Stalin confession, and this means that if Germany attacks Poland, as she will, in due time, just as she attacked Czecho-Slovakia, Stalin doesn't have the right to revoke the treaty.

Browder And Kuhn Must Bury Hatchet

ON THE contrary, by the conspicuous omission of this basic clause of the Soviet peace policy, Stalin obviously repudiates it. He gives Hitler an unwritten but, nevertheless, plain assurance that when Germany attacks Poland, Russia will not feel obliged to do anything about it.

Just what he will do, they don't say, but from the smell of the deal it may be assumed that he and Hitler will divide Poland between them. In fact, the second article of the confession of kinship and mutual principles constitutes a gimmick whereby Stalin emphasizes his invitation to Hitler to attack Poland.

This article says that if Germany or Russia is attacked by a third power, neither Germany nor Russia will assist the offender. That gives Hitler and Stalin the right to decide between them that Poland was the aggressor when the war comes and to act accordingly.

But the little pet of the document is article four, which says that neither party will associate itself with any other grouping powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other.

Now what is the spirit of that one? The spirit of it is that the anti-German boycott is off, and that Browder and Kuhn, in this country, are placed under an obligation to quit needling one another, and that their respective followings, such as they are, must abandon their reasons for political existence. Kuhn exists to combat Bolshevism, or as he and Hitler have been calling it, Jewish Bolshevism. Browder exists to combat Nazi-Fascism. He has said so hundreds of times.

Pact Means That Mock Feud Is Off

THIS CLAUSE in the treaty says "directly or indirectly." It means that the mock feud is absolutely off now, and that followers of Hitler and Stalin are obliged to cease nagging and faking and co-operate. The co-operation is provided for in the trade agreement, and it certainly would be disobedience and traitorous conduct for members of either side here to fail to obey orders.

It may take a little while for Browder and Kuhn to make the turn, and they probably will be allowed some time, in view of the mental pecularity of the American people who have a disagreeable habit of pointing out inconsistencies. But, as soon as possible, they are obliged to lay off their old program of saving the United States from each other's political vice.

Browder and the Communists mustn't directly or indirectly antagonize the Nazis.

They are comrades now, though it may gall them to realize as much, and the Americans are the winners. The Americans now have the admission of their respective bosses that the whole feud was an act and a fake, that it wasn't a contest to save us from Nazism or Bolshevism, but an attack by one enemy on two fronts against American democracy.

Belgian Premier Sees French, Nazi, Polish Envoys

Brussels, Aug. 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot received in quick succession late tonight the ambassadors from Italy, France and Germany and the ministers from Poland and Hungary.

The diplomatic activity raised speculation in political circles in connection with King Leopold's recent peace appeal. An official of the foreign affairs department said that diplomatic tension was "less acute."

Some observers, however, believed the calls might concern Belgium's neutrality.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America's Need, A Government Able to Deal With Great Issues

THE IMMEDIATE, urgent, and paramount need of the American people is a Government that is able to deal with great issues, for more than a year we have not had a Government that can choose a clear course and can follow it. There is under existing conditions no prospect of such a Government for more than a year to come. Yet unless we can restore effective government in the United States, no important question can be decided. Until we re-establish the authority of the American Government at home and abroad, it is worse than useless for anyone, for the President himself or for the leaders of the opposition, to take a firm position on any controversial issue.

For when men take strong views under a weak government, they divide the nation and thus make the government still weaker. Therefore, the first duty of responsible men is not to proclaim their own convictions as regards Europe, the Far East, Mexico, this hemisphere. Their first duty is to set up in Washington a Government that is effective because it can formulate policies and take measures, a Government that has authority because it is trusted by the Nation as a whole.

Government Needed To Decide Issues

WHEN MR. ROOSEVELT was inaugurated in March, 1933, he said that we must do first things first. In this critical hour the first thing to do is to dissolve the deadlock between the President and Congress, to form a majority led by statesmanlike men in both parties and in all factions, and thus to re-establish government that can decide issues and make good its decisions, that can act promptly because it can count on the support of the people.

Unless this is done, nothing else can be done. Unless Mr. Roosevelt can come to terms with the opposition in Congress he is tied hand and foot. He can never know, and no foreign government that he is dealing with can ever know, whether or not he really speaks for the American Nation. Unless the opposition is willing to make terms with the President, it can obstruct but it cannot govern; it can only confuse and weaken the American position. In so great an emergency the national interest must override all personal, factional and partisan considerations; public men must rise above their ordinary ambitions and habitual prejudices, and the people have a right to insist that their leaders shall be equal to the occasion.

Only One Way To Make Government Capable

THERE IS IN principle but one way to make the American Government capable of dealing with the complex and dangerous issues that will confront it in this coming year. That way is to take into the inner councils of the Administration responsible leaders of the existing opposition. In that way, and only in that way, can the President be sure that Congress will support his actions. Congress will not give him unlimited discretion. If he decides to ask for it, he will be making the most disastrous mistake of his whole life. Even if he could win eventually, he could win only after a long struggle. It would be a useless victory because it would have divided and embittered American opinion. It would be dangerous because it would have paralyzed American action, and if he failed, as almost certainly he would, the American Nation would be left facing the gravest issues with a discredited President and a hopelessly divided people.

Nor can he ignore Congress on the theory that he has enough power already to do a great many of the things that will need to be done. The fact is that he does not now have the necessary powers. Sooner or later he will have to go to Congress, and if he goes after evading it, the accumulated distrust and suspicion may well be disastrous.

President Must Have Support Of Congress

THE PRESIDENT must have the support of Congress. The only way to get it is to win the support of Congress at once before the Administration takes a position on any controversial issue. This means that leading members of Congress should at once be called in to share in the responsibility of making the decisions.

There need not be very many of them. Half a dozen would be quite enough. The country will understand that affairs cannot be conducted by mass meeting. But they should be representative men. There should be Republicans and dissenting Democrats among them, and they should be selected, not because Mr. Roosevelt likes them or agrees with them, but because they are backed by a respectable group in Congress and in the country. They should be men who might themselves be President or members of the Cabinet, not prima donnas who can function only when they sing solo.

These men should meet not occasionally but every day, if necessary all day, as a council of national defense. They should have available to them all the information which reaches the State Department, the Treasury, the War and Navy Departments. No important question of policy should be decided without their advice and consent; no policy should be proposed publicly until it has been considered by them. No proposal should be made to Congress without their agreement and their willingness to defend it on the floor of both houses of Congress.

Patriotic Men Can Make Plan Work

NO DOUBT THIS is an unusual procedure, but that is within the spirit of the Constitution, that is a procedure for doing what the Constitution intends, namely to co-ordinate the legislature and the executive, is, I think, certain. Can it be made to work? The answer is that it can be made to work by men who are patriotically determined to make it work. In this hour nothing can be made to work if the spirit of patriotism does not lift men above their ambitions, their factional hatreds, and their partisan prejudices.

Life's Darkest Moment

National Geographic Explains Hitler's Macedonian Allusion

Fuehrer Ignored Recent History of Area Strife-Torn for 2,000 Years, Bulletin Says, Citing Pact of 1925

Hitler drew on more than 2,000 years of history to bolster his letter to Premier Daladier, the National Geographical Society pointed out yesterday, in a bulletin on the Fuehrer's reference to "Macedonian conditions" on Germany's eastern frontier.

A vaguely defined Balkan area, Macedonia is now divided between Greece, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, the bulletin explains, and is inhabited by seven different nationalities. "Bloody political disputes "have raged across the region for centuries, the society writes.

Lying athwart the east-west paths of conquest, Macedonia "from ancient times has seen successive waves of domination, with attendant pillage, massacres and persecutions," according to the bulletin.

Although Hitler doubtless alluded to "Macedonian conditions" as a synonym for terror and disorder, the bulletin points out that the region's complex problems were peaceably solved on at least one occasion. In 1925, when Greek troops had occupied Bulgarian territory after a series of border incidents, the League of Nations appointed an arbitration commission which obtained agreement from both countries on a peaceful settlement.

Mississippi Vote Tomorrow Points To 1940 Stand

Jackson, Miss., (AP).—A gubernatorial campaign carrying national overtones closed tonight in Mississippi, and the State will choose between candidates backed by two feuding Democratic Senators.

Paul Johnson bore the indorsement of Theo Bilbo, junior Senator and stanch New Dealer, in this Democratic runoff primary. Former Gov. Sennett Conner was the choice of Pat Harrison, Senate veteran and occasional Administration opponent.

Johnson led the field in the August 8 primary with 103,099 votes, but failed of a majority. Conner was a strong second at 79,306. About 125,000 ballots were spread among the five other aspirants. Tomorrow's test will be conclusive, since Democratic nomination means election.

National issues were not stressed in the campaigning. The Senators did not take active part in the vote drive, but their positions were clear and none doubted Mississippi's delegation to the 1940 party convention was at stake. The Governor will be a key figure in deciding how the State's 18 votes will go.

Cleveland, Aug. 28 (AP).—Roscoe Turner pushed his racing plane to an average of 297.767 miles an hour today to establish a world record for a 10-mile closed course.

Speeding as fast as 345 to 350 miles an hour on the straightaways, the Chicagoan led early qualifiers for next Monday's 300-mile Thompson event in the National Air Races. Turner set a Thompson race record of 283 miles per hour in 1936.

Stiers Awarded Sewer Contract

The Stiers Bros. Construction Co., of St. Louis, Mo., yesterday was awarded a $801,120 contract on a section of the Rock Creek sewer diversion project, the District Commissioners announced. The Stiers concern was low bidder on the job, the engineer department said.

Advantages Of Delay

By Mark Sullivan

Prolongation

PROLONGATION is, to a war strained world, probably the least welcome condition to look forward to. Much of distressed humanity is in a mood which feels, "anything but this." Yet there are reasons why prolongation for a time would be the best next stage.

True, prolongation is costly. A prolonged state of readiness for war, including the interruption of trade and industry everywhere is, as respects material things, as costly as war itself. Material manufactured for war and not used is as great an economic waste as material used. But the all-important difference is that prolonged readiness for war costs no human lives.

Consider the possible outcomes, other than prolongation of the present condition. Suppose Hitler were allowed to have his way, to take whatever he chooses to take, without restraint—just march into Poland and seize what he wants. That would be no outcome at all, for every experience the world has had with Hitler teaches that he would merely go on to repeat the present situation with respect to victims additional to Poland.

Alternative to that, suppose Hitler were allowed, by agreement, to have some of what he wants, even all of what he now says he wants, coupled with stipulations about the future safety of Poland. That, again, would be no outcome at all. That would be just another Munich. All we know of Hitler warns us that agreements, promises, mean nothing to him.

German People Must Be Impressed

CONSIDER EVEN the conference that some propose, a conference of all the great nations of Europe, even a world conference, which should deal with everything Hitler has ever said he wanted, anywhere, including the colonies Germany lost in the Great War. That would be nothing unless it included agreement by all the other nations to unite in restraint of Hitler whenever Hitler invents new demands. And even such an arrangement would be so much like the League of Nations as to cause us to doubt its effectiveness.

Consider a conference which dealt with reduction of armament, either alone or in connection with the other issues—reduction of armament by Germany and corresponding reduction by the other nations. Such a conference would hold out some promise, for this is the one conference in which the German people—the German people as distinct from Hitler—would have a stake. Presumably the German people do not like war nor the burden of excessive preparedness for war. The German people, as distinct from Hitler, might help to support an agreement for reduction of armament, and might help to police such an agreement within Germany.

It is the German people who must be reached and impressed. A thousand newspaper dispatches, a hundred radio commentators, and all of us in common talk, use the word "Hitler" as if that word were synonymous with Germany, with the whole 80 millions of German people. Yet Adolfh Hitler as one human being is as much a mere "forked radish" as Carlyle said any one human being is. The only thing that makes Hitler formidable is the willingness of the German people to do what Hitler says. That submissiveness of the German people to Hitler's will is the heart of the whole world situation.

Germany Suffers Greatest Strain

THE WORLD'S travail can be ended only by the elimination of Hitler one way or another; either as England ended Napoleon, by an incredibly costly war; or as the German people themselves eliminated Kaiser Wilhelm at the end of the Great War.

It may be that, to eliminate Hitler, the world, including the German people, must pay the price of war. But there is at least a possibility that the German people may be disillusioned by prolongation of the present status. Prolongation of readiness for war is, paradoxically, a greater strain on nerves, and ultimately would be a greater agency of disillusionment to the German people than the act of plunging into war.

A people who have been fed by Hitler with easy conquest after conquest—occupation of the Rhine, seizure of Austria, acquisition of Sudetenland, seizure of the rest of Czecho-Slovakia, treaty with Russia—were almost certainly in a state of mind to expect that Poland would come with equal ease. Disillusion may have already begun.

The strain of the present status is greater upon the German people than upon any of the other nations. It is only in Germany that food rationing has been put in practice. The other hardships of readiness are greater in Germany than in the other nations. In a war of nerves, Germany is at a disadvantage.

Every day the present status lasts, more and more of world opinion lines up against Germany; more and more Germany is likely to see former allies, such as Italy and Japan, fall away or become faint-hearted.

Prolongation may seem to a harassed world hard to endure; but prolongation works toward the best outcome.

Underwriters Raise Mediterranean Rates

London, Aug. 28 (AP).—Premiums for the Mediterranean were increased and there were no quotations for the Baltic or for Murmansk, Soviet Russia, in a new schedule of war risks insurance issued by London underwriters. Some of the increases were over 100 per cent. Rates exclude German and Italian ships.

Imponderables

By Barnet Nover

This Time And Last Year

JUST A YEAR ago the Czecho-Slovak government presented to Konrad Henlein Lord Runciman's first plan for the settlement of the Sudeten German question. The lamb was being prepared for the slaughter that was to take place one month later.

The London Times editorial of September 7, urging the cession of the Sudetenland to Germany, revealed the shape of things to come. Two days later, in his violent Nuremberg speech, Hitler raised the cry of "self-determination." Three days after that Premier Chamberlain flew to Berchtesgaden. Czecho-Slovakia's fate was sealed. All that remained was the diplomatic funeral to be given the war-born republic at Munich on the thirtieth.

IN SOME RESPECTS the crisis of today resembles that of last year. The Nazi campaign against Poland has paralleled that against the Czechs. There has been the same crescendo of abuse and intimidation, the same threat to use force if Germany's desires are not peacefully satisfied. Armies are again mobilized and Europe once more teeters on the edge of the abyss.

This time, perhaps, nothing will prevent it from going over. But in any calculation of possibilities it is well to remember that similar as the situation today appears to be with that of a year ago the differences are even greater. And whatever slight hope of peace remains in Europe today is the product of those differences.

To discover these differences it is well to survey the varying roles of the principal actors in the world-shaking drama now unfolding to a climax.

POLAND AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA. For months before Munich, Czecho-Slovakia was under constant pressure to compromise her differences with Germany over the Sudeten issue. She did. She agreed to the Runciman mission. The Prague government took Runciman's advise. And when Hitler refused to compromise, Czecho-Slovakia was forced to submit to the cession of the Sudetenland.

Poland has been under no such pressure regarding Danzig and the Corridor. She has stood firm. The virulent Nazi press campaign, the successive stages of German mobilization now reaching a point far exceeding that reached a year ago, even the imminent threat of invasion have not caused her to budge. If she finally agrees to satisfy all or part of Hitler's demands it will be of her own doing and not because of any threat of desertion by her allies.

FRANCE. The French position is now crystal clear. The French do not want war. Nobody else wants war, for that matter. But the French have decided that there must not be another Munich, at least not of the kind which occurred last year. Negotiations of the Polish problem? yes. Capitulation? Absolutely no.

This does not mean that a settlement of the Polish problem is wholly out of the question. Given a more reasonable atmosphere and some workable compromise might be achieved. But the French insist that any such compromise must be such as to meet the wishes of the Poles themselves. In the meantime the French are prepared to go to war should that be necessary to fulfill their pledges to Poland.

GREAT BRITAIN. The British position is precisely that of the French.

During these last weeks there has not been the slightest indication of any weakening in the British position. There is no weakening today. There has been no Berchtesgaden flight, no Godesberg sequel. On the contrary, the initiative for a Munich settlement was taken this time not by Premier Chamberlain, but by Chancellor Hitler. It was he who late last week summoned the British and French ambassadors to inform them as to just what he wants of Poland. And the British negative, while differing in form from that transmitted to Hitler by Daladier, does not differ in substance.

GERMANY. Last year the Nazi regime was convinced that neither Great Britain nor France would fight on behalf of Czecho-Slovakia. The tone of a powerful section of the British and French press, the reluctance of British statesmen to make any binding pledges, the dispatch of the Runciman mission, the Times editorial—these were straws in the wind. Hitler was right.

This time Hitler cannot be so sure. His trump card was the Russian pact. This was the bombshell that was to blow all obstacles—the British and French promises to Poland, Polish resolution, the peace front—sky high. It was a tremendous gamble played for tremendous stakes. But so far it has proved to be a very expensive dud. The British did not capitulate; if anything they stiffened their backs. France remained firm. Poland failed to cave in. For the first time in his career Hitler had definitely to consider the possibility of fighting a war and one in which the odds would not be overwhelmingly on the side of Germany.

So far he has not shrunk even from that possibility. Indeed, he has even publicly committed himself to fight for Danzig and the Corridor if he cannot have it any other way. Instead of reducing his demands he has increased them. But that may mean one of two things. It may mean that he feels the jig is up for the Third Reich unless this last barrier to German hegemony in eastern Europe is overthrown. But it may also mean that he has no choice left but to wage the war of nerves to the last possible moment.

It is extraordinarily significant that whereas last year he began the assault on Czecho-Slovakia sotto voce, as it were, and ended it in a calculated paroxysm of frenzy, this time, as the crisis has progressed, he has lowered his voice. His letter to Daladier, for all the uncompromising nature of the demands contained in it, was couched in a reasonable tone. War would end his unbroken record of peaceful victories. It might end his regime.

ITALY. One factor which Hitler cannot leave out of any long-range calculations is that he may go into the war without allies and even without friends. Italy does not want war. Japan and Spain and Hungary have been embittered by the Fuehrer's brusque abandonment of the anti-Comintern pact. Yugoslavia, closing its ranks, proposes to stay neutral. Turkey stands by her alliances with Great Britain and France. There is, of course, Russia. But Stalin may have more than one double-cross in his capacious kit bag.

It is not surprising that as the crisis has progressed Italy's efforts to achieve a peaceful solution have steadily increased. A constant stream of plans, proposals and formulas have poured out from Rome. Mussolini would like nothing better than another Munich with himself as the impresario.

He may succeed in bringing about a compromise even if it won't be another Munich. But if he fails Italy's plight would be parlous. The possible Italian gain of a war fought for a German objective are remote; the losses are likely to be immediate and only too tangible.

IMPONDERABLES. The marching armies, the strong notes, the irrevocable decisions, the circumstance that neither side can retreat now very far without a catastrophic loss of prestige—all these things add up to war. But the imponderables provide a glimmer of hope for peace. There is the fact that the balance of power is shifting away from the axis and particularly away from Germany and that Hitler probably realizes this. There is the sudden and bitter awakening of the German people to the terrible realities which the regime has so carefully kept from them hitherto. You end wars with bread cards, said Gen. von Blomberg, you don't begin with them that way. Rationing is already taking place in Germany. The gong of doom has not yet sounded. Who, but Hitler, knows whether it will be struck?

Abdell's Counsel Ask Gov. Price to Disregard Letter

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—Attorneys for J. C. Abdell said today they had written Governor Price advising him to ignore the "Lola mae Dorman" letter in his consideration of a defense plea for commutation of Abdell's death sentence for the slaying of his wife.

The letter purportedly written by the late Mrs. Dorman, an Abdell neighbor, to Abdell after he was committed to the penitentiary, said Mrs. Abdell was alive at 11 a. m. on the day of her death, which was an hour and a half after the time the State contended she was slain.

Ivor A. Page, jr., who with W. H. Venable is Abdell's counsel, said they had advised the Govenor to disregard the letter until they had completed an investigation of it because they believed it not authentic.

Cork, Aug. 28 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley said he would spend several days in Ireland despite the crisis. He arrived here today.

Norma Shearer to Sail From France Today

Hollywood, Aug. 28 (AP).—Film Star Norma Shearer, in a transatlantic telephone conversation with her representative in Hollywood, Russell Birdwell, today reported she reached Paris last night from Antibes in the south of France.

Unable to obtain reservations on any American boats she had made reservations on the French Liner Champlain, scheduled to sail tomorrow if the government permits.

Birdwell reported Charles Boyer informed him he had not yet been ordered to report for duty.

Trailer Divorce

("Dallas, Tex.—Judge Paine L. Bush granted a divorce here to a woman who asked it on the ground she had lived five years in a trailer."—News item)

Judge—So you wish a divorce?

Wife—Wishing is no word for it, yerroner.

Judge—For what reason?

Wife—For the reason I am exhausted, bruised, battered, frazzled, worn, tired and . . .

Judge—Aren't you covering a lot of territory?

Judge—What is a trailer wife?

Wife—A trailer wife is a wife who spends her married life trying to make an omelette going around a curve.

Judge—Do you mean you live in a trailer?

Wife—No, I mean I'm through living in one!

Judge—How long has this been going on?

Wife—Five years. And it don't seem a day over 100.

Judge—Did your husband force you to do this?

Wife—Well, at first it seemed a good idea. The open road . . . the gypsy trail . . . and all that sort of thing.

Judge—When did you first make up your mind you didn't like it?

Wife—The day a truck bumped us just when I was passing my husband a plate of hot soup.

Judge—What happened?

Wife—I was six months convincing him the truck driver wasn't a friend.

Judge—Were there other unhappy experiences?

Wife—You should have been there the time we drove in and spent three days in a lot full of second-hand cars thinking we were in a trailer camp!

Judge—Do you imply that there is no happiness in trailer life?

Wife—Judge, did you ever try washing your face on a downgrade full of sharp turns?

Judge—Did you ever complain to your husband that you were unhappy?

Wife—Every 300 miles.

Judge—What did he say?

Wife—He couldn't hear me because of the dishes rattling.

Judge—Didn't he ever offer to provide a stationary home.

Wife—Yes, but his idea of a stationary home was parking somewhere long enough to change the oil.

Judge—Did you ever threaten to leave him?

Wife—Often.

Judge—Why didn't you do so?

Wife—We were never in any part of the country where I knew the way home alone.

Judge—Is your husband here?

Wife—No.

Judge—Why not?

Wife—This is the second day of this hearing and he never could stay in one spot that long.

Judge—Decree granted!

'Golden Boy' Still Packs A Knockout Wallop!

'Happy Ending' Less Harmful Than Usual; Paramount Beats Gun With Crisis Newsreel; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

COLUMBIA'S PICTURIZATION of "Golden Boy" adheres with rigid fidelity to the major movements of Clifford Odets' gripping stage play—until the closing footages of the last reel. At this juncture, the producers have seen fit to append a happy ending, instead of the stage's tragic one, just as was done in the case of Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset."

BELL

This sop to a cross section of American exhibitor preference, while it has the effect of weakening the psychological study of bafflement and futility in an ambitious but bewildered youth, which was the basic theme of Odets' original work, in no way impairs the power of the play as commanding entertainment. The story of the lad who might have been a great violinist, but who chose the prize ring instead, until it was too late, continues to be a fascinating excursion into the lives of New York's submerged tenth, still punctuated with an abundance of comedy, some rousing ring bouts, a tangled love affair and an old father's anguish. Those who have never seen "Golden Boy" on the boards will, of course, be unaware of any alteration in its climax and denouement; those who have, probably will not resent the change that has been made in the last few feet of the film.

The substitution of a happy ending for Mr. Odets' logical but grim termination of his drama was not an arbitrary dictum conceived on the Columbia lot. The story goes that after viewing the Group Theater production in New York several times, Director Rouben Mamoulian journeyed leisurely back to Hollywood, making a systematic, cross-country canvass of motion picture exhibitors, big and small, "on his own," en route. The results of his survey were so preponderantly on the side of the happy ending that the wishes of the men who would have to "sell the picture to the public" were reluctantly acceded to.

Mr. Mamoulian, incidentally, did a masterful job in transcribing the adaptation by Louis Meltzer, Daniel Taradash, Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman into celluloid. He had a splendid cast to assist him, and, as I remember the play, never missed a trick.

Huge interest will center in William Hilden, the young "unknown," who appears in the title role. He plays like a veteran and, although his wrists look a triffe thin, fights like one too. Then there are Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Sam Levine, Ed Brophy, Joseph Calleia and Jee J. Cobb among the front runners in a long list of competent players.

Lee Cobb is the only member of the Group Theater Company to be proselyted to the film. At yesterday afternoon's preview, he "stole the picture" now and again the role of the heart-broken father, just as he swiped most of the scenes in which he appeared on the stage.

"Golden Boy" ought to give the Earle Theater another pack-jammed week when it opens there on Friday.

Had there been a few more hours in a day already overcrowded, we should have sat tight in the Warner Brothers' projection room yesterday afternoon and watched the unfurling of a special Paramount newsreel issue that had just arrived and is now on the screens of the Earle and Metropolitan theaters. This is no ordinary news release, but a specially made photographic record of the leading events in the present European crisis that only arrived in this country on Sunday afternoon on the Imperial Airways flying boat Cabot from Southampton, England. The films show the emergency defense preparations in Britain, France and Poland; the arrival of Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop in Berlin after signing of the Russo-German pact and first pictures of Fuehrer Hitler's private airplane. In addition to this comprehensive foreign coverage, the two-reel special goes at some length into the American viewpoint and the activities of President Roosevelt since his return from his curtailed vacation. Paramount "jumped the gun" on this one. Its next news release was not due until tomorrow.

The bulkiest piece of mail that bowed the shoulders of the postman yesterday was a copy of the Motion Picture Almanac, the 1939-40 year book published by Martin Quigley, publisher also of the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the industry's trade journals.

Having scarcely broken the wrapper, I am not sure whether or not it is a reflection of "hard time" in filmdom that this year's volume contains only 1,182 pages, as against last's year's 1,250, but I am confident that the new book still will prove its immense value to this desk by providing the most complete compendium of invaluable information to be found between two covers. My thanks to Mr. Quigley and his associates for my copy. I wouldn't know how to get along without it.

So Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, is kicking the calendar over the heart again—not to mention the boys and girls of the drayma desks. Wired advice is to the effect that "In Name Only," the much-discussed picture costarring Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis, will open its Washington engagement on Fifteenth street tomorrow evening at 5:45 o'clock. It is in this picture, by the way, that little Peggy Ann Garner, Washington's tiny actress, has her most important screen assignment to date as Miss Lombard's small daughter. Three weeks at Radio City Music Hall.

Having won first place in the "Going Native" popularity vote last week with her Accordion Septet, Sylvia Kaplowitz now is World's Fairing in New York with her husband and sons. She writes that the family are doing all of the amusements and governmental exhibits while she is "just sitting." After all, four shows a day for a week is four shows a day for a week—especially when you're lugging a young piano around on your shoulder.

Personal aside to Bob Denton, of Paramount: Thanks a million for the nosegay, along with a mess of congratulations.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 28.—My young friend, Polan Banks, the author who married Amelie Baruch two years ago, isn't letting his marriage to an heiress affect his work. He has written three books in two years and a fourth is on the way. You are asking what that has to do with the movies. Well, plenty, for this last week he sold the film rights to two of his novels and a third is in negotiation. "January Heights" has been bought by Warner Brothers for Bette Davis and Mariam Hopkins. Darryl Zanuck read the galleys of "Manhattan Holiday" and immediately sent the ambitious Banks a check.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Now about his "The Man From Cooks." Metro is negotiating for it and so is an Anglo-French company, which wants it for John Lodge. I feel sure Metro will get it and if they do it will be another "Lloyds of London," for it tells the story of the man who established the famous travel bureau. I would call the past week a very busy one for Polan, who, despite the heat, it in New York, hard at work.

A bit that stands out in my memory is Wendy Hiller's cockney father in "Pygmalion," played by Wilfred Lawson. If you saw the picture, you must remember him. He is in America, playing in "The First Rebel" at RKO. After he finishes his movie, he will go to New York for rehearsals in "Madame, Will You Walk?" the play Sidney Howard was preparing for production when he met a tragic death. The Playwright's Group, of which Howard was a member, is producing it and rehearsals are set for the middle of September, with an opening in Boston scheduled for October.

Young Leonard Neubauer, in the trailer department at Warner Brothers, read about the surrender of Lepke and sat right down at his typewriter and wrote a story about the exciting details, calling it "Waiting for Lepke." Bryan Foy read the young man's essay and immediately got busy, putting Humphrey Bogart in the role of the criminal and commissioning Lew Seiler to direct. Just how the Hays office, who put its foot down on the Dillinger story, will react is another question. Lepke is in the same class as the late public enemy No. 1.

Linda Ware's own story wouldn't make a bad movie. A year ago she was an unknown. Now she gets one of the most coveted engagements in Hollywood, when she sings in the Hollywood Bowl September 8, with Leopold Stokowski directing and a symphony orchestra playing her accompaniment in a series of classical numbers. Being directed by Walter Damrosch and Stokowski is something any young singer would consider the fulfillment of her dreams. Whether the 14-year-old girl will succeed in the movies, I don't know. She needs a lot of training, for she is very self-conscious and, as yet, a much better singer than an actress.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Mary Healy, one of the prettiest girls at the Darryl Zanuck barn dance, spends most of her evenings with Franchot Tone. The Jack Warners brought 20 guests to the Zanuck party in an old fashioned bus; Binnie Barnes' green sun bonnet, with matching dress, was so cute, she says she will wear it again.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

By Jack Haley, screen and radio comedian, who is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.

Dear Leonard Lyons:

I DON'T KNOW whether this is flattering or not, but out in California I used to get up at 7 o'clock every morning and mutter Celtic to myself in a falsetto voice, waking up the house. This was odd, because I had never learned Celtic, or anything else, back home in South Boston. My mutterings annoyed my wife and our guests so much that I was straitjacketed, taped and carried to a little man with a beard who had been to Vienna, and was, of course, a psychoanalyst.

HE MADE ME fill in numerous questionnaires, took my heart-beat, my pulse-beat, the $35.67 in my pockets, and said I had a queer complex, a new one he had never met socially before. After a litmus paper test, in which I ruined the works by swallowing the litmus, he X-rayed my stomach and found it full of chewed-up columns by Leonard Lyons.

"Ah," said the good doctor, "you have a Leonard Lyons complex! A rare thing, indeed."

I WAS SCARED, but the doctor socked me on the back eight times, asked me to come back a week from Wednesday, and threw me out of the back door. A kindly milkman hauled me on his truck to the aviation field, and I boarded a plane for New York, and quiet, the quiet I needed for this vital task. I conquered my fears.

"BUCK UP, OLD MAN," I sez to myself, "think of your ancestors, think of your courage, think of the nice new clippings you'll soon be able to paste in the Christmas 'memory book' that Aunt Agatha from Brookline gave you!"

ALMOST AT the same time I got into an act with the cryptic title of the "Lightner Girls and Alexander." That gave Haley the boost Haley needed. For after that I went into "Around the Town," by Herman J. Mankiewicz and S. Jay Kaufman. Then the Century Roof Revue with Julius Tannen and Harry Fox. Then "Gay Paree," where Barbara Stanwyck worked in the chorus. Then the next edition of that show, with Chic Sale.

THE MOVIES were sprouting voices then, and I came in and just as suddenly went out, going to work in the Chicago company of "Good News." Right after that Lawrence Schwab got Buddy de Slyva to write "Follow Through" for me. "Button Up Your Overcoat" was my hit there. I also remember the opening night of "Follow Through" because Jack jr., picked that date for his first appearance. Then, to skip parental love, there was "Take a Chance," with me singing "You're an Old Smoothie."

Then Hollywood, and pictures, pictures, pictures! (Also radio, radio, radio!). In my newest picture, "The Wizard of Oz," I guess I'm getting back to the 6-year-old stage in my costume of "The Tin Woodman." I got a kick out of doing it, but how it would have wowed 'em at that Boston church social!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 28.—The stars up above had an extra twinkle when new star Gloria Jean made her first appearance in "The Under Pup" which came in like a lamb, without fanfare, but ended as a lion. I've never heard such a roar of applause at end of any picture. Gloria's 11, not beautiful, crooked teeth—in fact she lost one, they didn't stop to replace it. She takes top notes like a lark and what a trouper. No wonder kids outsell grownups. When you realize this is the first acting she's ever done, and she doesn't make one false move. Right in their trouping with her is Virginia Weidler and a new team of comics, kids Kenneth Brown and Billy Lenhart. They must play the Katzenjammer kids. The cast isn't good—it's super. It was fun having C. Aubrey Smith let his whiskers grow and check his gold braid. Why he almost played an Irishman! Director Dick Wallace hadn't any children of his own, so adopted two. But his touches are so deft, I'm sure he's learned more about kids than mothers know. They've thrown Irving Thalberg's cloak around so many shoulders it's almost worn out. I'd like to place the remnants where they belong—around Joe Pasternak. He's never missed.

HOPPER

During a lull in a story conference with Eddie Cantor about 40 mothers, Eddie coyly said to Harry Rapf: "By the way, I have a little skit here I did myself." And brought forth a 3-inch script. The 40 mothers were thrown in the ash can. They'll use Eddie's original.

We've overlooked a very lucrative gold mine by not selling stories to radio. Miss Williams, who created her own job at Columbia, has sold 22 stories which they've done, to the Lux Theater.

At this rate, Law Ayres will soon be caught up on his reading. In "Remember" they have a library of classics for a set. Lew snitches a book every night, returns it next morning before property man catches him.

The very first shot on "Green Hell" was held up by—of all things, a woodpecker. After two hours tracked him down in the ventilator, took another half hour to blow him out!

Did you know that Warner's "On Your Toes" was originally meant for Fred Astaire? Bosses couldn't see Fred in anything but top hat, so were about to forget the whole thing, when along came Zorina and did they do a rewrite job? She left for Europe without retakes, is expected back soon for another Goldwyn opus. On her toes, of course.

In Hollywood, like any small town, newcomer gets all the fuss. The Doug Fairbanks, jrs., were posing all over the place the other night when along came Cobina Wright, jr., with Cesar Romero and Cobina, sr., with Herman Sortorius, New York bachelor, and the heartless camera boys left Doug flat.

One of the nicest parties here was that held by the electricians at Universal for their chief, Fred Graves, who, after 20 years' work at the studio gets a two-week vacation with pay. But he'll add two months to that himself. The boys brought him presents, even a box of flowers, toasted him in hot coffee and had a rip-snorting time. A happy holiday, Fred. You've earned it, which is a mastery of understatement.

Alex Steinart's birthday party for house guest Mike Bartlett was quite a musical affair, with Rathbones, the Cordy Hills, Jack Morgans, and Louis Leightons in attendance. And Alex got first-hand news about the Brian Aherne wedding.

Golden Boy Holden is testing at Warners for "Invisible Stripes." So is Minnie Dupree.

Producers Towne and Baker have discovered that job has its worries. Gene casually suggested moving a camera back for a scene. Production department screamed: "That'll cost you $5,000." Another time Tim Holt was to carry a rifle through a strange island. "Rifle costs $12.95," groaned Baker, "couldn't we just write in a bit more courage for him, instead?"

On "Flying Deuces" script called for burning a coat. Cast, crew and thousands of dollars worth of equipment all over the place, but when cameras began to roll and match was put to coat, wardrobe man shouted: "You can't burn that. It cost $2.50."

Mary Brian Is Bright Star Of 'Rebound'

Lends Color and Lift To Well-Played Comedy at Olney

By Nelson B. Bell

There is an unusual and happy affinity between players and play at the Olney Theater this week that converts "Rebound" into a gay and sprightly evening of summertime entertainment. Which is to say that the casting has been so adroitly managed as to create an almost constant spirit of spontaneity and verve and the impression that those behind the footlights are enjoying themselves quite as much as those out front.

This is a fortunate circumstance, for Donald Ogden Stuart's three-act comedy-romance is a light and frothy item that requires precisely that type of treatment to avoid being hoist by its own petard. There is nothing more deadly than a comedy of bright and brisk conversation stripped of its potential fun by laggard interpretation. Last night's cast at the Olney was on its toes, in a manner of speaking, from first curtain to last and did much to disguise the gossamer quality of Mr. Stuart's thistledown dialogue.

The whole merry charade concerns itself with a group of literate and wealthy young people—and a few of their elders—who are not getting themselves married as speedily as seems the smart thing in their set. So too many of the charming ladies marry too many of the wrong "catches" and hie away on their ostensibly blissful honeymoons. By an odd quirk of fate and itineraries, they all meet in Paris and repent their haste as precipitately as they originally had taken their vows. Returning home, their lives take on slightly truer perspectives ad compatibility finally is done a good turn.

Mary Brian a Real Star

The lines and situations are thoroughly amusing principally because the nimble players cast in the pivotal roles make them so. The ringleader in this fortunate conspiracy is Mary Brian, star of screen, stage and radio, making her first appearance at Olney and winning immediate favor as a breezy and charming young actress with a fine gift of sly humor, youthful vivacity and an evident ability to cope with the play's few serious moments as well as with its many flippant ones. Ever since her Wendy in the screen version of "Peter Pan," Mary Brian has been admired by Washington audiences for her many ingenuous qualities. She will be so more than ever after "Rebound."

The burden of the play's success, however, is not borne entirely by Miss Brian. William Bishop and Lex Lindsay, as the two vacillating bridegrooms; Fred Sherman, the more or less innocent bystander; Jeanette Chinley and Alice MacKenzie, as the lovely ladies in the case, and Mabel Paige and Richard Irving, as Sara Jaffery's estranged parents, all contribute notably and nobly to the zest of the performance.

Mystery-Farce Opens Run at Cross Roads

'Post Road' Is Final Offering of 'Barn' Group's Season

Last night the Cross Roads Theater presented its seventh and final play of the season, "Post Road," by Wilbur Daniel Steele and Norma Mitchell. This mystery-comedy is highly entertaining and with the spurt in temperature that September always brings might well be something to excite the wanderlust.

Surely there are merriment and mystery in this fable of a tourist home on the Boston Post Road and the Cross Roaders play it pleasantly enough to whip up both laughter and spontaneous applause.

To many the story is not a new one, for it has been played in this city by both Lucille Watson and Charlotte Greenwood. It concerns the respectable home of Emily Madison, which hard times have forced that spinster lady to use as a hostel for paying guests of the road. One of her most faithful patrons is a gospel-spouting, penurious evangelical, whose holier-than-thou attitude frightens away more than one ordinary traveler. One who is not frightened, albeit, is a suave doctor who brings with him a society girl patient, a trained nurse and an efficient chauffer. When the girl's screams alarm the household, the doctor comes forth with a new-born baby.

That seems to settle things for all except Miss Emily Madison, sharp-witted, brittle-tongued spinster that she is. It would spoil your fun to discover what is really going on under everyone's noses.

The Cross Roads group does honorably by all this, with a large company, headed by Ruth May, as the quick-thinking owner of the establishment. While Miss May was faultless last night in her lines, her performance will no doubt be enhanced as the engagement goes on by a clearer reading. Charles Grunwell was particularly adept as the gallant doctor and George Hall was better than good as our heroine's dim-witted brother-in-law. Peggy Mansfield again proved her versatility as the whining sister. Ted Field's preacher was swell.

Mr. Glassgold's direction was well within the spirit of the play, with its alternating moments of comedy and mystery neatly balanced. Mimi Norton was an effective "patient," although it was unfortunate that she was forced to double as another character. Fred Draper, Marion Hanney, Mildred Beach, Nancy Hutchison, Robert Coren and Gene Murphy completed the cast of this comedy, which will remain a fortnight to assure you that summer and seasonable diversion still are to be found at the Cross Roads.

Dr. Burton and Judge Somerville Meet for First Time Since Oslo Breakfast

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Monday tea of the American Association of University Women, held at the clubhouse, 1634 I street, yesterday, was the occasion of a reunion for two members who recently returned from abroad. They had not seen each other since they met by chance and breakfasted together in the Continental Hotel at Oslo, Norway, a month ago. They were Dr. Henrietta Burton, who returned last week, and Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, who arrived home in July.

Dr. Burton, who visited the Scandinavian countries and other parts of Europe, after attending the conference of the Associated Farm Women of the World in London, said nothing looked finer to her than the Statue of Liberty as she sailed into New York Harbor last week. She and Judge Howorth talked over their surprise meeting in Oslo, when the latter was on her way to Tronheim, Norway, to attend, as delegate from this country, the sessions of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Judge Howorth is newly elected president of the Washington club and for the past two years has served as program co-ordinator of the national federation.

Mrs. Olesen to Return Soon

Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W., is expected to return from her summer home in Wisconsin the middle of September. Dr. Olesen has already left there to assume his new duties in New York, and Mrs. Olesen will join him later in the season.

Mrs. Richard Hogue, past president of the branch, is home from Colorado, where she and Mr. Hogue spent several weeks following her trip to the exposition in San Francisco with Mrs. Olesen at the close of the A. A. U. W. convention in Denver.

Another club member who has returned from an extended trip is Miss Margaret Cook, special events chairman of the junior section, who has been away two months and a half. She went to Pasadena as delegate from the Washington Alumnae chapter Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority, to the national conclave. She made the trip by way of the Panama Canal, later visited in Los Angeles, went to San Francisco by boat, then on to Oregon and Washington and returned by train, stopping in Salt Lake City, Chicago and Pittsburgh. Mrs. William Henderson, adviser to the University of Maryland chapter of the sorority, who also attended, returned earlier in the month.

Miss Murray Presents Program

The program at yesterday's tea was presented by one of the gifted musicians in the club, Miss Catherine Murray, pianist. She played the Chopin nocturne in F sharp major, MacDowell's "Danse Andelouse," and Liebech's "Music Box." Among the guests was her mother, Mrs. P. H. Murray.

Miss Virginia Kinnard, chairman of the summer teas, introduced the program and Miss Helen Louise White, hostess for the day, poured tea.

Among others present were Dr. Edith Allen, chairman of the art section, with examples of pottery work to show those members who are interested in starting such a group at the club in the future; Mrs. Charlotte Hankin, Miss Susan Richmond, mathematics instructor at Western High School; Mrs. Lawrence Radford, chairman of the membership committee; Mrs. S. L. Danielson, of the tea committee; Miss Jacqueline Pringle, chairman of the players group; Miss Agnes Dillon, Mrs. Rex Smith and her guest, Mrs. Elizabeth FitzGerald, of Seattle; Mrs. Colin Whittaker, recording secretary of the club; Mrs. William Harllee, Mrs. Shelby Faulkner, Mrs. Ena Thompson, Mrs. Gerald Toye, Miss Zoda Greenlee, Mrs. Thomas Heitz and Miss Myrl Rhine.

General Federation of Women's Clubs Acquaints Members With Headquarters

MEMBERS of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will feel at home hereafter when they come to Washington and visit the national headquarters, 1734 N street. The center page of this month's issue of The Clubwoman GFWC, of which Miss Vella A. Winner is the editor, is devoted to clubhouse pictures, showing members of the staff at work in their offices.

Just in case some Washington clubwomen have not been to headquarters lately, here is the Who's Who of "1734." It begins, of course, with the president, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., who resides there during her three-year term of office and has been sticking to her post all summer despite her discomfort in the heat of the Capital.

With her in the picture is Mrs. Thalia S. Woods, her secretary, who has handled the 13,009 pieces of mail which have come to the national president in the past year, in addition to hundreds of telegrams.

Miss Winner is shown with her secretary, Miss Eleanor Meyer. Others in the double-page spread are Mrs. Edith R. Kidwell, acting director of research and club service, a department which provides reference material for programs of federated clubs throughout the country; Mrs. Rose A. Willgoose, manager of headquarters house; Mrs. Mildred Allers, one of the secretaries; Mrs. Angie V. Miller, who keeps the books; Miss Caroline Galvin, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Schroyer, who says "good morning" at the telephone switchboard; Mrs. Hilda Sollars, who operates the addressograph; Mrs. Catherine Ford, research assistant; Miss Jean Preston, Mrs. Edna Farrell, Mrs. Mary Gary, secretaries in various departments; Miss Katherine Jones, of the research department; Mrs. Edna Grillo, head of the addressograph department; Miss Lorraine Sternberg, who catalogues music and art exhibits supplied to the clubs, and Miss Abbie Kennedy, a research assistant.

There are also two men and a boy on the staff, Raymond J. Kaldenbach, manager of the headquarters printing; Dudley Pierce, a college student, who is night operator of the switchboard, and Dennis Dorgan, a boy, who is on duty after school, gathering the mail and doing errands.

MRS. WILLIAM S. SPENCER, chairman of canteen for the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross, arranged a luncheon given at the chapter house yesterday in honor of Mrs. Howard R. Krinbill, retiring chairman of the motor corps, who leaves this week to reside in New York City. Mrs. L. E. Harris, acting chairman, was among those present. Other guests were members of the staff.

ONE OF WELLESLEY COLLEGE'S most loyal alumnae is Dorothy Pletcher Howerth, who has done publicity for the Washington alumnae club for several seasons. She has recently been motoring through New England accompanied by her daughter, Shirley, and stopped at Wellesley to show her the campus and register her for 1945!

MRS. FRANK M. HOADLEY of Chevy Chase, past president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, with Mr. Hoadley, is in Ocean City, N. J., until after Labor Day.

Club to Award Scholarship

The M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club will award a scholarship to the Woods Commercial School Friday night at the time of its installation of officers, at the home of the president, Mrs. Erich W. Schwartze, 1438 Minnesota avenue southeast.

The recipient of the scholarship, first to be awarded by the year-old club, is Leone Hodges, 625 E street southeast. The award is being made largely on the basis of the recipient's likeness to Miss Brackenridge in her unselfish character, according to Mrs. Schwartze. The club, founded to honor the memory of the Texas clubwoman and philanthropist for whom it is named, plans to consider not only the academic promise of those to whom it will make annual awards, but also the qualities of unselfish service and friendliness which were outstanding in Miss Brackenridge's life.

Next year the club hopes to award a memorial scholarship at the Texas College of Women, of which Miss Brackenridge was for many years a regent.

Mrs. Schwartze, the club founder, will be installed Friday for her second term as president.

Miss Trumbull Back

Miss Marian Trumbull is spending a few days in Washington after a visit on Long Island with Lady Lindsay. She expects to leave later for another brief vacation.

Mrs. McNutt To Be Guest At Luncheon

Many Prominent In Affairs Here to Pay Honor to Her

Many women prominent in organization activities in the District, will be guests Thursday at a luncheon honoring Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Federal Security Administrator, and her daughter, Louise, to be gievn by Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper. Mrs. Harper and Mrs. McNutt became acquainted through their mutual interest in the American Legion Auxiliary, of which the former is past national treasurer and past president of the D. C. department.

The luncheon will be at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women at 12:30.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Frank T. Hines, wife of the Administrator of Foreign Affairs; Mrs. Henry Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State and also Democratic National Committeewoman for California; Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Jones A. Drain, wife of the past national commander of the American Legion, a position Mr. McNutt once held, and Mrs. W. N. Morell, wife of the president of the Federal Bar Association.

Heads of Veterans' Groups Included

Also present will be Mrs. Judith Harmel, national vice president of the Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary; Mrs. F. W. Franke, past national president of the Women's Overseas Service League; Judge Lucy S. Howorth, of the Board of Veterans Appeals, who is president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington; Mrs. Fannie B. Meeks, president of the Gold Star Mothers Association; Mrs. James T. Brady, wife of a past department commander of the American Legion; Mrs. William T. Slattery, wife of the present commander; Mrs. Laura S. Brown, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Edith Landvoigt, president of the D. C. salon, Forty and Eight; Mrs. E. Louise Warren, national historian, and Mrs. Helen McCabe, national chairman of public relations for the Forty and Eight; Mrs. Gertrude Scott, Mrs. E. S. Bettelheim, wife of the national adjutant of the Military Order of the World War; Mrs. Philip Dodson, Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, past department president of the Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Julius Peyser.

Mrs. Justin Miller Among Guests

Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, Mrs. Justin Miller, wife of the associate justice of the Court of Appeals; Mrs. Watson B. Miller, Mrs. John Thomas Taylor, Mrs. Paul Griffith and Mrs. Fred G. Fraser, all of whom are wives of national committee chairmen of the American Legion; Mrs. Virginia McCarthy, president of Sergeant Jasper Unit; Mrs. Clay Keene Miller, treasurer of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club; Mrs. Roby MacDonald and Mrs. Helen Ware.

Nell V. Smith, President Of Writers' Club, Returns

One of the American tourists who spent a pleasant summer in Europe and came back before being officially sent home, is Nell V. Smith (Mrs. William Walter Smith), president of the Professional Writers Club. She returned to Washington ten days ago, after almost two months in Europe, including a brief stop in Germany.

Preparations for war and precautions in event of it were evident everywhere except in the Scandinavian countries, she said. It was the general opinion, however, that Hitler would not strike until September. The date on which action has often been predicted is September 11.

Mrs. Smith, with members of a tourist party, spent a day in Hamburg. On the surface there was no unusual excitement. In Paris and elsewhere in France, they found notices in hotels with directions for reaching nearby air raid shelters. In London, such shelters were numerous in all large parks. In Holland, streets were full of soldiers and preparations were complete to open the dikes and flood the country.

Mrs. Smith was in Amsterdam the day the princess was born. Because of the royal child's being of the House of Orange, all the decorations were orange color. Little boys wore orange masks and marched about the street blowing toy whistles, large orange bows decorated motor cars and dogs and were worn by children as hair ribbons; orange bunting festooned the streets, the lights had orange globes and orange candles burned in the windows.

Since her return, Mrs. Smith has had as her guest, Miss Irma Rohr, art teacher in the Newton, Iowa, schools, who left for the West Friday. This week-end a party of guests will come to spend a few days, including Mr. and Mrs. Louis Auten and son, Allen, and Miss Elizabeth King, all of Chicago, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Leonard Smith, who is assistant dietician of the Pennsylvania Hospital for Mental Diseases.

Next week, Mrs. Smith will call a meeting of the board of the Professional Writers' Club to plan for the play to be given at its opening meeting in October, a production written by a club member, Mrs. Florence Dieterich and to be staged by Mrs. Dieterich and Mrs. Blanche Morgan Foote.

Curley Club Has North Beach Party

Under the direction of William J. Boyd, chairman of athletics of the Curley Club, the members and their friends held a party at North Beach Park Sunday, where they were entertained by Miss Adrienna Montgomery. The group assembled at the Continental Hotel at 1:30 and motored to the beach for swimming, dancing and supper.

Members of the executive committee will meet Thursday, September 21, at the home of James Corbett, president, 43 Gallatin street northwest.

Tentative arrangements have been made to hold the annual card party and dance at the Wardman Park Hotel in early November. Proceeds from the dance will be applied to the scholarship fund of the club. Miss Charlotte Urda is chairman of the committee.

Miss Blackistone To Attend Convention

Miss Margaret Blackistone has left to attend the annual convention of the International Florists Telegraph Delivery Association at St. Paul, Minn., September 4 to 9. Miss Blackistone has been nominated as candidate for the position of director at large of the international association. The organization, comprising 7,000 member florists operates "flowers by wire" service throughout the world.

Miss Blackistone will go first to New York, where she will join a group of florists from that city. Plans have been arranged for a trip by boat through the Great Lakes with other delegates joining the party at ports along the route.

BUY NO FUEL until you've checked the low cost of AUTOMATIC GAS HEAT Users say

"Gas Heat Costs No More"
"One can hardly realize the advantages we enjoy from the Automatic Gas Furnace we have in our home. You never have to worry about storing or running short of fuel, or putting out ashes and the cost is no more than other automatic fuels. The service your Company has rendered in turning the furnace on and off and in adjusting has been quick and efficient."
T. F. Costello
1722 North Capitol St.

"The Cost is Far Below Anything I Anticipated"
says C. D. Adams, 1428 W Street, S. E.
"I was very opposed to having gas heating installed in my home, fearing that it would be too costly. I find, however, that the cost is far below anything I anticipated, and the joy and comfort it has given in this home cannot be fully estimated."

"A Tremendous Asset"
"The installation of gas heat in our home has been a tremendous asset. Its simple, clean, automatic operation has proven to us that the problem of heat has finally been obliterated from our minds. Moreover, not once have our gas bills exceeded your estimate."
S. B. Rollins
613 F St., N. E.

War Threat Starts Capital Season Early

Get-Togethers Still Informal but Much More Numerous Than Usual At This Time, as Vacationers Return

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

BACK IN TOWN after a vacation in points West and South, I find the Capital's social front far from being enveloped in its traditional end-of-August doldrums. Residents are flocking back by dozens from resorts all over this country, and from Europe; and while a few are lingering on at playspots until after Labor Day, there's already an autumnal sprint in the local partying round.

Most get-togethers, of course, still are impromptu and informal, but they are much more numerous than they usually are at this time of year. And, of course, there's a reason.

Everybody seems eager to discuss what's going on abroad, so table talk is taking a more serious turn than it has in many a day, with virtually every person in an group delivering himself of an opinion as to whether there will be war.

Washingtonians just back from some of the swankier Atlantic seaboard resorts report that the war scare is having a noticeable effect on social circling around those parts. One of the most important weddings of the late season is to be that of Anthony Drexel Duke and Alice Noel Rutgers on September 9; but the way it looks now one of the ushers won't show up in time for the ceremony. He is young Nicholas Biddle, a cousin of the prospective bridegroom and a son of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., U. S. Ambassador to Poland. If the situation around Danzig grows any more tense, Mr. Duke is afraid his cousin will cancel his reservation, or that the liner on which he is scheduled to sail may be detained.

Here From Newport for Brief Stay

"Very gay" despite news from abroad is the whirl at Newport, according to Mrs. Bruce Smith, who spent yesterday here arranging to have her apartment at the Mayflower redecorated. She and her husband expect to return to Washington the latter part of September and their friends are hoping they will linger here through most of the season.

Last spring they made quite a stay here, coming on from Florida, where they spent most of the winter. After closing their apartment in June, Mr. and Mrs. Smith went to San Francisco for a five-week visit, returning to Newport, August 1, to open their summer home.

Mrs. Smith's daughter, Florence Fisher, who has been at Edgeworth, the Smith home near Charlottesville, Va., all summer, joined her mother at the Mayflower yesterday and will return with her today to Newport for a brief visit.

At Rehoboth Beach the season is winding to its close in a flurry of speculations as to what may happen in Europe. A number of colonists who had planned to stay there through September are packing up now to return home and will be back in Washington shortly after Labor Day.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake and their daughter, Miss Barrine Drake, are among those at the resort who originally planned to be in Rehoboth only until mid-September. They arrived there early in the summer and have remained the entire season.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg also will be returning to their Spring Valley home, soon after Labor Day. Mr. Richberg is spending a few days in Chicago but is expected to join his wife and daughter at Rehoboth this week-end.

Mrs. McNutt and Daughter in Town

Representative and Mrs. William Byron of Maryland, who have been very much to the fore in Rehoboth's social whirl this season, are now in New York where the World's Fair is their chief interest.

Mrs. J. Fred Essary and her daughter, Elene, returned to Washington, yesterday from Rehoboth where they have spent the past four weeks. Miss Peggy Essary and Mr. Essary came back a few days ago.

Meanwhile, newcomers also are converging on the Capital. Adding a special fillip of interest to the local scene is Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who, with her daughter Louise, arrived Sunday evening.

When I saw Mrs. McNutt here in July, when she was apartment hunting, she told me her plan was to return to Indianapolis to be with her daughter until September, when Louise will enter the University of Indiana. But a large luncheon planned for Thursday in honor of Mrs. McNutt brought both mother and daughter to town for a brief stay.

According to present plans, both will return to Indianapolis in a few days and then, along the latter part of next month, Mrs. McNutt will be back once more to join her husband, the Federal Security Administrator, in their apartment at the Shoreham.

Recent Addition to Navy Set Here

Hessler Studio.

Miss Anne Atkins, daughter of Capt. L. M. Atkins, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Atkins, having made her debut in the Philippine Islands, while her father was stationed there as manager of the Navy Yard at Cavite, has decided to take up studies again and will attend the King-Smith Studio School here this fall. Having recently returned from the Philippine Islands with her family via Europe, she and they are settling in their new home on Macomb street. Miss Atkins was educated at the Agnes Irwin School in Philadelphia

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, who spent the past week-end in Scranton, Pa., where he attended a meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, returned to Washington last night. Mrs. Brennan and their three daughters, the Misses Emer, Maeve and Deidre Brennan, are back at the Irish Legation after a vacation in Margate City, N. J. They returned Saturday.

Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, who have been at Cape May, N. J., for several weeks, are in Washington for a few days before going on to their home in St. Joseph, Mo. They are staying at the Wardman Park Hotel. They expect to return to Washington from Missouri early in November.

Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton, of Louisiana, is in Washington for several weeks' stay and is occupying her parents' apartment at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer and Mrs. Robert B. Meckley have gone to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where they will spent two weeks. They are scheduled to take part in the Mason and Dixon golf tournament to be held from September 4 through September 9 on the course of the Greenbrier Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin B. Robinson entertained 25 guests Saturday evening on the occasion of their fifth anniversary. The event was also a housewarming in their new home at 4501 Warren street.

Mrs. Edwin D. Bricker, wife of Col. Bricker, U. S. A., is at the Wardman Park for a brief stay. She came from Frankfort Arsenal, Pa., where Col. Bricker is stationed.

Miss Doreen Penn and Miss Ann Nichols of Wesley Heights have returned from New York where they spent the week-end. Miss Penn will leave early in September for Waynesboro, Va., where she will attend Fairfax Hall.

Mrs. McLean Gives Dinner

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained at dinner Sunday evening at Briarcliff, Bar Harbor, Me., in honor of Mrs. M. Taylor Pyne.

Guests included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. William Kilbreth, Md. and Mrs. Cecil Barret, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorn, Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Atwell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Moore, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Stanley M. Rinehart.

Others present were Mrs. John Potter, Dr. David Reisman, Dr. James Murphy, John Potter, Joseph Hergesheimer, Theodore Marburg and Gist Blair.

Justice and Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, sr., were among the guests at a dinner given Sunday night at Bar Harbor by Price and Princess Burhaneddin. The event was arranged in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Moriz Rosenthau.

Yarnells Stop At Mayflower on Visit to Capital

Admiral and Mrs. Harry E. Yarnell are at the Mayflower, where they expect to be for several days. Their son, Philip Yarnell, of Elizabeth, N. J., recently joined them for a brief visit.

Lieut. John Sylvester, U. S. N., and Mrs. Sylvester, son-in-law and daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Yarnell, are visiting relatives in Wellston, Ohio. Later, they will go to the Naval Torpedo Station at Newport, where Lieut. Sylvester has been assigned to duty.

The J. P. Hoppers On Bridal Tour

En route to New York and Canada are Mr. and Mrs. J. Preston Hopper, who were married in Martinsburg, W. Va., August 25. Following their wedding trip they will be at home after September 5 at their new residence in Martinsburg.

The bride is the former Miss Esther Downey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Downey, of Martinsburg. The ceremony was in the First M. E. Church, with the Rev. William Pierpoint officiating.

Mrs. Hopper has been active in music circles in Martinsburg and is a member of several civic and social organizations, including the music department of the Woman's Club and the Trinity Episcopal choir.

Mr. Hopper, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Hopper, of Martinsburg, is manager of Inland Service Corporation and president of the Junior Board of Trade of Berkeley County, W. Va.

Dr. Gertrude Brigham Visits Miss Boone

Visiting Miss Clara Isabelle Boone in her apartment at Kew Gardens will be Dr. Gertrude Richardson Brigham, dean of journalism at Brenau College in Georgia.

Dr. Brigham, who formerly lived in Washington, is in Booth Bay Harbor, Me., where she has been spending the summer and will stop off in New York. She will return to her work at Brenau College early in September.

Noted Novelist Scheduled for Visit In September

Susan Ertz, noted novelist who in private life is Mrs. J. Ronald McCrindle, wife of the manager and director of the British Airways, is expected to arrive with her husband in Washington September 18 to be the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Coleridge Ertz.

Although the McCrindles planned their trip to this country many months ago, there is chance that it may have to be postponed because of developments abroad. At present, however, they are continuing their plans to sail early in September to spend several weeks in America.

Mrs. Coleridge Ertz, who left for England in May, accompanied by her young son, Stephen Coleridge Ertz, is now on her way home, having sailed Sunday. She has been visiting her mother in Berkshire and Miss Ertz in London. She will join her husband here early next month.

McGaws to Arrive Here Tomorrow

Capt. Edward J. McGaw, U. S. A., and Mrs. McGaw and their daughter, Miss Lillian McGaw, who have been spending the summer at a camp in Wisconsin, will arrive in Washington tomorrow.

They will be house guests of Maj. H. C. Holdridge and Mrs. Holdridge in Arlington, Va., until they have found residence here. Capt. McGaw will attend the Army War College this fall, and he and his family will make their home in Arlington.

Debs Launch Own Business

Bored with all play and no work, two Warrenton debutantes, Virginia Calvert and Sarah Warren, have launched a business of their own in Warrenton, Va., to be opened September 6 in The Blue Parrot.

The two enterprising young ladies who have succumbed to the lure of careers, are advertising "At Your Service" with attractive announcements. The cards read "Good Morning—We're At Your Service," and advise "We'll try anything including arranging parties and entertainments, writing invitations, notes, etc., opening and closing houses, wrapping presents or anything else you need done."

Miss Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Mack Warren, was presented to society in Baltimore last season. Miss Calvert was with the Barter Theater last summer in Abingdon, Va. Both girls are well known in social Washington.

Miss Mary Menefee, M. P. Watkins Wed At Sperryville

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Pettus Watkins, jr., are on their wedding trip, following their marriage in Sperryville, Va., Saturday afternoon. They will make their home in Washington.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Helen Menefee, daughter of the late Robert Middleton Menefee and Mrs. Menefee of Sperryville. Mr. Watkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Pettus Watkins, of Richmond.

The marriage took place at the Menefee home, Piedmont, with the Rev. Francis Allison officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Mercer Menefee, wore a gown of white satin. Her veil of illusion fell from a fitted cap.

Mrs. John Rivercomb, of Rappahannock, Va., sister of the bride, was matron of honor and only attendant.

Dr. Paul Douglas Camp, jr., of Richmond was best man. Ushers were George Phillips, of Richmond; Oliver Durant, of Washington, Clarence Miller and John Rivercomb.

The Needelmans Staying at Beach

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Needelman are at Virginia Beach, following their marriage here Sunday at 1 o'clock, with Rabbi Solomon Metz officiating in his residence on Channing street.

The bride is the former Miss Lillian Barney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Barney. Mr. Needelman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Needelman.

Wearing an informal frock of viking blue, the bride had chosen wine-colored accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Dorothy Anderson Becomes Bride of Lieut. A. J. Goodpaster

Sally Anderson Is Maid of Honor And Mary Caffrey and Peggy Lu Talbot Are Bridesmaids; Lieut. Keller Is Best Man

In an impressive military ceremony, Miss Dorothy Dulaney Anderson became the bride of Second Lieut. Andrew Jackson Goodpaster, yesterday afternoon in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel at 4:30 o'clock. Chaplain A. C. Oliver, jr., officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Lieut. Col. Jonathan W. Anderson and Mrs. Anderson. Lieut. Goodpaster's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Goodpaster, of East St. Louis, Ill.

Wearing a wedding gown of deep cream satin, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The frock was made on princess lines ending in a long, sweeping train. Her tulle veil was held in place by a juliet cap of rare old lace. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Sister Is Maid of Honor

Attending as maid of honor, Miss Sally Anderson, sister of the bride, wore a rose net gown, trimmed in pale blue with a tight bodice and full skirt. She wore a matching net hat and carried Sally roses and blue delphinium.

Bridesmaids were Miss Mary K. Caffrey and Miss Peggy Lu Talbot, both of whom are cousins of the bride. They wore blue ensembles made like that of the maid of honor. The bouquets were of Talisman roses and delphinium.

Lieut. James H. Keller was best man and ushers included Lieut. Stanley W. Dziuban, Lieut. Louis A. Kunzig, Lieut. James L. Cantrell and Lieut. Lawton Collins.

Reception at Army War College

Following the ceremony a large reception was held at the Officers' Club of the Army War College. Mrs. Anderson, who assisted the young couple in receiving, wore a frock of dusty rose marquisette with a leghorn hat trimmed in rose. Her corsage was of orchids.

When Lieut. and Mrs. Goodpaster left for their honeymoon the bride wore a blue and white traveling ensemble with accessories of white. Following their wedding trip they will sail for Corozal, Canal Zone, where Lieut. Goodpaster is to be stationed.

Thomas Burkes Entertain Couple At Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke had as their guests for the past week Mrs. Burke's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Santiago del Pulgar, of Long Island. The del Pulgars left Washington Sunday for their home.

Mrs. Burke, recently returned from "just gypsying around," as she called a motor trip through New England. Meanwhile, Mr. Burke was in Ottawa attending a conference. While there Mr. Burke visited with his former chief, the retiring United States Minister to Canada, Daniel S. Roper, and Mrs. Roper.

William Berry Christened Here

William Brian Berry, son of Representative and Mrs. William B. Berry, of New York, was christened here Sunday afternoon at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle. The Rev. Joseph Moran officiated at the ceremony, which was attended by a few friends.

Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, are godparents of the boy, who was born August 9 at Columbia Hospital. He is the second child of Representative and Mrs. Berry. Their daughter, Patricia Jane, is 17 months old.

Mrs. Swormstedt Sets At Home for Friday

Mrs. Lyman Beecher Swormstedt is spending a few days in New York, where she is seeing the World's Fair. She has been joined by her daughter, Mrs. Helen Mansfield, who with her son, Pete, will return to Washington tomorrow with Mrs. Swormstedt.

Friday afternoon, after 4 o'clock, Mrs. Swormstedt and Mrs. Mansfield will be at home informally at the former's residence at 2 Thomas Circle. Mrs. Mansfield and her son expect to visit here for a week.

Henrys Sail To Brazil Post

On the high seas enroute to Rio de Janeiro are the French Ambassador to Brazil, Jules Henry, and his bride, the former Mme. Champetier de Ribes. Mme Henry is a relative of the present French Minister of Pensions.

M. Henry was married recently in France before leaving for his new post. He and his bride arrived in New York last week aboard the Ile de France, on their way to Rio de Janeiro. M. Henry stopped over in Washington briefly and was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin.

M. Henry is well known in Washington having served for many years at the embassy as Counselor.

Mrs. Elwood Seal Goes to Kentucky For Holiday Visit

Mrs. Elwood H. Seal, wife of Corporation Counsel Seal, will leave for Lexington, Ky., on Saturday to spend the Labor Day holiday with her mother-in-law, Mrs. James Seal. She will be accompanied by her three children, Alan, Morgan and Mary Carol Seal. They expect to remain in Kentucky about a week.

Mrs. Seal returned to Washington last Thursday from a visit of two weeks to New York, where she and her daughter were house guests of Miss Margery Ryan. While there they saw the World's Fair.

Mr. Seal is touring New England by motor with Glenn Simmons, one of his business asociates. They will visit Dr. and Mrs. William Earl Clark in Southeast Habor, Me., and plan to go into Canada. They will return to town after Labor Day.

Karen Munk-Pedersen And Kurt Samann Wed

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Munk-Pedersen, of Des Moines and Washington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Karen, to Kurt Samann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Samann, of Lake Wales, Fla., formerly of Leipzig.

The wedding took place on Sunday at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation here. After a trip to the West Coast, Mr. and Mrs. Samann will live in Washington.

Mr. Felsted, Mr. Brook Returning to England

Norman R. Felsted and Alexis Brook, of London, England, who have been visiting in this country were called back by the crisis and sailed recently on the Ile de France. Mr. Felsted, who has been at Rehoboth, flew to New York to meet his friend, who has been traveling in Canada. Both are students at Cambridge and members of the Anglo-American Society.

During their stay in Washington the pair were entertained by the Misses Mercedes and Patricia Boyle.

Julius Forrest, Miss Hiett to Wed Sept. 16

Ceremony to Be Held In Dr. A. B. Moore's Home in Arlington

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Carolyn Lee Hiett, daughter of Henry Lee Hiett and the late Mrs. Hiett, of East Falls Church, Va., and Julius Norris Forrest, son of Mrs. Julius C. Forrest and the late Mr. Forrest, of Washington.

The wedding will take place on September 16 at 4 p. m. in the garden of the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Berkeley Moore, of 3101 North Glebe road, Arlington, with the Rev. W. Leigh Ribble officiating.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father and will have one attendant, her sister, Miss Barbara Baker Hiett, as maid of honor. John Lynton Demarest will be the best man. A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Moore.

Following a wedding trip by motor the couple will make their home, after October 1, at the Presidential Gardens apartments near Alexandria. The bride-elect was graduated from the Fredericksburg State Teachers' College, and Mr. Forrest attended William and Mary College.

Mrs. H. N. Cootes' Sailing in Doubt

With sailing tickets from Europe at a premium, social notables abroad are giving their friends here a few anxious moments. Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, who sailed on July 1 for Europe, writes that her return here is very indefinite—due to the difficulty of booking passage.

Mrs. Cootes is visiting her sister, Mme. Lechaux in Le Havre, as well as her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Belin, in Paris.

She was to have returned to her home in Alexandria within the next two weeks. However, her arrival might be premature or delayed, all depends on the steamship lines.

Robert Wildmans On Wedding Trip In New England

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Aprill Wildman are on their wedding trip through New England following their marriage on August 19 in Sodus, N. Y. They will make their home in Washington upon their return.

The bride is the former Miss Helen Elizabeth Butts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer G. Butts, of Sodus. Mr. Wildman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Wildman, of Washington and Guilford, Conn.

The marriage took place in the Sodus Third M. E. Church. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white net gown made on bouffant lines. She wore a veil of illusion and carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Freeman Cottrell was her sister's matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Whitbeck, Miss Evelyn DePoint, both of Sodus; Miss Barbara Whitbeck and Miss Rose K. Wildman, of Washington.

Herbert Tuttle Wildman served as best man for his brother and ushers included Roger Butts, Freeman Cottrell, of Sodus; Kenneth Mannakee and John Wilfong, of Washington.

An informal reception was held on the lawn of the bride's parents' home following the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of George Washington University. Mr. Wildman also was graduated from that university.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Averse to Light Love-Making, Carefully Reared Girl Of 16 Asks How to Manage Her Admirers

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 16 years old and have been brought up by my mother not to permit my escorts to school dances and parties to say any affectionate "good nights" on the door step, or to be a party to any snuggle-up "passes" on the back seats of cars or in dark corners of porches. I have always been popular, too, and "cut in" upon at all of our dances. In fact, I get as many "cut ins" as some of the other girls who stand for petting because they think they will lose out if they don't. But I am getting an awful lot of razzing about being "the iceberg sister" and "the chilly blonde."

Now, I really think my mother knows best about such things, and I don't like the idea of silly boys pawing me. But I would like a little advice about how to handle such things. So far, I have laughed off their attempts to get sentimental in the moonlight, and to sit closer on the back seats of cars. But it certainly does keep you from having a lot of fun when you have to hold yourself so tense in order to keep the boys at a suitable distance.

It doesn't seem to make any difference whether the boys come from families that your parents have always known, or whether they are comparative strangers; sooner or later they all try out their line. Incidentally, the Annapolis boys are the worst offenders. No matter how long they may have known a girl or her family, it doesn't seem to give them any more respect for her. Can you give me any advice?

DISTURBED SIXTEEN.

Attitude of Mind Is First Line of Defense

DEAR D. S.: I have a feeling that you are unconsciously magnifying your difficulties with boys. That is to say, you are perhaps unduly on the lookout for trouble, so that when you are in their company, you are carrying an armor of resistant nervous tension out of all proportion to their clumsily aggressive attentions or intentions.

You should remember this: Up to the time a girl is about 23 years of age, say, she is emotionally or psychologically older, by several years, than a boy of the same chronological age. As a rule, therefore, the teen-age girl has the subtle advantage of greater poise and maturity than a boy her own age possesses. By the same token, she is equipped to associate on equal terms with boys some years her senior.

If you will keep this in mind, I think you will be able to overcome that "frightened fawn" feeling that is threatening to spoil your social interchange with the opposite sex. Remember that in declining or deflecting caresses, you are not on the defensive unless you deliberately elect to occupy that uncomfortable and unbecoming position. And remember that, in assuming it, you will be demonstrating a lack of savoir faire.

There is an old saying to the effect that "man proposes and woman disposes;" and the girl who has come of age for beaux must develop the social technique of holding herself mistress of every situation in which she finds herself alone with a man. This is her prerogative as well as her obligation, and she is failing miserably to sustain it, if and when she acts on the self-deprecating supposition that because a boy makes a "snuggle-up pass" at her, she must submit or explain why not.

A girl's attitude of mind toward the whole adventure of boy-and-girl relationships is her first line of defense against fumbling amative overtures. If an attractive girl has the good sense to see her beaux for exactly what they are, namely: young, untried human beings who have no more—and perhaps even less—idea of "what it is all about," than she has herself; and if she further sees them as fellow creatures whose friendship (and I mean friendship) is to be won by self-respecting, above-board means, she will hold every situation in the palm of her hand.

One feels that some, at least, of your difficulty stems from an erroneous attitude of mind. One gathers that you are rather too sex conscious in your dealings with boys; too conscious, in brief, that "I am a girl and HE is a boy," so that, whenever you are paired off with a boy, your instinctive thought is, "Now, I wonder what his line is." The emphasis should be transferred to the healthier thought, "He seems a nice person. I wonder if he has the makings of a good friend?" (And you should be thinking of friendship in life-lasting terms).

When your manifest reaction to occasional squires is one of unsex-conscious, wholehearted friendship—talkative, self-possessed, laughing and casual—you will have set a pace of behavior that only a boor would fail to perceive and live up to. And I cannot believe that all of your boy friends are vulgarly bred.

Apparently you have not yet stumbled on a fact which almost any intelligent, articulate boy could tell you, to-wit: that the witty, talkative, high-spirited, self-assured girl is the last girl in the world he has the courage to make a "pass" at. He is far too afraid of making a fool of himself, either in her eyes or in the eyes of any who might discover he had reached and failed! Moreover, she carries him through an evening on such a swift tide of fun that he is never tempted to resort to the second-best entertainment bet of "pitching woo" to pass the time.

TWO LAST THOUGHTS: 1. A girl is collaborating in an offense against herself when she permits herself to be kissed by a man whose salute doesn't sincerely convey his unquestioned, chivalrously protective devotion to her. And, 2. A boy who would charge a girl with being "the iceberg sister" or "the chilly blonde" because she declined to be clutched, is a chap who has not yet reached the long pants level of individual development. He is still in the pigtail pulling stage. M. H.

2 Queens Inspire Fashions—Both Are Elizabeths

Hollywood, Calif.—Two Elizabeths step into the limelight to inspire late summer and autumn fashions, with honors equally divided between the doughty English Queen of the sixteenth century as portrayed on the screen by Bette Davis in "The Lady and the Knight," and the reigning Queen of England who has such a flair for things softly feminine.

Orry-Kelly, designer of the elaborate wardrobe for Miss Davis, sees modern merit in the extended bodice peak, lowered waistline, the extremely full skirt, and the leg-o'-mutton sleeve with graduated puffs from shoulder to wrist held in by ribbons or bands. The front bodice peak which extends into the skirt proper gives the figure such a long, slim line that Parisian designers saw its possibilities before its Hollywood reviver had an opportunity to do its modern version for the screen.

Today's Queen Elizabeth is partial to pastels, single-color costumes, fur-trimmed ensemble capes, little costume parasols, and hats with brims turned up abruptly in front. Since her trip to the United States each one of these fashions has found favor with American women.

Fireman's Red for School

Fireman's red is slated for a blazing career this fall, according to coeds who are buying it for school. It's a definite, strident red they prefer and a generally becoming color. Fair-haired Marion Norris, of Georgetown Visitation Convent dashed away from wardrobe assembling long enough to pose here in her favorite fireman's red shirt. This is of soft wooley jersey, cut on the lines of a Dutch milkman's jacket—hip length, comfortable and naive. The bib front with its big white buttons looks fresh and new for campus wear. The shirt is a classroom favorite in bold shepherd's plaid. This was one of the fashion requirements featured at a recent local style show. Among other flaming reds that delighted youthful spectators was a "blaze red" crepe frock, a wonderful fireman's red tweed wrap, and a funny little blouse dress by the younger set's favorite designer, Ellen Kaye. Most glamorous of the fiery-hued styles was a red velveteen gown, called "Grand Entrance," most appropriately

Your Figure Madame!

Women Urged to Find Partners for Their Gymnastic Workouts

YOU WON'T be able to believe this, but on a cruise people take to exercise like they do to candid camera photography. Some of them who never exercised before in their lives get so they do it every day. They like it!

And the reason they like it, according to Tom Cherry, instructor on one of the English liners is that on a cruise exercise is convenient and it's social. The average exercise program, he points out, is apt to be neither.

To fix that, he suggests that you find a partner for your gymnastic workouts. Then, he recommends buying a 3¼-pound medicine ball and use it for your exercise so that there won't be any complicated routines to learn. All you have to do is bend over, pick up the ball, hold it high overhead and toss it to your playmate. That's not too hard!

Just 15 Minutes a Day

He is convinced that if you would do that for just 15 minutes every day, you would fill out the chest, strengthen the muscles supporting the bust and slim the waist and hips. He adds:

"Judging by thousands of figures, that's what the average woman needs to do."

For the days when you have to exercise alone, here is another exercise suggested by Mr. Cherry for slimming the midsection:

Sit on a low stool or dressing table bench with the feet tucked under some heavy article of furniture such as a chest of drawers or the footboard of the bed. Clasp the hands back of the head and circle at the waist to the side, backward, around to the opposite side, down in front, and then in the opposite direction. Three times will be plenty! Tom Cherry is not very hopeful about many of you doing this exercise—he thinks it's too hard—but if you will practice it every day you can take an inch off the waist in one week!

Rowing Machine Excellent

On shipboard the favorite hip slimming exercise is done with the electric belt, but you can get the same effect with this rolling technique: Lie flat on the back on the floor, legs together and straight down, arms straight out at the sides on the floor. Keep the shoulders as flat on the floor as possible and hold the legs together as you roll the hips to the left, with the right leg on top, then over to the right, with the left leg on top. Repeat 30 times, alternating right and left. Gradually increase to 50.

Another popular exercise toy is the rowing machine, and if you happen to own one, get busy with it! Rowing is excellent for the chest and shoulders and it strengthens the tummy muscles and slims the waist in no time flat.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Omen

Half awake, she lay passively aware of a confusion of sounds drifting in her apartment window. A babble of men's voices rising, falling, changing . . . the more distant strains of music.

Oh, yes, it was morning . . . Sunday morning. No, it couldn't be Sunday morning. There was always that early hush then . . . everyone sleeping late . . . the radios silent.

The voices began to take form. Words, phrases—"London" . . . "Paris" . . . "Berlin" . . . "another Munich" . . . "appeasement"—drifted to her. Oh, yes, it WAS Sunday morning. The Sunday morning of the August crisis!

She felt a sudden heaviness engulfing her. Even the morning air coming in at the window seemed charged with tenseness. She lay listening, too weak, too depressed to rise. One radio voice, full, heavy, ominous toned, rose above the others. The speaker was reading something—a pronouncement that seemed solemn, defiant, final in import. Voices from other radios broke in—some suave... with an artificial calm, others swift staccato, full of suppressed excitement.

What a jargon it all seemed—of harsh, empty words, confusion, misunderstanding, animal threats and roars. The voice of the jungle! And this was what man—civilization—had come to!

She shut her eyes and tried to listen to the occasional strains of music that wove themselves into the jumbled pattern of words. They emerged gradually more distinct—gentle, soothing, exalted. Why, it was sacred music! Of course! This was Sunday morning! And these were the radio voices of worship!

As she listened on the sounds outside seemed to take the form of a conflict. Now a man's voice in words of heavy solemnity, words of strife, fear, terror. Then a smooth strain of majestic music. More words—words warring among themselves, words of formlessness, of chaos. Then the uplifted chorus of voices in perfect rhythm, perfect harmony, bringing a momentary vision of a universe in perfect order.

The situation seemed strangely familiar. Where had she known it before? . . . Ah! Tannhauser, of course!

In a flash of vision she saw Tannhauser laboriously making his way up the mountain as the forces of good and evil fought over him through the stormy strains of Wagner's famous overture.

Yes, the heavenly pilgrims again were combating the pagan revelers of the Bacchanale. The voices of peace, of civilization, of the human spirit were still calling faintly above the barbarous uproar of the jungle.

How exalting, majestic and other-worldly the music of the heavenly pilgrims had always seemed as it broke in so faintly at first on the Bacchanalian revels. And yet, faint as it was, from the moment listeners heard it, they knew instinctively and surely that Tannhauser eventually would surrender to its call.

She strained to listen to the conflict outside the window. The sacred music had become clearer, stronger. "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," a choir was singing. The other radio voices continued to break in, but they were becoming less in number, more distant. The morning barrage of dispatches seemed to be dying down.

The choir ceased and a minister was intoning, "My peace I give unto you . . ."

The choir took it up, and repeatedly flung it out reassuringly on the morning air.

Another voice with news of a "dispatch" broke in, but again the chorus of music rose clearly and triumphantly above it . . . "Glory be to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men."

She listened to the voices die away, and as she arose found a strange sense of peace coming over her.

Find Outlets For 'Nerves'

A LAMP crashes, a door bangs—how you long to let go with a scream or an angry word. But civilization says "no," so you continue to smile and smile.

Such sensitiveness to sudden sounds, annoyances are a sign of tortured nerves. And to fight them, pushing them down like a Jack-in-the-box, only makes them worse.

Instead of being vivacious and charming, as is the case with the well-balanced neurotic, you become more and more tense. Your repression may even bring on physical disorders.

But, say psychologists, though yelling is taboo there's a civilized substitute for it. The way to release nerve tension is through action — probably because action was man's earliest way or reacting to outside stimuli. In primitive society, if frightened you ran away. If angry, you struck out with your fists.

You can't do that now—but you can find your own way of "letting go." Let your days include plenty of healthful doing — games, walking, gardening. Take stock of your general attitude, too. Perhaps you are a chronic hurrier. Go a bit slowly—what if you miss a streetcar!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Mrs. Moses, Wife of N. Y. Park-Maker, Also Does Good Job

NEXT to Peppery Mayor LaGuardia himself, the man most distinguished in the public service in the most remarkable administration New York has ever known is Park Commissioner Robert Moses. Working hand in hand with Fiery Fiorello he has performed miracles in revamping, streamlining and opening up this difficult metropolis.

Alice Hughes

Bob Moses is a public servant in the finest sense of the word. A cultured man of independent means he has entirely devoted himself to making this town a better place in which to live, especially for kids. For instance, he has added 4,000 acres to our park system, and made two playgrounds bloom where none grew before. Under his hand, four monumental bridges have been completed, and through him the beautiful Riverside Drive Parkway has at last given the city the Hudson River frontage it needed and deserved, and whenever we meet up with a bloke of such high caliber, don't we ask, "Who's the missus?"

Mrs. Moses was once confidential secretary to Gov. McGovern of Wisconsin. Now she devotes herself to being a good wife to busy Bob and mother to their two grown daughters, Barbara and Jane. Barbara works in a local bookshop. A good-looking woman with blonde hair, Mrs. Moses dresses inconspicuously, black being her favorite color. The family, when it manages to get assembled, lives very quietly in town on Gracie Square, and in the country at Babylon, Long Island.

So, the wife of this public-serving dynamo, once actively interested in politics, is now strictly wife and mother. Known to her intimates as an original and brilliant woman, Mrs. M. tends to making a comfortable background for a busy, happy and successful family.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Have you taken any steps about this insane 24-inch wasp waist the fashion pundits are howling for, or are you just looking, thanks, as I am? My little chum, Merry Hull, the glove designer from Columbus, is now going through a frantic slimming ordeal, practically nothing but fruit juices, and all that. I wonder if it's worth the struggle. My notion is that one or two days a week of fruit juices exclusively should keep matters fairly well in check, and I'm sure that the effect on the sufferer's disposition is less frightful . . .

Oysters Any Style, Says John R. Gardner

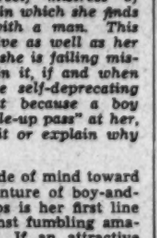
By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND thought both the Walrus and the Carpenter very unpleasant characters because they ate the poor oysters. But anything as delicious as the oyster must have been meant to be eaten, is the opinion of many since the time the Romans in their banquet halls sung the praises of oysters in poems.



Mr. Gardner

John R. Gardner, Administrative Assistant, Bureau of Fisheries, acting commissioner in the absence of Commissioner Jackson, now in Alaska, is one who sings the praise of the oyster. He likes them best on the half shell with a nippy sauce, but he also likes them fried. Along with fried oysters Mr. Gardner likes shoestring potatoes and tomato catsup, vanilla ice cream and a cup of steaming coffee complete the meal when oysters are the star dish. This disproves the fallacy that milk should not be eaten with sea food.

Mr. Gardner's recipe for frying oysters is the one which has been developed in the Bureau of Fisheries. The recipe follows:

Fried Oysters

Select large oysters, rinse quickly and lay carefully on a colander to drain. Dry quickly and gently with a soft cloth, handling as little as possible. Take a steel fork and catch it in the "eye" of the oyster, dip in beaten egg, then in fine cracker dust, being careful not to use too much cracker dust, as it tends to disguise the flavor of the oyster. Use 2 eggs for each 1½ dozen oysters. Beat the eggs, add a pinch of salt and a tablespoon of boiling water. Have ready a frying pan, not too deep, with plenty of hot fat, to which add a little butter to aid in making the oysters crisp and brown. Put in only enough oysters to cover the bottom without crowding. When brown on one side, turn over.

Mr. Gardner was born in Iowa, but when very young went to Oklahoma to live. Perhaps, besides coming to Washington to study law, where he obtained a degree from National Law School, he came to be near the oyster supply.

U. S. Likely To Move in Smoot Strike

Carmody Asserts Building Tie-up Here 'Intolerable' As Deadlock Holds

New moves to end the construction tie-up caused by the Smoot Sand and Gravel strike were promised from two sources yesterday after company officials refused to accept settlement proposals by Labor Department Conciliator Howard T. Colvin.

While John R. Steelman, director of the Conciliation Service, threatened to "take a hand" personally in the dispute unless "definite developments toward an agreement" appear within 36 hours, Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody declared "the FWA is directly involved."

"I am amazed to learn that in the District of Columbia there is only one source of supply for the sand and gravel used in the Government's building program," Carmody said, adding that the tie-up caused by the strike was "intolerable." He intends "to look into this phase of the building business here."

Deadlock Held Critical

Carmody's comment on the construction tie-up followed a communication from Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds, who described the deadlock as "critical and expensive to the Federal Government."

No work is being done on the Social Security Building, he reported. Of 450 men at work on the General Federal Office Building, 50 are being laid off today and the remaining 400 will be laid off by the end of the week if the strike continues. If materials were available, he said, 2,500 men would be at work on the two structures.

Delay is particularly important to the Federal Office Building, said Reynolds. It was planned to house 7,000 census workers there in a few months.

Meanwhile, the dispute between the Western Union Co. and the Commercial Telegraphers Union Local 24 moved nearer a strike as the union members last night voted to give their negotiating committee power to call a strike vote if they thought it necessary.

Claim 85% of Employes

The vote was taken after an hour's closed meeting at the Hamilton Hotel. The union, organized last April, claims a membership of 635, which it estimates at 85 per cent of the Western Union employes in Washington.

The union demands a 40-hour five-day week to replace the six-day, 46 2-3 hour week employes are said to work now, as well as some wage increases and a closed shop. Western Union officials could not be reached last night for comment.

The sand and gravel strike was reported in "hopeless deadlock" last night after company officials refused to accept Colvin's proposals.

At the conclusion of a conference between union and company representatives, Colvin announced the walkout—which has affected an estimated 6,000 construction workers—would last indefinitely. Union spokesmen, he said, agreed to the settlement proposals, but company leaders said they could give them "no serious consideration."

Colvin proposed:

That the union call off the strike immediately.

That the company reinstate all employes now on strike without prejudice by reason of union membership or participation in the walkout.

That Sand and Gravel Workers' Union No. 22075 be recognized by the company as the exclusive bargaining agency for all employes, with the exception of supervisory and office workers.

That the company agree to enter into negotiations within 30 days through representatives authorized to speak for and bind the company for reaching an understanding regarding all issues involved.

Counter Proposal Made

In turning down Colvin's suggestions, the company countered with a proposal that the strike be called off and employes return to work immediately with the understanding that a conference will be arranged with Lewis E. Smoot, chairman of the board of directors, as soon as he is able to leave his home near Colonial Beach. Smoot has been confined to his bed on doctor's orders since the strike began.

The union refused to agree, but said the workers would accept Colvin's plan. John Shields, union spokesman, said, "We have yet to deal with a duly authorized company official and until we are permitted to do so the strike will continue."

Some of the city's largest Federal building projects are involved in the dispute. It was indicated last night that the Associated General Contractors of America may enter the picture with settlement proposals today.

Another union activity will get under way this morning when 17 stores of the Smith Dry Cleaning Co. will be picketed in "sympathy" with a strike at the company's stores in Baltimore.

Rain Forecast For D. C. Today

Yesterday was a cool day, as August days go, with the temperature staying below 78 and dipping to 69. But, the Weather Bureau pointed out, "it was unusually hot the first part of the month, so the month as a whole will probably average out about normal."

Occasional rain and moderate north and northwest winds are forecast for today, with tomorrow generally fair at moderate temperatures. A disturbance reported off the North Carolina coast last night was not expected to bring storms to Washington, although warnings were posted along the coast from the Virginia capes to Boston.

Board Again Fails to Fill Peak's Place

Officials Emphasize Difficulty in Naming Chief for Lorton

The Board of Public Welfare met yesterday for the third time since the death of Col. William Peak on June 16 without being able to decide on a successor to his post of superintendent of Lorton Reformatory.

A board spokesman said the board had come to no decision, although it spent part of the meeting considering the matter. He emphasized the difficulty of finding the "proper person" for the job. He also said the board had not decided who should replace Miss May C. Rankin, former assistant director of public assistance, who resigned as of June 30.

Although no date was set for a special meeting to determine who should fill the two posts, it was understood the suggestion had been made to call the board together for that purpose before its next scheduled meeting late in September.

Among the candidates being considered for the Lorton job, it was learned, are two persons in the Justice Department and two present officials of the reformatory.

Silver Spring Residents Seek New Bus Line

Eighty residents of Silver Spring, Md., and surrounding communities met last night in the Liquor Control Building, Silver Spring, to discuss with E. M. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., the possibility of a bus line operating between Silver Spring and Olney by way of Georgia avenue extended.

The group requested the Capital Transit Co. to run buses on a four round-trip a day basis for a trial of 60 days. Merrill said the company was reluctant to use a route that it had abandoned a year ago. He agreed to discuss the question further with a committee from the group.

Named to the committee were William F. Carlin, chairman; E. W. Tompkins, O. K. Duvall, J. Donald Clagett, Mrs. Clara Mae Downey, Joseph C. Buscher and Vincent Tutching.

Vienna Fire Auxiliary Setup

Organization of a ladies auxiliary for the Vienna (Va.) Fire Department has been completed with election of Mrs. Stanley Twombley as president.

Other officers include Mrs. Hammond Gunnell, first vice president; Mrs. Aubrey Phillips, second vice president; Mrs. Eugene Hurst, recording secretary; Mrs. Merrill Twombley, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Henry Magarity, treasurer.

Committee appointments include:

F. Clinton Knight, a past commander of Alexandria, (Va.) Post No. 24, American Legion, was elected president of the Virginia Commanders' Club at the opening sessions of the American Legion convention in Richmond yesterday.

The Alexandria Legion post and the Forty and Eight Society are represented by 85 members at the Richmond session. The legion junior drum and bugle corps, under the direction of Walter Hardester, left last night to participate in the parade this afternoon.

Glen Echo Inn Denied Beer Permit

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board denied Eliza Boose a license to sell beer and light wines at Riverside Inn, formerly Sunset Hall, on Conduit road near Glen Echo, Md.

The board held that the property is on land zoned as residential. Nearby residents opposed the license.

Concert Deficit For Summer Sets New Low

Season Most Successful Financially in History Of Series, Brooks Says

The National Symphony Orchestra's third season of sunset symphonies at the Watergate was the most successful financially in the series' history, Harold A. Brooks, chairman of the summer concerts committee, said.

He attributed much of the success to the fair weather, but emphasized the committee was highly gratified by the enthusiastic response on the part of the public.

He said the series did show a substantial deficit, but there are sufficient funds on hand—on account of over-subscriptions to the regular symphony series plus special contributions to the summer series—to take care of it. The deficit for this summer's series, Brooks said, was "appreciably less" than that for its two preceding seasons.

Besides Brooks, those attending the meeting last night included Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Mrs. Barton K. Yount, Dr. Hans Kindler, L. E. Rubel and C. C. Cappel, all members of the summer concerts committee.

G.A.R. Veterans See Army's Newest Gun

Pittsburgh, Aug. 28 (AP).—White-haired survivors of the Nation's bloodiest conflict compared today the weapons of the War Between the States and death-dealing instruments of the twentieth century.

Shown the U. S. Army's newest type machine gun at a special demonstration, one aged veteran of the Grand Army of the Republic exclaimed that with it he "and another fellow could have stopped the whole rebel army at Gettysburg."

The demonstration was the principal event of the day for the handful of the 1,700 survivors of those who fought to preserve the Union. Convention headquarters said more than 100 were registered.

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 28 (INS).—Two sons of Gov. Murphy of New Hampshire were critically injured tonight when their automobile was sideswiped by another car, crashed into a tree and overturned. Walter Murphy, and Francis P. Murphy, jr., were administered the last rites of the Catholic church.

Zoo Wants Byrd to Bring Moe a New Mollie to Love

Glamorous Penguin From Antarctica Sought to Refuel the Fires of Romance In Widower's Lonesome, Pining Heart

As a means of refreshing the languishing heart of Moe, whose Mollie died a half month ago, the Zoo yesterday "took steps" to find another lady penguin just as glamorous.

It is hoped Admiral Byrd will bring her back from the Antarctic, where the world's nicest penguins grow and blush unseen.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, made a formal request that Mollie's successor be brought by the expedition which the Government is sending to Antarctica the middle of October.

"Of course, we want several penguins from down there—if we can get them—and we also want some seals," Dr. Mann said last night.

Only two kinds of seals ever have been in captivity, Dr. Mann said. The Zoo would be happy to have a pair of the rare sea-leopard variety, which are active and vicious, and also of the brown and white variety which have such luminous peepers they're usually classified as big-eyed.

The third Antarctic type of seal, usually known as the crab-eating type, does not appeal to the Zoo. It eats a crustacean food that grows only in the "down under" regions. Dr. Mann thinks it would be rather difficult to feed a pair of these in the manner to which they are accustomed.

He would like for the penguins to be of the emperor and king varieties—with one among them Moe would be sure to love.

Manassas Marked Army Deficiencies, Staff Chief Says

Baltimore, Aug. 28 (AP).—Deficiencies in personnel and equipment of National Guardsmen and the Regular Army "were emphasized" at the Manassas maneuvers, Col. George Allen, chief of staff in the Third Corps Area, said today.

"Before we went to Manassas we fully realized there were deficiencies in our military setup," Col. Allen declared, "deficiencies that are not a matter of great immediate concern in our national life, and deficiencies the remedy for which would cost a great deal more money than we are at present prepared to expend.

"It must be admitted that these deficiencies were emphasized. But by being emphasized they were put in a better light for study and we believe the maneuvers accomplished a great deal of good."

Man Hit by Auto Held as Disorderly

A man was struck by an automobile in Montgomery County, Md., last night and arrested for disorderly conduct.

Charles Wiltshire, 29, of Fairland, Md., was hit, police said, by an automobile operated by Ward Grabill, of Union Bridge, Md., on Georgia avenue near the fire station in Silver Spring. After treatment by Dr. Norman Shoemaker, he was detained at Silver Spring police station.

Capital News In Brief

Filling Station Robbed

Warren Bass, 20, of Arlington, Va., told police a man entered the filling station he manages at Fifteenth and Church streets northwest, just before closing time last night, and robbed the cash register of $50. Bass was forced into a washroom at the point of a pistol by the thief who tied his hands with tape.

Since already almost 4,000 people have seen at the District Morgue the body of a mulatto woman found at Atlanta, Ga., without identifying hr. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said last night the body would be taken from public inspection today at 6 p. m. The woman was discovered at Atlanta a week ago, crammed in a trunk.

Police Hunt Wheels

Washington police last night were seeking four red automobile wheels and Fairfax County police were on the lookout for an automobile without four red wheels.

A few minutes after Metropolitan Police received word Fairfax County police had discovered four red wheels in a clump of woods, a man entered police headquarters here and reported his automobile, with red wheels, was stolen.

It was discovered, after much consultation, that the wheels the Fairfax woods were not those from the car reported stolen. Washington police continued to search for four wheels and Fairfax police to delve into the fastnesses of their county for an automobile with four red wheels missing.

Mrs. Anna Mickel Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna M. Mickel, 72, for 27 years matron in charge of laundry at the city postoffice, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Lee's funeral home, Fourth and Massachusetts avenue northeast, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Mickel died Sunday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Hazel B. Wege, 1617 H street southeast. She came to Washington 54 years ago from Zanesville, Ohio, where she was born. She retired from the postoffice in 1932.

Mrs. Mickel was a member of Mirian Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and of St. John's Lutheran Church.

Car Robberies Believed Solved; 4 Boys Held

A long series of automobile robberies was believed solved by the Alexandria, Va., police department yesterday, with the arrest of three boys and a 19-year-old youth. They admitted several of the thefts, the officers said.

The three boys were placed on probation for a year, following a brief session of the juvenile court, but the hearing of the youth was continued.

ICC Curtails Bus Service On Va. Route

Commuters Contend Auto-Rail Line Can Remedy Finances

Bus service on a route in Arlington and Fairfax counties (Va.) was curtailed temporarily yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission, while patrons of the Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co. contended before the State Corporation Commission in Richmond the financial plight of the line might be remedied.

Developments were:

Discontinuance of 3½ miles of bus line of the Arlington & Fairfax Motor Transportation Co., between Glebe road and Falls Church, was authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This service, under the ruling, would be turned over the the Virginia & Maryland Coach Co., Inc.

Before the Virginia State Corporation Commission at Richmond, Everett P. Coxen, president of the Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co., said his company had been fortunate in having no accidents but "if we carry on someone may be killed in the future."

Commuters Protest

The Fairfax Commuters League, headed by William F. Morian, told the State commission the auto-railway line supplied necessary transportation for school children and commuters.

Coxen told the State commission the auto-rail line has made no profit since 1929. In addition to operating losses, he testified, it owes a first mortgage of $38,000 and about $90,000 on equipment and had operated on a cash basis since June 1.

Coxen recommended that operation of his line be abandoned on or before September 1.

Users of the auto-rail line told the commission in Richmond, according to the Associated Press, they did not believe the line was in hopeless financial condition. Their testimony followed that of company officials that the line had operated at a loss since 1937 and before then, when it was operated by another company as an electric railway.

Case Under Advisement

The State commission took the case under advisement without indicating when its decision would be rendered.

A delegation from the Fairfax Commuters League contended that by abandoning a small part of the line, eliminating nonessential service during the middle of the day, restoring commutation fares which some time ago were discontinued, and instituting certain operating economies, the railroad could be continued profitably.

John W. Sunkel, safety engineer for the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., reported the road bed, including ties and rails, in a hazardous condition at numerous points and said some of the equipment should be replaced.

May Lose Insurance

If the commission held the company must continue service, and improvements were not made, Sunkel said he would recommend to his company that liability insurance coverage be cancelled.

A delegation protesting before the Interstate Commerce Commission here abandonment of the 3½-mile portion of the bus line contended buses would be overcrowded if all traffic is thrown on one line.

While the ICC permitted discontinuance of the segment of line, it said, "we may authorize additional operations if found to be required by . . . public convenience and necessity."

Army Increases Men For Canal Defense

The Army announced yesterday that 225 enlisted men and eight officers of the Sixty-third Coast Artillery, anti-aircraft section, would sail September 2 from Fort McArthur, Calif., for Panama, the first contingent to be ordered there since Congress provided for strengthening of the Canal Zone defenses.

War Department plans call for an ultimate increase of 7,360 enlisted men, bringing the total to about 24,000.

Isaminger Asks Health School For Public Here

'Rendezvous' Would Cut Hospital Costs Greatly, He Asserts

The establishment of a "Health Rendezvous" in the Nation's Capital was urged yesterday by Dr. Melvin Price Isaminger, Health Department director of public health instruction.

"Washington is the logical city for the greatest public education center in the country . . . where the community could go to learn the essential facts of everyday health problems. The public expense of hospitals and medical services for preventable illness in Washington is too staggering to dispute the need for public health education," Dr. Isaminger said.

Speaking at the District WPA Health Institute, Dr. Isaminger said the "rendezcous" should be erected in the downtown area and equipped for demonstrations, displays and lectures to educate the public in disease prevention and health maintenance.

"A vigorous program of health education in 10 years would pay for itself far out of proportion to the amount invented and relieve the public purse of the appalling cost of hospitalization," he concluded.

Germany Exceeds World War Size, U. S. Society Says

Chancellor Hitler's relatively bloodless "war of nerves" not only has restored Germany proper to its pre-Versailles Treaty size, but has added more square miles to its territory than it had prior to the World War, according to a National Geographic Society survey made public yesterday.

The report said:

"The seven items of territorial loss imposed upon Germany by the Versailles treaty carried also a loss of some 4,000,000 people. * * * By recent acquisitions, Germany has repaired her gross population losses and has made a net gain of 19,000,000 people over the pre-war number of Germans."

Germany yielded 27,993 square miles at the end of the World War. By acquiring Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Memel, not part of Germany during the World War, she has expanded 37,212 square miles in recent months.

Md. Motorists Must Answer 50 Questions in Test

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 28.—Persons seeking automobile driving permits will be required to answer fifty questions pertaining to highway laws before they will be issued a license, Commissioner of Motor Vechicles W. Lee Elgin announced. Booklets containing the questions will be issued with 30-day cards. No person will be permitted to take an examination less than 15 days after obtaining the 30-day card, he said.

Persons whose licenses have been suspended or revoked and who seek return of their license also will be required to answer the fifty questions.

Liquor Board Asks $1,000 For Samples

Additional $200 in '41 Budget Urged For Better Check On Licensees

An additional $200 for purchase of liquor samples has been requested by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for its next year's budget, it was revealed in estimates disclosed by District Commissioners yesterday.

The ABC Board allotted $800 for the purpose during the current fiscal year, requested $1,000 for 1941.

"It is obvious that the investigators," the estimate request read, "to frequent the premises of licensees without detection, must spend money for samples. It is also obvious that the investigators cannot be expected to spend their own money for this purpose. Consequently, not too limited expense accounts should be furnished to permit a complete check on the almost 1,900 licensees . . . Operating on the $800 basis showed conclusively that the limitation of about $8 a month for each investigator was insufficient to permit a complete and thorough check on the licensees, a condition which makes possible loss of taxes and unrestrained violations of the law."

$700 for Pay Increases

The board also asked for an additional $700 for administrative promotions, i. e., salary increases, for its staff. The total requested was $45,060, as compared with $44,580 appropriated for the current year.

The estimates for the Corporation Counsel's office, also released yesterday, contemplated an increase of $16,700 above the present appropriation, bringing the total requested for next year to run the office to $139,140. The increase would be devoted exclusively to the hiring of five additional employes.

These would be two additional tax lawyers, at $6,000 and $5,600, who would work on features of the District income tax law, enacted at the last session of Congress, involving "new methods of raising revenue . . . entirely new to this jurisdiction." The others would be two clerks and a chauffeur.

Earlier in the day, estimates were released for the National Capital Parks and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The latter office's request for $343,370 is almost $200,000 less than the appropriation for the current year, due to a reduction of $200,000 in the amount to be reimbursed to the Federal Government.

Debt Refunding Involved

During the current year, $500,000 is appropriated to refund a debt to the Federal Government of $16,000,000. The money was made available by an act of May 29, 1930, to acquire land for park and playground purposes. Originally the rate of repayment was at $1,000,000 annually, but subsequent amendments permit the District to repay at the rate of not less than $300,000 a year. To date, $7,478,700 has been appropriated for repayment, and $5,231,211 has been repaid.

The planning commission also asked for a few slight salary increases and $5,000 to purchase small areas around District-Maryland boundary stones for park purposes.

The National Capital Parks' request for $934,642, despite a provision for automatic promotions for park police, is about $13,000 less than the appropriation for 1940. The reduction is in a nonrecurring item of that amount carried this year to erect lamp standards along Constitution avenue.

Public hearings will be held at the District Building, beginning September 7, on these and other estimates that are expected to make a total budget of $80,000,000 for the District in 1941.

Yanks Blast Tigers, 18-2, for Tenth Straight

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1939 ****

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—A mild sort of tragedy that may leave its mark on the Washington Ball Club of the future has befallen the Nats within the past few days in the West. It concerns Cecil Travis, who represents the Nats' only medium of barter in the player market, and their chief hope of making a trade for a first baseman.

POVICH

Detroit was, admittedly, the one spot where the Nats could hope to pick up a first baseman. The Tigers are in crying need of a shortstop and they happen to have two first basemen. Conceivably, fetch them Travis in a deal for Rudy York; if not they may have been interested in a trade that would an even-up trade, a deal that by the inclusion of another player by the Nats might be made.

If the Tigers ever were interested in Travis, and the evidence is strong that that was the case, the chances are now that their interest has cooled. Because it was the misfortune of Travis—and of Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris—that the Nats' shortstop in the series at Detroit last week played the worst ball he has been guilty of all season.

Travis Hardly Impressed Tigers

What the Tigers saw last week when they saw Travis was a bungling, butter-fingered fielder whose throwing wasn't so good, either. He muffed an easy double-play chance and paved the way for the Tigers to win the game that day. He exhibited an obvious uncertainty on ground balls, and at bat he achieved nothing more than a single.

The Detroit club, on that performance by Travis, could scarcely be blamed for laughing down an suggestion that they surrender York. "We don't need a shortstop that badly, especially that kind of a shortstop," was undoubtedly Manager Del Baker's reaction.

So, anything that was brewing between the Nats and the Tigers, cooled to icicle degree. Detroit is out as far as bartering Travis is concerned. Clark Griffith must look in another direction if he is serious about exchanging Travis for a first baseman.

The pity of it is that the Detroit bosses could not have seen Cecil Travis perform for the past two days in the Nats' games here in St. Louis, because here he has been as brilliant as he was shoddy at Detroit. In St. Louis he has been making plays that only great shortstops can make. In the double-header of yesterday, Travis elicited gasp after gasp from the fans, the Browns and his own teammates with his play in the field.

He roamed to the right and the left with equal facility and deadly effect. Virtually all of the 13 chances he accepted were tough. Some of them loomed impossible until he converted them into putouts. He went behind second base on two occasions for bare-handed stops and flipped the ball behind his back to Buddy Myer for force plays. Oldest inhabitants of the St. Louis press box were of a single mind that no shortstop had ever turned in such a scintillating afternoon.

Fielding Improves as Hitting Slumps

And it is a fact that this season Travis has been a remarkably effective shortstop. In the year when his batting slumped—he is under .300 for the first time in six years in the big leagues—he has magically acquired a field touch of which he was never deemed capable. There never were any complaints about his throwing arm, but there was always the suspicion that he could not get the jump on a ground ball. He has been getting that jump.

If Travis is such a potent package, the natural question is: "Why don't the Nats keep him?" Well, as a matter of fact, Clark Griffith is not tumbling over himself to trade Travis, but he would give up his shortstop if the proper kind of a trade presented itself. And a proper trade as far as Griffitn is concerned is: Travis for an established slugger, preferably a first baseman, like Rudy York.

Certainly the Nats' owner indicated that he considered Travis trading material when he separated himself from $40,000 for Jimmy Pofahl, the Minneapolis shortstop who will join the Nats next spring. Griffith is confidently assuming that Pofahl will be an able replacement for Travis in the event he is traded. The Nats' owner has not yet made a mistake in any of his expensive purchases.

He paid $50,000 for Earl McNeely at the suggestion of Scout Joe Engel and McNeely stepped into a regular outfield job immediately and justified the purchase price. He paid $65,000 for First Baseman Joe Kuhel on the recommendation of Engel, and Kuhel for seven years provided the Nats with a capable, often brilliant first base job. And now it is Pofahl, and Griffith is willing to gamble on his ability to play shortstop for the Nats.

And another thing. The Nats need punch. Travis, though habitually a high-average hitter, is a slap-hitter. Griffith, with his line-up devoid of long-distance slugging, feels he must acquire at least one long hitter. Lately it has become something of a passion with him. That's why he'd be willing to part with Travis who is the kind of trading material who would fetch a slugger to the Nats.

Hartnett Works 1,771st Game, Cubs Win, 5-3

Phils Lose as Gabby Ties Mark Catching For Single Club

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Manager Gabby Hartnett tied a major record today as his Chicago Cubs, behind the effective pitching of the veteran Charley Root, tumbled the Phillies, 5 to 3.

Hartnett caught his 1,721st game, tying the record of catching for a single club established by Ray Schalk, of the Chicago White Sox.

The Cubs scored four runs in the second inning on singles by Dick Bartell and Stanley Hack, a triple by Charley Root, and a double by August Galan. They got the other run in the ninth on a home run by Glen Russell.

The Phillies scored their first run in the seventh on a double by Merrill May and a single by Sylvester Johnson. Two others came in the ninth on a single by George Scharein, doubles by V. Davis and Pinch Hitter Hafey, who hit for Johnson.

Cornell-Penn Grid Tilt Rescheduled For November 25

Philadelphia, Aug. 28 (AP).—The traditional Thanksgiving Day football game between Pennsylvania and Cornell will be played this year on Saturday, November 25, instead of November 23, the day President Roosevelt has announced he would designate as Thanksgiving Day.

It will be the forty-sixth game between the two universities and the first time since 1895 that it will not have been played on turkey day.

Both teams have games on Saturday, November 18, and it was felt the players would not have sufficient rest if the game was played on the new Thanksgiving date.

Fred Apostoli Decisions Lee

Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Freddie Apostoli, recognized as middleweight champion in New York and California, tonight won a split decision over Glenn Lee, the "Nebraska Wildcat," in a slow ten-round bout which drew boos from the 20,000 spectators.

Referee Freddie Mastrean warned the fighters three times to quit "stalling" or else he'd stop the bout.

Sammy Angott, No. 2 lightweight contender, in another ten-rounder avenged two previous defeats at the hands of Billy Marquart as featherweights and gained a unanimous decision over the Chicago lad. Angott, formerly of Washington, Pa., but now fighting out of Louisville, weighed 133¾; Marquart, 133.

Zengaras Gets Verdict Over Jimmy Murray

New York, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—Georgie Zengaras scored an eight-round decision over Jimmy Murray tonight in the main event, a New York neighborhood brawl, at Coney Island Veledrome. Zengaras, from the East Side, weighed 146¼; Murray, from Brooklyn, 139¾. Al Franklin, 146½, Washington, D. C., outpointed Corky Dulgerian, 151, Newburgh, N. Y., in the opening four-rounder.

Williams' Circuit Clout in Eighth Beats Mel Harder

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—Ted Williams hit one of Mel Harder's three-two pitches over the rightfield wall today at League Park and gave Boston a 6-5 win over Cleveland. The homer, Williams' twentieth of the season, came in the eighth with Joe Vosmik, who had walked, and Jimmy Foxx, who had singled, on base.

Up to that time the Indians seemed on their way to their eighth straight victory, and Harder en route to his seventh straight. In the seventh Hal Trosky had hit his twenty-second homer, with Ben Chapman abase. That headed Eldon Auker for the showers, but he was the official winner.

Umpire Bill McGowan banished Johnny Peacock in the sixth when Jeff Heath slid around the Boston catcher and scored after Ken Keltner had tapped out. Peacock protested vehemently.

Grand Circuit Meet Canceled

Cleveland, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Grand Circuit Harness Race meeting scheduled for North Randall race track here September 18 to 26, was canceled today.

J. Bedford French, trustee for the Cleveland Jockey Club now under reorganization, announced the action. The organization, which acquired a 10-year lease on the track last winter and held the first running race meeting in North Randall history during the spring, indicated financial difficulties were responsible for today's decision.

Built 30 years ago by the late H. K. Devereaux and associates as a shrine to harness racing, North Randall has never been without a Grand Circuit program until this year.

Lohrman, Ott Team To Beat Cincinnati, 3-1

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 28.—Master Melvin Ott and young Bill Lohrman combined today to give the Giants a 3-to-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, but despite the defeat, the Rhinelanders maintained their 5-game lead at the head of the National League pnnnant parade.

Ott's single in the first inning drove in one run, and his twenty-seventh homer of the campaign, in the fourth, sent the other two Giant tallies across. Lohrman, meantime, held the Reds to seven hits and blanked them until the ninth when three singles and a fly pushed their only run across.

But, while the Reds lost, so did the St. Louis Cardinals, in second place in the league standings, so the setback did no particular harm.

What may be of more importance to the league leaders was an injury to big Ernie Lombardi, their No. 1 catcher, who was struck on the groin by a foul tip off Tom Hafey's bat. He had to retire from the game and Will Hershberger took his place. However, the injury was not considered serious.

Lohrman now stands as the league's top "jinx" for the Reds. With today's victory he has set back the pennant favorites four times this season.

A trio of Reds' pitchers, beginning with Gene Thompson, who tossed the first five frames, also hurled a seven-hitter, but Ott was the big difference. With one out in the first inning, Jojo Moore singled and went to second on a fielder's choice. Then Mel cracked a single to left, scoring Moore. Frank Demaree opened the fourth frame with a base hit off Billy Werber's glove. Ott promptly poked his round-tripper into the lower deck in rightfield, to put the game on ice.

Bees Pound Cards, 10-5

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 28.—The St. Louis Cardinals' grip on second place loosened a bit today when the Bees, getting off to a six-run start against Rookie Nate Andrews, gave them a 10-5 drubbing.

Al Moran, Lankly right-handed youngster up from the Bees' Hartford farm, went the distance for Boston and held the Cards to nine hits, one a homer by Terry Moore in the fifth inning.

The Bees scored six runs in the first on four hits two errors and two passes, added a seventh tally in the second when Buddy Hassett tripled, and countered the last three in the fifth inning against Tom Sunkel, who finished the game.

Catcher Don Padgett made 10 of the Cards' 24 putouts. He nailed two Boston runners at the plate. Hassett came out of a batting slump by hitting safely his first four times at bat, a performance duplicated by the Cards' Stu Martin.

Browns Make 17 Hits, Rout Nationals, 12-2

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—The Nats broke an eight-game losing streak today—the eight-game losing streak of the St. Louis Browns. They did it with an effective four-hit attack against the pitching of Rookie Bill Trotter combined with a 17-hit hurling performance by two Washington throwers.

The score was 12 to 2, which is fairly indicative of how futile the Nats were today. In fact, the Nats would have suffered the ignominy of a shutout by the Browns save for a home run inserted into the proceedings by Cecil Travis with Taft Wright on base in the fourth inning. That blow by Travis was not very exciting, however, it merely reducing the Browns' lead at the moment to 9 to 2.

The gentlemen who actually broke the Browns' losing streak were Alex Alexandra and Pete Appleton. Manager Bucky Harris waved Alex off the scene after the first inning, in which he had surrendered three runs to the Browns, but he mercilessly left Appleton in the game to absorb the full punishment, which

College All-Stars In Final Practice For Charity Game

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—The college all-stars, resplendent in their red, white and blue game uniforms, held a dress rehearsal in Soldier Field tonight, ending preparations for their charity football game with the New York Giants.

The prochampions play the college seniors of last fall in Soldier Field Wednesday night with a crowd of 80,000 already assured for this the sixth annual all-star attraction.

The Giants, champions of the National Pro League, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow from their Superior, Wis., camp to hold a final drill Tuesday night.

Tonight's practice session consisted of passing and kicking.

DiMaggio's Two Homers Pace Attack

Joe Drives In 8 Runs; Champs Make 18 Hits To Rout Bridges; Russo Holds Tigers

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 28.—The New York Yankees advanced today from the "murderers' row" to the "slaughter-house squad" stage. They hit the helpless Tigers with everything in the book and piled up an 18-to-2 victory to stretch their current winning streak to ten straight.

Joe DiMaggio kept his hand in by walloping a homer with the bases loaded and another with two mates aboard. Charley Keller also clouted a round-tripper with one on. Meantime, young Marius Russo, southpaw rookie, stopped the Tigers cold with four hits for his fourth victory this year against three setbacks.

Every member of the Yankee starting line-up hit safely at least once in the 18-hit attack. All but Joe Gordon drove in at least one run—DiMaggio sending eight across. And all but Babe Dahlgren and Russo scored at least one run. Altogether, it was a fair afternoon.

This victory left the Yanks 13 games in front of the American League pack, since the second-place Boston Red Sox also won their game.

From the first inning on, when Keller clubbed his sixth homer of the year, there was nothing to it but a Yankee hit parade.

DiMaggio's homer, with "standing room only" on the bases, headed a 5-run third inning, which sent Tommym Bridges, the Detroit starting pitcher, to the showers with his fifth defeat of the season against 16 victories.

Alton Benton replaced Bridges and was touched, slightly, for 6 runs from the fourth through the eighth innings. Slicker Coffman took over in the ninth and served the final home-run ball to DiMaggio, which brought Deadpan Joe's four-bagger total for the year to 32, and his runs-batted-in sum to 101.

Chisox Defeat Macks in 9th, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 28.—John Duncan Rigney won his ninth straight game tonight when he limited the Philadelphia Athletics to seven hits as the Chicago White Sox scored in the ninth inning to win, 5 to 4.

A crowd of 18,000 saw the game. It was the smallest night turnout since the Sox turned on the lights a few weks ago.

Walker's single produced the decisive run after Jackie Hayes and Mike Kreevich had walked in the last inning.

The victory gave Rigney, who struck out eight men, his twelfth decision of the season, and enabled the winners to gain a full game on Cleveland in the battle for third place.

28 Middle Atlantic Golfers Seek 5 Amateur Berths Today

Brownell, Greiner Are Favorites

Spencer Overton Sets Practice Round Pace With 2-Under Par 68

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Five qualifying berths for the National Amateur championship will be at stake today at Five Farms as a small but select field of 28 golfers from Maryland, Virginia and the District battle for 36 holes over the championship layout of the Baltimore Country Club.

Rather it will be a battle for four berths among 27 players as they've virtually conceded a place to Bobby Brownell, Manor's newly crowned Suburban Invitation champion, who led the sectional trials last year at Congressional and received the U. S. G. A. medal.

A majority of the field practiced yesterday with Spencer Overton's 68, Ralph Bogart's 70 and Brownell's 73 the best scores.

Playing the finest golf of his 20 years, Brownell will be a heavy favorite to gain one of the places to the forty-third championship of the U. S. G. A. over the North Shore course, Glenview, Ill., September 11-16.

Greiner Also in Form

But from the Baltimore fans Otto Greiner will receive the most support as the Rodgers Forge youngster is also playing fine golf, and could make quite a name in the championship proper.

Heading the Virginia delegation is State Champion Wynsol Spencer, of Newport News, and Morton McCarthy, the tournament golfer from Virginia Beach. The latter will have to better his Suburban Invitation showing to qualify, however, as he lost to Gene Bruning in the first round and to Spencer Overton in the consolation finals, 5 and 4. He had a 78 in practice yesterday.

The District's hopes will fall mainly on Page Hufty, Chevy Chase; Martin McCarthy, who qualified when the trails were over the same course two years ago; Volney Burnett, the Federal champion from Indian Spring, and Ralph Bogart, the long but wild hitting youngster from Army and Navy.

With Greiner the favorite of the Baltimoreans, they'd better leave a place for Spencer Overton, the Rolling Road champion, who'll probably be around his consistent scoring figure of 72 or 73, and possibly Ernie Caldwell, three-time winner of the Baltimore C. C. Invitation tournament.

Other D. C. Entries

The District will also be represented by Earle Skinker, Columbia's junior champ, who's been promised the trip to Chicago by his father, B. E. Skinker, if he qualifies; George Miller, Karl W. Corby, jr., George M. Ferris, all of Columbia, and Gene Pittman, who's been giving par a beating lately at Congressional.

Two rounds within one or two shots of par will undoubtedly lead the field but anything over 73—74, 147, will probably be on the outside looking in when the places are decided around dusk.

Throughout the Nation, 727 additional amateurs will seek 155 places to the championship in scattered sectional qualifying rounds. Seven former champions, Johnny Fischer, Johnny Goodman, Willie Turnesa, Francis Ouimet, Charles Evans, jr., Jess Sweetser and C. Ross Somerville, of Canada, are exempt, while three foreign stars also automatically qualify for the medal rounds in Chicago. Otherwise the Bud Wards, Frankie Strafacis, Pat Abbotts and others will all try their hand in the trial rounds today.

The foreign players are P. J. Clifford, Mexico City, many time Mexican champion; S. B. Roberts, Wales, and John Langley, England.

East Potomac Professional Ties in Sweeps Play at Country Club of York, Pa., with 73 George Diffenbaugh, George Vass Tie for 3d

York, Pa., August 28.—Pete Henry, sporting goods salesman from Philadelphia, and Harry A. Wisotzkey, amateur from the host Country Club of York, won the invitation pro-amateur here today over Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park pro, and James Crossen, his amateur partner, both of Washington, D. C.

Shorey finished in a three-way tie in the pro sweepstakes play, going out in 36 and back in 37 for a 73, a score deadlocked by Dick Renaghan, Norristown, N. J., pro, and C. Banas, Mount Holly, N. J., mentor.

Henry and Wisotskey scored 36, 33—69, for the winning score, and the former won the guaranteed first prize of $100. Shorey and Crossen were out in 34, but slipped to 36 on the back nine for the 70 and second place finish.

The Kenwood Club duo, from Washington, of Pro George Diffenbaugh and Amateur George O. Vass, finished in a four-way tie for third with 35, 36—71. Included in the tie was the Baltimore team of Andy Gibson, Bonnie View pro, and W. W. Wagner, Baltimore C. C. amateur.

Other Washington teams finished out of the money. Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, and Fryse Robbraugh, of York, scored 36, 36—72, while the Columbia Club team of Fred McLeod and Norman Frost had 38, 36—74; Eddie Stevens, assistant pro at Manor Club, and William R. Kaufman, York, had 36, 39—75, and Tom Doerer, jr., East Potomac, and Ed Scanlan, had 37, 41—78.

Despite the guaranteed top prize money, only 34 teams competed out of an expected field of about 60.

Mrs. R. C. Winmill To Defend Title At Warrenton

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, former master fox hunter of the Warrenton Hunt, will defend the John Barton Payne Perpetual Memorial Challenge Trophy in the Corinthian Class Saturday and Monday during the fortieth annual Warrenton Horse Show.

The show this year will inaugurate a champion 3-year-old event. The trophy for the event, offered by a group of Virginia horsewomen, will be presented to the winner by Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

Among the socialites expected to attend the show are Miss Harriet Behrend, Erie, Pa.; Mrs. Harry Frank, Warrenville, N. J.; Miss Patricia Bolling, Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Magill Smith, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Scott H. Nesbit, Betty Leigh, of Covington; George Thompson, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Count Mario di Zoppolo, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Virginia Beach.

Baltimore Girl Loses In Essex Net Tourney

Essex County Club, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., Aug. 28 (INS).—Play got under way this afternoon in the fifteenth annual Essex County Women's Invitation Tennis tournament.

Helen Pederson, Stamford, Conn., seeded fourth, coasted through her first round match with Grace Parker, Baltimore, Md., 6—2, 6—2. She was the oly seeded player on the courts, with Defending Champion Alice Marble, and the other favored players, Dorothy Bundy, and Virginia Wolfenden, scheduled to start play tomorrow.

Sports Center Rewards Sholl's Cafe Girls' Ten

The Sports Center sporting goods store has donated awards to Sholl's Cafe, winner of the Washington-Virginia Girls' Softball League and District champion for two straight years.

Jeffra, Cox In Exhibition Here Sunday

Harry Jeffra, who will meet Joey Archibald for the world featherweight championship here in Griffith Stadium, September 11, will be the featured performer in an exhibition match Sunday at Congressional Golf Club when he pairs with the host pro, Wiffey Cox.

COX

Their opponents will be selected this week. Arrangements were completed through Dr. O. U. Singer, golf committee chairman at Congressional and local boxing judges.

The match will not be Cox's first with a fighter preparing for a championship bout, as he served with Max Schmeling in the latter's training camp, and has also played with Freddie Miller, Max Baer, Gene Tunney, Jimmy McLarnin, Tony Canzoneri and Barney Ross when they were prepping for title bouts.

Jeffra will interrupt his training routine for the match. He shoots consistently in the 70s, and played in the Suburban Invitation Tournament last week, where he had a 77 in the qualifying rounds and lost his second match in the second flight.

The match will be open to the public.

One-Armed Driver Races Here Tonight

Wes Saegesser, the one-armed driver from St. Louis, and Mel Hansen, Eastern champion from Chicago, who will be making this first appearance here, will share the spotlight tonight in the weekly midget auto racing at the Capital Speedway.

Saegesser's appearance will attract special attention because he is bringing a new Offenhauser car, specially built for him by a Los Angeles manufacturer.

Another of tonight's features is expected to be a special grudge race between Red Redmond, of Atlanta, and Cowboy O'Rourke, of Chicago, continuing a rivalry of long standing.

Junior Medal To Rita's 83 At Columbia

Also Wins First Match; Ben Hartig, Solon Kemon Win

George Rita won medalist honors and his first-round match in the Columbia Country Club junior championship yesterday in the annual match play event for the youngsters under 21 years of age.

In the morning qualifying play, Rita was out in 42 and back in 41 for an 83, with all fours and fives on his card, with the exception of a six on the long fifth hole. Five of the other seven first-flight qualifiers tied at 87 for second low, Ben Hartig, C. Stockell, Solon Kemon, Joe Barse and Paul Stewart, jr.

The four favorites all won in the afternoon matches, Rita defeating Paul Stewart, jr., 6 and 5, and Kemon won 8 and 6 over Owen Williams. Ben Hartig won on the eighteenth over Joe Barse, while C. Stockell turned in a like margin over Marty West, jr.

Rita meets Hartig and Stockell opposes Kemon in the semifinals this morning, with the finals in all flights carded this afternoon. Twenty-four entered, just filling three flights of eight. Earle Skinker, defending champion, did not compete, according to the rules of the event that bars former champions.

"Reds" Banagan, who's running the event for the boys, wrote in large letters across the score sheet "Playing hookey not allowed in the consolations."

Championship Flight

Second Flight

Third Flight

Pairings

8:30—Rita vs. Hartig; 8:35, Stockell vs. Kemon; 8:50, Woodson vs. Barkdull; 8:55, MacKintosh vs. Horn; 9:10, Walker vs. Crowley; 9:15, Belser vs. Loftus.

Consolations—8:40, Stewart vs. Barse; 8:45, M. West, jr., vs. Williams; 9, Gott vs. Ferry; 9:05, Loos vs. West; 9:20, Ferry vs. Grimes; 9:25, O'Brien vs. Walker.

Jeff Heath Hits Heckler After Fouling Out

Cleveland, Aug. 28 (AP).—Jeff Heath, Cleveland Indian outfielder, punched a remonstrating fan after fouling out in the ninth inning of today's game with the Boston Red Sox, and thereby put himself "on the spot" for the second time in as many days.

"The guy had been riding us all afternoon," the sturdily built player told newsmen who had seen him chased from the field yesterday for angrily tossing his bat into a box seat after striking out.

Vice President C. C. Slapnicka said he would "consider what action to take" on today's outburst after talking to Manager Oscar Vitt tomorrow. The latter, however, asserted he knew nothing of the affair until informed by a spectator.

Heath said the fan rushed down to the railing as he walked to the dugout and assailed him with obscene language.

"I walked over and punched him," the 23-year-old outfielder asserted. "I can't remember where I hit him but I hurt my hand. It was just another blunder in a bad season that has been full of mistakes."

Helen Bernhard Scores In U. S. Girls Net Play

Miss Bernhard defeated Mariana Welke, of Scarsdale, N. Y., 6—1, 6—1.

Other favorites who advanced included Marguerita (Cissy) Madden of Boston, 16-year-old National indoor champion, who defeated Peggy Longstreth of Princeton, 6—0, 6—2, and Nellie Sheer, top ranking junior of Miami, Fla., who conquered Constance Hammett, West Englewood, N. J., 6—4, 6—2.

Patent Office Netmen Beat War Department

War Department closed its 1939 tennis season yesterday by losing a 3-2 match to Patent Office in the Departmental League.

Stocklinski and Goldsmith (P. O.) defeated Sherburne and Bitonti, 6—3, 6—1; Riordon and Staubly (P. O.) defeated Smith and Sinkor, 6—2, 6—2; Farley and Lance (W. D.) defeated Moncure and Patrick; Lovewell and Petrie (P. O.) defeated Edmonds and Tew, 4—6, 8—6, 6—4; Phillips and Maness (W. D.) defeated Woods and Ball, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4.

2 Infantrymen Tied for U. S. Rifle Crown

Brown and White Score 99 in Service Rifle Contest

By the Associated Press

Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Two infantrymyent tied today for the Coast Guard trophy, beating out 1,925 other three-caliber riflemen, but two brothers from Connecticut, firing on the small-bore range, stole the show at the national rifle matches.

Coates Brown, sergeant in the 22d Infantry at Fort McClellan, Ala., and William W. White, corporal in the 15th Infantry at Fort Lewis, Wash., tied with scores of 99 in the service rifle event calling for ten shots rapid fire, kneeling or sitting, and ten shots rapid fire prone, the first at 200 yards and the second at 300. They'll shoot off Tuesday for the title.

Jack and Jim Lacy, of New Haven, Conn., brothers, were the day's features, however. In the Western trophy match, over the Dear course of 20 shots prone at 50 yards and 20 at 100 yards, Jack and Jim finished in a second place deadlock with identical scores of 400 with 31 in the X ring. A. O. Franz, of Alton, Ill., won the event with 400 and 32 X's, equalling the record.

William F. Johnson, instrance inspector of Jamaica, N. Y., captured the Crowell Trophy match, 10 shots at 600 yards, prone, by beating Sergt. Hansford Wagner, of the U. S. Infantry team, defending champion, in a shootoff.

They tied yesterday with perfect scores, and today Johnson rammed his first shot into the bullseye for a five while Sergt. Wagner scored a four, ending the event with a single shot by each.

Small bore. Westery Trophy, Dewar course, any sights: A. O. Franz, Alton, Ill., 400-32. Life members Dewar, metallic sights: E. N. Moore, jr., Detroit, Mich., 398-27. 100-yard all comers, metallic sights: small fore match, winner, W. B. Woodring, of Alton, Ill., with 399-27.

Center fire, 20 shots slow fire, 50 yards—Emmet Jones, Los Angeles, Calif., 196 of 200. Harry Reeves, Detroit police, 193.

Center fire, 20 shots timed fire at 25 yards—Harry Reeves, Detroit police, 200, 46x (new record); Paul Chapman, U. S. Treasury, Washington, D. C., 200, 45x.

Center fire, 20 shots rapid fire at 25 yards—John E. Heath, U. S. Marines, 197; Harry Reeves, 196.

Center fire restricted 10 shots slow fire at 50 yards, 10 shots timed and 10 rapid fire at 25 yards—George J. Kecko, Indiana State Police, 281; William M. Martin, Miami, Fla., 276.

Center fire medalists class, course same as restricted—Emmet Jones, Los Angeles, 286; Maurice La Londe, Detroit police, 284.

30-Caliber rifle, Coast Guard Trophy, 10 shots rapid fire kneeling or sitting at 200 yards, and 10 shots rapid fire prone at 300 yards—Coats Brown, sergeant, Twenty-second Infantry, Fort McClellan, Ala., 99, tied with William W. White, corporal, Fifteenth Infantry, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Marine Corps Cup, 10 shots prone at 600 and 1,000 yards—Claud L. Floyd, jr., private, Marine Corps, Hinesville, Ga., 100, 13v (new record), tied with Melvin O. Wilson, gunner's mate, Coast Guard, Baltimore, Md.

Smith-Ritzenberg Win in Doubles

C. Alphonso Smith and Allie Ritzenberg the top-seeded combination, yesterday reached the doubles final of the Government tennis championships at Potomac Park courts with a hard-fought three-set victory over unseeded Herb Shenkin and E. Ramey Donovan. The scores were 5—7, 6—4, 6—3.

Smith, who dethroned Ritzenberg as singles champion Sunday, lobbed and volleyed with telling effect to set the stage for Allie's driving forehand and overheads at the net.

They will meet Samuel Hayes and Ray Stocklinski for the title tomorrow afternoon at 5:30.

United Types Ten Plays Carley's Tavern Tonight

After three weeks' absence, softball will return to Ballston Stadium, Arlington, Va., tonight at 8 o'clock with a "grudge" battle between Carley's Tavern, Regal League champion, and United Typewriters.

The Hoffberger Fuel team, of Baltimore, will play a return engagement here at 9:15 against the recently formed District All-Stars.

Shapiro Scores TKO

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Maxie Shapiro of New York scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Lancaster, of Wilmington, Del., tonight in the main bout, scheduled for eight rounds, at Dexter Park in Brooklyn. The referee stopped the bout at 2:02 of the seventh. Shapiro weighed 129¾; Lancaster, 130¼.

Delphine IX, Gold Cup Boat, Wrecked in Test

Pilot Joe Schaeffer And Mechanic McKenzie Injured in Crack-up

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 28.—The speedboat Delphine IX, millionaire Horace Dodge's contender for the Gold Cup in the impending Labor Day race, leaped from the water on a test run in the Detroit River tonight and sank.

Pilot Joe Schaeffer and Mechanic Ed McKenzie, both of Detroit, were thrown clear, and a race committee boat rescued them. Schaeffer was reported slightly injured.

George Williams, first mate on the schooner Northwest, anchored nearby, said the Delphine IX, known as the "hard luck" boat of the Gold Cup races, was "making about 70 miles an hour" at the time.

"The pilot," Williams said, "gunned the motor as she hit a small wave. She jumped up, turned two flip-flops and went over on her side."

Schaeffer, taken to Charles Godwin Jennings Hospital, was reported to have suffered a crushed chest and stomach injuries. McKenzie, who suffered only a black eye and a scratched nose, refused to go to a hospital.

The Delphine IX received her "hard luck" appelation because she has never finished a Gold Cup race, engine trouble or some other mishap always having forced her out.

Her sinking removed a second entry from the list. Count Theo Rossi, of Italy, who won with his Alagi last year, has informed race officials he cannot leave for America to defend the cup because of the "international situation."

Before last year's race, the then defending champion, Notre Dame, owned by Herb Mendelson, sank during a test run. Pilot Clell Perry was incapacitated for several weeks.

HORACE DODGE

Delphine IX Not Entered In President's Cup Race

"The Delphine IX is not included in the eight entries for the President's Cup race here on the Potomac September 22, 23 and 24," Aubrey Bogley, chairman of the race committee for the President's Cup regatta, said last night.

"The Delphine IX's entry here was based on how it acted in the races at Detroit," he said.

Hazen, Maj. Brown Invited to Present Field Day Awards

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, have been invited to present prizes to winning athletes in the big field day to be staged by the Metropolitan Police Retiring Association at Griffith Stadium Labor Day.

The trophies and medals to be awarded will be on display this week at Pelzman's, Thirteenth and F streets northwest.

Some 300 police will compete for these prizes in 23 track and field events, while Police Boys Club youngsters and other bluecoats will engage in wrestling and boxing matches.

Blablah, Willie Obert Up, Wins Feature at Marlboro

Victor Paces Sky Hostess Across Line

WillieObert Regarded AsOldest Active Rider On U. S. Turf Today; Double Pays $104.10

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Willie Obert, who denies he was the jockey on the winner of the second race at New Orleans on January 21, 1901, but admits he wasn't born yesterday, left seven youthful riders in his wake this afternoon as he won the Chesapeake Beach Purse, feature of today's program. Obert, regarded as the oldest active jockey in this country, brought O. S. Jenning's Blablah to the wire six lengths ahead of the nearest opposition. H. H. Wilson's Sky Hostess was second with Prince Turley, owned by H. M. Simpson, of Washington, in third position.

Blablah set all the pace in last Saturday's Marlboro Hotel Handicap before finishing second to Royal Business. Today, at the shorter route of 5½ furlongs, the 3-year-old daughter of Economic was not extended.

The crowd was well aware of her speed, however, and made her a co-favorite with A. K. Bowie's Cornwallis. The latter, away from the races since Delaware Park, came out of the starting gate sideways and bumped himself and Time Her out of competition.

Blablah was in front at the opening jump and never was threatened. There was a lot of hard riding in the pack that followed her around the course but nothing that resembled a "catcher." Enthusiasm, in the colors of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, was closest to the pace most of the way but faded when the real test came. Sky Hostess drove up under Jockey Johnny Shank's handling to be second ahead of Prince Turley.

The program brought a substantial $104.10 mutuel in the daily double. Those in the crowd of 6,000 who bet a deuce on the "ace and ace" combination of Grouchy, a $23.30 shot in the first race, and Aster Princess, a $5.30 proposition in the second race, collected.

Toast of the Sandlots

JOHNNY THRIFT

Roosevelt High, as most high school baseball fans know, didn't exactly set any world on fire during the 1939 season. It got close to the West section title in the interhigh series, but that was all—close.

Yet observers of the public school games couldn't fail to note Johnny's brilliant play around the third sack for the Riders. He also lugged a big and vicious bat to the plate, most of the Ragged Riders' extra-base hits resulting from his stickwork.

Johnny, between hours as an employe of a local garage, plays with J. C. Flood this summer. Again he seems doomed to play with an underdog club, for the Plumbers haven't been able to do better than third place in two leagues—the Departmental and National City.

There'll be no more high school ball for him. He's too close to the 19-year limit. But Johnny can point to selections on The Washington Post All-High teams of 1937 and 1939 as the first-string third baseman. Meanwhile, he hopes to get with a team that wins something some day.

BURNETT.

†B. Chapman-L. Stewart entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GROUCHY, $23.30, $13.00, $4.10; WAGOLD, $10.10, $3.90; NANCI'S BEST, $2.60.

GROUCHY assumed command at once, saved ground while setting the pace and held away to end under a drive. WAGOLD, slow to begin, worked his way to contention between horses and closed with good energy. NANCI'S BEST, within striking distance from the start, went evenly and failed to rally. OWN ROOM, went to contention with a bold rush on the backstretch and weakened thereafter. MINY MO could not threaten at any stage. BUSY BYRD was off slowly and stopped after being rushed to the leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:36½. Winner, A. Cremen's ch. f. (3), by Purchase—Spanish Aster. Trained by R. J. Cremen. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:27 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASTER PRINCESS, $5.30, $3.10, $2.70; BLUE BOO, $4.70, $3.20; SHORTS, $4.10.

ASTER PRINCESS, hard rushed to take command over KINDLE in the early running, was kept to a hard drive to the end and staved off the closing bid of BLUE BOO. The latter saved ground in the early stages, improved his position along the backstretch and closed with good courage. SHORTS, off poorly, worked his way up gradually and was coming with a rush at the close. CHILLY EBBIE showed a good effort. DEODO went well placed for 3 furlongs and faded. NEEDMORE could not menace at any stage.

Daily Double, Grouchy and Aster Princess, Paid $104.10.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:07. Winner, Mrs. F. Dove's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHESSIE, $9.40, $5.30, $3.80; TULEYRIES LAD, $7.20, $4.90; SON O'STING, $4.40.

CHESSIE, closest to the pace of SON O'STING, rallied when placed to a drive to wear down the leader and closed with good energy. TULEYRIES LAD, allowed to settle into his best stride, came wide for racing room while improving his position and came with a bold rush at the end. SON O'STING set a good pace, but weakened steadily through the stretch. CORA KAY rallied mildly. SMALL CHANGE was hard ridden and had no excuses. HANDLEY was taken up when in tight quarters entering the backstretch.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; allowances. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:38. Winner, O. S. Jennings' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLAHBLAH, $6.40, $3.40, $2.90; SKY HOSTESS, $5.10, 5.10; PRINCE TURLEY (entry), $3.30.

BLAHBLAH took command at once, set a good pace to draw out at his rider's will and was well in hand at the end. SKY HOSTESS rallied when placed to intermittent punishment and closed full of run. PRINCE TURLEY raced on the inside throughout to make a good effort. ANTHUSIASM was closest to the pace in the early stages, but was tiring at the end. CORNWALLIS broke sideways and bumped TIME HER leaving the gate. TRAUMEREI had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Boeralice. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:09½. Winner, M. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKE HEROD, $4.70, $3.00, $2.70; TRIXIE LASS, $3.70, $2.80; LYDE, $3.50.

BROOKE HEROD, not hurried in the opening quarter, went to the front when asked and was kept to a drive to the end. TRIXIE LASS set an early pace, dropped back and came on again when placed to punishment. LYDE weakened after having a mild lead. LADY CIREK was held safe. COUNORA went well placed to the stretch and stopped. ROAN CANOPY had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:39. Off at 4:40½. Winner, J. L. Garthright's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEST POLICY, $15.90, $4.90, $3.20; SCHLEY GOREE, $3.30, $2.70; ITSAMAID, $4.20.

BEST POLICY, racing on his own courage while within striking distance of the pace, came through on the inside at the far turn, took command over SCHLEY GOREE and barely lasted. SCHLEY GOREE was hard used while alternating in setting and pressing the pace with WELSH LAD and held on gamely in the closing test. ITSAMAID, slow to begin, came with a rush in the final quarter and was going fastest at the end. WAR RUMOR moved up menacingly on the outside entering the stretch and weakened. WELSH LAD stopped from early hard usage.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:08½. Off at 5:10½. Winner, W. B. Johnson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEEPWICK, $6.20, $4.40, $3.40; BEACON QUEEN, $10.60, $6.20; ELSIE J., $3.80.

DEEPWICK, steadied along close to the pace, responded willingly when asked and drew out to win easily. BEACON QUEEN, off poorly but rushed along to gain a forward position, disposed of ELSIE J. to get to the front, but could not resist the winner. ELSIE J. was hard ridden while setting the pace and weakened. STEPEE closed gamely. BOULDERDAM was off very slowly, was rushed to contention and stopped.

U. S. Depends on Strategy in Cup Play

Americans Play Aussies Next Week

Cocky Yank Players Figure They Can Defeat Australia, Retain Davis Cup

By the United Press

Haverford, Pa., Aug. 28.—The optimism of youth was apparent tonight as the youngest Davis Cup squad ever to represent America looked forward with greater confidence toward the Australian invasion and next week-end's battle for the international tennis trophy.

The cocky Yankee youngsters, averaging only 20½ years in age, awaited their opponents' arrival with a sanguine expectation that partially dispelled the colud of gloom which has hovered over the Merion Cricket Club the past week.

American strategy was busy in an attempt to put Uncle Sam's boys and the heavily favored lads from down under on a more even footing. Bobby Riggs and Frankie Parker, it was said, will press every point in the opening singles matches Saturday in an effort to tire the Anzac's two-man team, Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, who already are travel-weary from an extended campaign.

U. S. Strategy

Riggs and Parker then could rest the second day while the fatigued Aussies would have to carry on against the hard-hitting young doubles combination of Midshipman Joe Hunt and Two-headed Jack Kramer. This would leave Riggs and Parker fresh for the concluding singles matches Monday, it was figured.

The Hunt-Kramer tandem was expected to be a big factor in the success or failure of America's defense. Kramer at 18 is the youngest player ever to compete in the international event challenge round. Hunt, only 20, has synchronized perfectly with his fellow Californian. Both play fast, aggressive, smashing games, hitting down instead of putting the ball overhead. The unknown combination might reduce Anzac confidence,e it was felt, and make the aussies play a more careful game.

Burden on Riggs

Riggs, who defeated Quist as America retained the cup last year by a 3-2 score, was counted upon to score at least one, if not two points. A strategic player who prefers tq hit from the baseline, he was regardede by experts as the most logical point scorer. He is only 21, and with the 32-year-old Parker will carry the brunt of the attack.

Parker worked out today against Kramer and Coach Bruce Barnes and although he displayed his usual flawless backhand, his forehand appeared weak. Riggs met Hunt in a practice session and both apparently were in fine shape.

The Anzacs are scheduled to hold their first workout tomorrow with the aid of Fred Perry, British professional. The draw for the singles opponents will be made Friday at 2:45 p. m.

Dodgers Recall 14 Montreal Club Players

List Includes Seven Pitchers, Topped by Veteran Lefty La Master

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 28.—The Dodgers today recalled 14 optioned players from Montreal of the International League, Nashville and Memphis of the Southern Association, Milwaukee of the American Association and Elmira of the Eastern League.

The list includes seven pitchers, topped by "Lefty" Wayne La-Master, one-time Phillies' hurler, and Gene Schott, former Cincinnati Reds' twirler, three infielders, two outfielders and a pair of catchers.

From Nashville, the Dodgers brought back Catcher Charles George, who has been hitting in the neighborhood of .400; First-sacker Bert Haas, well over .350; Pitchers George Jeffcoat and Sam Nahem, and Shortstop Woody Williams.

In addition to Schott and La-Master, Pitcher Bill Crouch, Infielder Don Ross, Outfielder Goody Rosen and Catcher Chris Hartje also were recalled from Montreal. Pitcher John Gaddy was summoned from Memphis, Outfielder Oris Hockett from Milwaukee and Pitcher Paul Paynick from Elmira.

The Dodgers explained that, with the exception of Montreal; all the clubs appear headed for playoffs in their respective leagues so that those players are not likely to join Brooklyn until 1940.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 28.—Tomorrow is the day Eddie Mead and Al Weill tell it all to the judge—the judge being Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, Col. D. Walker Wear and Private Bill Brown, the oft-maligned members of the New York State Athletic Commission.

CONSIDINE

The fat managers of Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers will be asked why they threatened to have each other knocked off at 20 paces, why they yelled "wolf," why they started the series of charges that has made the public suspect that it paid good dough to witness a barney, and why Mead accuses blunt Bill Brown of predicting knowingly that Armstrong would have five or six rounds taken away from him for fouls. Out of the blizzard of double talk and denials which is certain to ensue, Mead probably will be suspended, until such a time as Armstrong is ready to fight again. This will work about as much hardship on Eddie as would be imposed on an oyster shucker who was forbidden to dissect bivalves during July.

One of the more charming inconsistencies of that prevalent malady called amateurism is that the costs of the amateur all-star football team probably will exceed the costs of hiring the New York Giants to play against the so-called simon pures Wednesday night in Chicago.

Clean-Limbed Amateurs Get Minimum of $150

The amateurs, who often are depicted as clean-limbed collegians whose only interest in the game is an academic desire to stamp out the vulgar challenge of professional football, are paid a minimum of $150 a head, though a couple of them usually are smart enough to stage a coy sit-down that boosts their one-night salary to as much as $500.

Since there are 70 proud and selfless collegians on the all-star squad, as well as a couple of coaches who usually want a $500 fee, the actual amateur pay roll for the Chicago game must run in the neighborhood of $15,000.

To this is added the heavy costs of crating and shipping the amateurs to and from the scene of their gallant attempt to exterminate the regrettable inroads of professionalism, plus the costs of cooping and feeding them.

The pros, who play for a modest percentage, usually find themselves taking less money away than the amateurs, since many of those 80,000 crowds turned out to be 50,000 after going through the cheerless wringer of the auditing department.

Oblivious to the winces of sweet charity, in whose name these unseasonable football tiffs are committed, there has been a fearsome fight for exclusive uses of certain players.

Ward Given Monopolistic Privileges

Arch Ward, who runs the Chicago game, all but put the other charity games out of commission by convincing the National Professional League that his game's priority rights carried monopolistic privileges. At his behest, the league has passed a rule which states that any player who refuses to play on the all-star team of the Chicago game, when solemnly called on to play by the voting public, and yet plays with the all-stars in some rival charity game, shall be punished. A $5,000 fine will be levied against any league team which plays another club on which the errant and choosy young culprit is playing.

A separate peace has been signed between Ward and Stanley Woodward, who runs the annual New York charity game. Woodward had the exclusive rights to Marshall Goldberg, and a couple other stars, in his pocket, and was of a mind to dare the pro league to enforce the $5,000 penalty by keeping the boys out of the Chicago game. But the two great sports-writing benefactors got together and Woodward turned over eight of his simon pures to aid the other all-stars in their plucky fight against the crude mercenaries of Timothy Mara.

The reward for this appeasement was a league promise to give the New York charity game a status equal to the older Midwestern game, though if the truth were known the league probably would like to drop the whole darn business of playing the so-called amateurs, if it could do it gracefully. It is tired of taking those lickings from the amateurs, who are in truth all signed to play pro ball and who sadly outnumber the poor but honest pros who in turn know that if they get hurt in these charity games their firms are contracturally bound to pay them only for two days and then can chuck them off the club.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Cecil Travis was the star performer for the Nats yesterday at St. Louis and to him goes the chief award of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Travis, 6 points, because his long home run atop the center-field roof accounted for the Nats' only two runs of the game, and because he played brilliantly in the field.

To Taft Wright, 3 points, because his two-bagger preceded Travis' homer.

Jimmy Bloodworth	38	Pete Appleton	10
Buddy Lewis	32	Taft Wright	10
George Case	27	Charley Gelbert	7
Dutch Leonard	22	Joe Haynes	7
Ken Chase	19	Johnny Welaj	6
Bobby Estalella	18	Angelo Giuliani	5
Sammy West	18	Alex Alexandra	5
Rick Ferrell	15	Joe Krakauskas	3
Cecil Travis	13	Bob Prichard	1
Mickey Vernon	14

Browns Defeat Nats, 12-2; End Losing Streak

Alexandra, Appleton Fail to Mystify Foe, Yielding 17 Hits

It was in almost complete privacy that the Brownies broke their losing streak. Only 456 cash customers saw the game and by actual count there were only 34 fans in the bleachers.

Washington's four hits were distributed by Trotter among four players—Travis, whose homer was a powerful swat atop the right center roof; Wright, whose double had preceded that blow, and Bloodworth and Appleton who collected singles.

After Travis' homer in the fourth, the Nats were virtually helpless, failing to get a man as far as second base, and, in fact, putting only two men on first.

Alexandra encountered about five minutes of success and then the storm broke. With two out, the Brownies began to go townward in fast order. George McQuinn drew a walk, but there was nothing passive about the next three Browns who faced Alex. Laabs banged a single to center and so did Clift. And then Rookie Joe Grace doubled over Case's head against the right-field screen and the score was: St. Louis, 3; Washingon, 0.

Browns Like Appleton

The Venezuelan seemingly did not impress Bucky Harris despite the Browns' fondness for him, because when the Browns came to bat in the second inning Alex was no longer on the premises. Pete Appleton was the Washington pitcher and the Browns attended to him in the third inning.

What they did was inflate their lead to 9-0 by the simple process of slugging Appleton for 7 hits and 6 runs in that third inning, in which ten Browns went to bat. Briefly, here's what happened.

Sullivan singled to center, McQuinn singled to right, Clift bunted and beat it out for a hit that filled the bases because third baseman Buddy Lewis left the bag uncovered. Grace popped up and then the Browns commenced anew with their slugging. Harshany drove in two runs with a single through the box. Christman drove in another run with an infield single. Trotter sacrificed. Heffner singled to center to drive in the fifth run of the inning, and Sullivan singled to center to drive in the sixth.

Heffner Homers

The Browns' tenth and eleventh runs were scored with very little trouble in the seventh inning. Christman singled and a bit later little Don Heffner astounded everybody and no doubt himself by pounding a home run 380 feet into the right center bleachers. In the eighth the Browns made it an even dozen, for no particular reason.

The Nats tonight moved on to Chicago where tomorrow they face an open date . . . which will be followed by a doubleheader on Wednesday and a night game on Thursday which will end the Nats' disastrous tour of the West . . . Most of the Washington players will attend the College All-Americans-New York Giants football game at Soldiers Field Wednesday night . . . Best football player on the Nats is Charley Gelbert, a star quarterback for La Fayette in his college days . . . George Case was withdrawn from the game in the third inning after stealing his forty-sixth base of the season . . . he was uninjured, but Harris decided to give him a rest, what with the Browns leading, 9-0 . . . Jimmy Vernon was slightly spiked by Billy Sullivan in the eighth inning, but stayed in the game.

$613,000,000 Deficit Starts U.S. Fiscal Year

A Year Ago the Actual Deficit Amounted To Only $127,000,000

New York, Aug. 28.—For July, the first month of the fiscal year, the Federal Government reported a deficit of $499,000,000, an amount noticeably larger than the deficit of $452,000,000 in July last year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. Receipts this year were somewhat smaller than a year ago, while expenditures were considerably larger. Expenditures in July this year amounted to $807,000,000 as compared with $783,000,000 in the corresponding month last year.

On top of the deficit this year, the Government's trust account reported expenditures well in excess of receipts. Consequently, the actual deficit this year amounted to $613,000,000 as against only $127,000,000 a year ago, when trust account receipts were far in excess of expenditures, thus offsetting to a considerable extent the deficit as reported.

The Government met the actual deficit this year by withdrawing $391,000,000 from the Treasury and by borrowing $222,000,000. This borrowing raised the debt to a new high record of $40,661,000,000. This was well in excess of the debt of $37,191,000,000 at the end of July last year.

The showing in July this year was far out of line with the figures indicates by the 1939-1940 budget compiled last January. Receipts were much lower than those indicated by the budget while expenditures were much higher. Whereas the budget indicated a deficit of $273,000,000 in July, the actual deficit as previously stated was $613,000,000. As a result, the balance in the Treasury at the end of July was considerably smaller than the balance indicated by the budget. Consequently, the prospect is that the Government will soon find it necessary to borrow a large amount of funds and thus further increase the debt by a substantial amount.

Colorado Utility Plans $54,960,000 Issues

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission authorized the Public Service Co. of Colorado yesterday to issue $54,690,000 worth of new securities.

The authorization, granted over the dissent of Commissioner Robert Healy, covers $40,000,000 of 3½ per cent mortgage bonds due in 1964, $12,500,000 of 4 per cent sinking fund debentures due 1949, and $2,190,000,000 of common stock. Most of the securities are intended for refunding old securities.

Business Loans Gain $26,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday a $26,000,000 increase in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities in the week ended August 23. New York City, however, was almost alone responsible for the gain, accounting for $26,000,000 of it.

The increase followed several weeks of alternately small increases and decreases.

Insured Banks Report Deposits At Record High

By the Associated Press

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported today that its 13,500 insured banks had a record high total of $52,327,000,000 of deposits on June 30.

This was 10 per cent higher than a year ago. The corporation said the gain was spread over individual, corporation and other types of deposits.

Assets of the insured banks also reached a new high of $59,426,000,000, or 9 per cent more than a year ago.

Of the banks' assets, 33 per cent were held in cash, and 30 per cent in governmental obligations.

Loans and discounts, which totaled $16,040,000,000 were 2 per cent higher than a year ago.

Holdings of Federal, State and local bonds increased sharply during the year.

Imported Silver Drops 3 5-8 Cents

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The price of imported silver in commercial bullion dealings broke 3⅝ cents an ounce today when a "squeeze" in the London market ended. The New York bullion firm of Handy & Harman posted a price of 38½ cents an ounce, where there was still a spread of more than a cent over the United States Treasury buying price of 35 cents an ounce for foreign sold silver.

The fall in the spot price, originating in London, was attributed in metal circles to sales from the Indian government's silver stocks, both meet hoarding demand on war fear and covering of outstanding short positions taken last spring when there was doubt over the continuation of United States Treasury buying in the world market.

Steel Operations To Rise This Week

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute today estimated operations in the steel industry this week would advance 0.8 of one point to 63.0 per cent of capacity, highest since October, 1937. This compared with 62.2 in the preceding week.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 59.3 per cent and a year ago 44.0 per cent.

Federal Pay Is Now Taxable In 28 States

Louisiana, Utah, West Virginia, North Dakota Exempt U. S. Salaries

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Twenty-eight of the 32 States with laws taxing personal incomes will collect taxes on salaries of several hundred thousand Federal employes under the new public safety tax act effective this year, information from the Federation of Tax Administrators showed today.

Seventeen States, the federation noted, amended their statutes this year either before or after Congress acted to remove reciprocal immunity of public salaries from income taxation. They were Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Nine States could claim previous laws automatically providing for taxation of Federal employe incomes whenever the Federal exemption was removed. These include Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Oregon and South Dakota. Wisconsin, which also had had such a law, amended it to define the removal of immunity.

Immunity in Four States

Laws of two other States—Arizona and Kentucky—made no mention of the immunity of Federal salaries from income taxation. Up to now, neither State, of course, attempted to tax Federal employes because of Federal constitutional limitations.

Louisiana, West Virginia, North Dakota and Utah are the only States with income levies which specifically exempt salaries of Federal employes living within their boundaries. The first two States held no legislative session this year and the last two adjourned before the proposal was passed by Congress.

Although Congress did not act on the President's recommendation to remove tax immunity of interest on Government obligations, six States revised their laws during 1939 sessions to make such taxation possible on their part immediately if immunity is removed. Twelve other States, the federation said, will be able to tax income from such interest without further legislative action. In 18 States the statutes will provide specific tax exemption from interest on Federal obligations.

Bombay Selling Slashes Cotton Futures $1 a Bale

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Cotton futures broke more than a dollar a bale today in the heaviest trading in weeks. Final prices were off 20 to 24 points.

Selling came mainly from Bombay and Liverpool in connection with another sharp drop in the pound sterling. Brokers said these offerings represented liquidation of straddles between the local and foreign markets.

Wall street was also an active seller coincident with the downward slant in security prices and the still ominous slant to foreign news.

Pressure let up a bit when foreign markets closed but with buyers still indifferent, little rallying power developed. Final prices were about the lowest for the day.

Normal Trading Contrasts With Europe Stocks Slump but Rally Intervenes Treasury Bonds Weak, Pound Drops

New York, Aug. 28.—In the face of increased tension over the possibility of a World War, censorship, interference with cables and governmental restrictions placed on orderly trading in securities and commodities, American markets had the distinction today of being the largest market places where business was still transacted in a normal manner. Price fluctuations and the wide range traversed by certain issues and futures of numerous commodities reflected the frayed nerves of investors but the fact remained that he who wanted to buy or sell could still do so. There is every assurance that he will always be able to do so, irrespective of whether there is war abroad.

Certainly every effort will be made to keep the New York exchanges open and the same goes for the major commodity markets here and in other cities. The street does not look for any sudden wave of liquidation such as developed when the great war of 1914 broke out and the closing of foreign markets was followed by similar action in New York. Trading on the London exchange is under various restrictions now and this has been reflected by foreign business in this market sinking virtually to zero today. Wall Street firms that usually do a big business with London and other European centers, reported today that their wires were kept busy with cancellations, both on the buying and selling side, but not with orders to be executed.

Wall Street Ready for War

This and an imposing list of other developments showed that the financial district is being girded for war, just in case the efforts being made to settle the Polish and other questions around a table are unsuccessful. Guesses in the financial district indicated that the street has not yet given up hope for a peaceful settlement, but win or lose, the New York markets are prepared to handle the world's financial operations in an orderly manner.

Developments, other than the restrictions placed on dealings by British investors, included a sharp break in the British pound, which is no longer supported by that country's equalization fund; a drop of the Canadian dollar, weakness of United States Government and foreign bonds, a break in our stock market which was partly recovered before the close, early strength in wheat in all world markets which was largely canceled later, a break of more than $1 a bale in cotton, a sharp break in silver in London but higher prices for gold as the pound sank, a jump in the discount rate of of the Bank of the Netherlands from 2 per cent to 3 per cent, withdrawal of Sweden and Finland from the sterling block, a move by Australia similar to that of Great Britain to control overseas transactions, an advance in the price of copper in London and wide fluctuations in the futures of rubber, silk, copper and hides in American markets.

Market Behavior

As far as the stock market was concerned, the belief in the financial district is that the list has behaved well and has demonstrated its ability to hold in the face of a crisis which is the greatest since the World War. Trading was on a relatively small scale today, amounting to only 669,510 shares. Prices were weak in early dealings but the composite average showed a loss of only 0.60 point. Of the 654 individual issues traded in, only 13 made new lows for the year. Most of the leaders made good comebacks from their early lows. Two showed losses of 4 points, namely, American Telephone and Union Pacific, but most of the recessions ran around 1 and 2 points, which is as nothing considering the tenseness of the situation. There were a few plus signs. Allied Chemical gained 1½, and there was a number of fractional advances, including Bethlehem Steel, while Chrysler added a point.

War stocks were not favored over any other divisions, the aviations being called upon to absorb a large amount of liquidation. DuPont closed off 7. There was a period of firmness in the motors, and for a spell the agricultural stocks were well supported, apparently on the belief higher grain prices would loosen the farmers' pocketbooks. Most of the steels closed lower despite another gain in operations for the industry. The rate this week is placed at 63 per cent of capacity, up 0.8 point from last week and reflecting more quickened purchasing from the automobile manufacturers.

U. S. Government Bonds Lower

Government bonds of all descriptions moved sharply lower in the listed market today as war reports became more ominous. United States Treasury issues were marked lower on a precautionary basis, but some real liquidation finally appeared in foreign dollar obligations, which dropped 1 to 5 points. American corporation bonds receded because of the general uneasiness and the unwillingness of traders to take on commitments for the time being. Turnover was $3,829,000, which is far under normal.

United States Government bonds dropped from 1-32 point to slightly more than a point, but the larger losses occurred in inactive bonds and failed to reflect the actual developments of the day. Short-dated obligations were relatively steady, and it was chiefly in the list of long maturities that declines occurred. The guaranteed issues were irregular. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds receded in line with the Treasury obligations.

In the foreign section Polish bonds continued their rapid decline, the losses ranging to 6 points. Italian and German bonds also dropped sharply. Norwegian and Danish issues were hard hit and established many fresh lows for the year. Australian and Canadian loans were almost equally vulnerable. Japanese bonds strengthened, despite the peculiar position of that country. In the Latin-American group small recessions were the rule.

Medium priced carrier bonds of the domestic department were mostly lower, but there were some firm exceptions. Much the same uncertain conditions prevailed among borderline and default rails. Local traction bonds followed the market, as did other special groups.

Wheat Prices React After Early Jump

Closings ⅝ to 1⅝ Cents Up After Rise Of 2¾ Cents

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 28.—A wave of buying inspired by the European war scare struck the wheat pit at the opening today, hoisting prices 2¼ to 2¾ cents a bushel, but demand quickly subsided and early gains were sharply reduced.

The market fluctuated nervously after the early spurt and at times prices settled back to a level only ⅛ to 1⅛ higher than Saturday's close. At the final bell, however, net gains amounted to ⅝ to 1⅝. September and December contracts closed at 68¼-68⅜ and 68⅝-68¾, respectively, compared with highs of 69⅛ and 70 and lows of 67¼ and 67⅞.

Uncertainty regarding the crisis abroad resulted in a very unsettled trade. After resting purchase orders had been absorbed, buying diminished and dealers who were anxious to keep accounts evened up for any possible development assumed the selling side. At times some support was credited to mills. An unconfirmed rumor that Great Britain and France had bought or were negotiating for all of the Argentine surplus of 112,000,000 bushels attracted much attention.

The action of other grains was parallel to wheat. Corn closed ⅛-¼ higher than Saturday, September 44¾-44⅞, December 44¾-44⅞; oats ⅛-¼ higher; rye ⅛-½ up, and lard 10-15 higher.

Wheat at Winnipeg showed even more opening strength than recorded here. Maximum gains amounted to 4¾ cents there and the close was 1¼-2¾ net higher. Liverpool closed 1¼-2¼ higher, near the best level of the day. Due to further declines in sterling this close was 2-3½ pence up figured in English funds.

Failures Fewer

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Business failures in the United States dropped to 221 during the week ended August 24 from 228 in the preceding week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. A year ago the total was 247.

Boston Wool

Boston, Aug. 28 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The wool market in Boston was very slow today. Buyers generally were showing a waiting attitude. Quotation on domestic wools were unchanged compared with last week, and they were fairly firm, although largely nominal because of the lack of trading. The opening sale of the new wool-selling season in Australia, scheduled for August 28, was postponed for a week, according to cable advices received by several houses concerned in Boston.

War Scare Doubles Grain Pit Trading

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—The war scare has more than doubled business on the Chicago Board of Trade. Analysis of statistics today on dealings in grain futures in the world's greatest market for this type of trading showed that more than 243,000,000 bushels of all types of grains changed hands during last week's rapid and wide price swings. This compared with only 103,000,000 bushels bought and sold the previous week and 132,673,000 the corresponding week a year ago. Additional commission house employes have been posted on the trading floor, handling telephone and wire connections with branches all over the world.

Railway Operating Net Nearly Twice Same 1938 Period

The Association of American Railroads announced yesterday that the net railway operating income of class one railroads the first seven months of this year was $214,763,847, compared with $109,818,755 in the same period last year.

The association said the 1939 income represented an annual return of 1.86 per cent on property investment compared with 0.85 per cent last year.

The association said that gross operating revenues the first seven months of 1939 totaled $2,138,564,403, compared with $1,933,656,736 during the like period last year. Operating expenses the first seven months of this year were $1,842,796,254, compared with $1,683,760,819 in 1938.

July's net railway operating income was $40,011,815, compared with $38,431,251 in July, 1938.

The association said that 97 class one railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first seven months of this year.

HOW A LOAN HELPS YOU
1. It pays bills, restores credit. Balances the budget. Reduces monthly payments.
2. It earns cash discounts. Buys better value at lower cost.
3. It does all this at a total cost to you of only a few cents a day. Better look into it.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

J. R. H., jr., writes:

"I am inclosing a hand with the bidding that stirred up quite an argument. I would like to know who was at fault and how the bidding should go.

"The six-club bid by North was a 'mad' bid, he admitted after the hand. The contract was set one trick, losing only the ace and king of trumps.

"I sat South and thought my hand was worthless except at clubs. As a result I became stubborn. My partner's contention is, I should have let three no-trump stand. I say with a doubleton and singleton I couldn't do it."

As in the case of most arguments, bridge or otherwise, both players are partly wrong, partly right. North's bid of six clubs was pure cussedness; the only redeeming feature is that he owned up to it afterward. A good bridge player, a winning one, will not allow his emotions to get the better of him, when partner has been most obstinate or foolish.

South's best plan could have been to double East's overcall of one no trump. With West's Yarborough, North and South would have had a merry time of it. Even if East tried to escape to a suit contract it would have been hopeless.

South's bid of four clubs seems plausible, even though at first glance it looks as if he were "taking charge." His partner has already bid two suits, and the call of three no trump indicates stoppers in hearts; so it appears as if the clubs will be useless at a no-trump contract. North on the strength of his "quick" (aces and king) tricks should carry the hand to five clubs. Four no-trump is as stubborn as it is foolish. Three no-trump can be made by an end play.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The N. F. F. E. starts on its long journey to San Francisco this week for biennial convention—the A. F. G. E. week after next moves on Atlantic City for its conclave. The point is that both have elaborate programs that they hope will someday be put into effect for the benefit of Federal employes. And the hope of Federal employes is that the two organizations—and other similar bodies—will soon learn to work in accord and harmony. While their common aim has been to help the employes, the organizations have so split hairs and divided themselves over important issues that Congress too frequently has not known what the employes want and need and in consequence has done little for them. A general get-together on issues still seems remote. And no one of the several organizations is to blame for it.

The Weather Bureau is arranging an exhibit to illustrate its activities for the International Geophysical Union meeting here early in September. Included are charts, pictures and maps to show forecasting procedure, hurricane warning service, etc. . . . The United States Forest Service is looking for the one word, or possible two words, that will tell what the service is doing and has done. With all of its justified claims to fame, the service seems to want a lot put in a capsule . . . Popular report says that Secretary Ickes requires everything happening in his tremendous and expanding domain to pass under his eye, and his press releases substantiate the report with appendages that "the Secretary releases" or "the Secretary reports." So there have come onto his busy desk these statistics: "nearly 6,000,000 big game animals are in the United States, according to the second Nation-wide big game inventory conducted by the Bureau of Biological Survey which was released today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes." Which should be heartening to conservationists and to the thousands of Americans planning vacations in the national parks, where the deer and the antelope will now play in increased numbers and variety, carefully watched by the Department of the Interior . . . And here comes another release saying that "in 1939 migratory bird shooting regulations, announced recently by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, make October 1 the first day of the season." . . . And in comes another saying that "steel reinforcing bars, weighing 3,600,000 pounds were ordered today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes for use in structures along the Coachella Canal, All-American Canal System." These scattered items must be only a glimpse of the variety of matters that pass across the Secretary's desk in any day . .

The police games on Labor Day will be featured by appearance of Prof. Leo Batten, jiu jitsu artist, who has trained many Government employes (he himself is an employe) in the gentle art. Batten makes a call to all of his former students to join him in the exhibitions. He intends to use himself as the attacking force in the demonstrations and place his pupils on the defensive—thus to show to better advantage what he has taught them

Among the resolutions the A. F. G. E. will consider at Atlantic City: That charwomen of the Federal Works Agency, formerly the Procurement Division, Treasury, had their salary rate changed from a per annum basis to 50 cents an hour. The proposal is for restoration of the per annum basis. The resolution also calls for higher pay rates for laborers, watchmen and elevator operators . . . Twenty-six Indians representing 19 tribes, who for some time have been at the New York World's Fair, yesterday called on Oscar Chapman, of the Interior Department. Unlike most other Indians who call by the department, these had no representations to make . . . There has been some talk about Cecil Custer shying away from the presidency of the A. F. G. E. because of the lack of permanency in the position. But insiders of the organization contend, on the contrary, that the position of president is very permanent—but the reasons for this belief on their part still seem a trifle vague, inasmuch as the organization, in convention assembled, can always vote the incumbent out and no organization is free from dissensions.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 17

ONLY the letter didn't arrive. When, about 9 a. m., I asked the wispy little native in charge of the general store and postoffice (whose name was given on the sign over the porch as Orion Quimby Prop.) what time he expected the morning mail, he looked as if I had insulted him. Mr. Prop advised me that the daily post was due at 4 in the afternoon. The way he said "due" suggested that it might be anywhere from an hour to two days late.

DYER

I decided to let it go at that. The day was too beautiful to waste sitting around waiting, when I might be out on the water with Adriana. The weather was still sharply clear, but the wind, I expertly observed, had shifted back to the sou'west and was blowing briskly but without malice. During the night every fishing craft in the basin had cleared out; even Captain Matt and the Portuguese between his boat and mine had succeeded in slipping away without waking me, leaving the Adriana fastened securely but lonely to the wharf. The Patria's laden bulk had vanished, with no renewal of the offer to tow me away; in fact Menemsha was empty except for my yawl, a couple of craft obviously out of commission for the winter, and the sky-blue cutter with a name longer than herself, the Tout Passe Sauf la Beaute.

The white-bearded artist who was said to have come in that cockleshell was hard at work again on the outskirts of the village. I passed him as I went to the postoffice, and noticed this morning he was sketching a rather unpromising pile of lobster-pots, some coils of rope, and the corner of a building. It looked like a dull enough picture to me (who only know what I like, and what I like is Messonier, and George Bellows' prizefight lithographs), but he appeared to be quite engrossed in it. He answered my cheery greeting with an abstracted smile, his white teeth gleaming, his grey-green eyes sparkling with enthusiasm. From the wrinkles on his face I judged him in his late sixties at the very youngest, but he fairly fizzed with youth and energy. His general appearance of intelligence and humor attracted me to him even more strongly than the day before, but I hesitated to interrupt such a fury of creation, and also I was in a hurry to pick up the letter, meet Adriana, and get under way.

"Isn't it glorious!" she exclaimed, as she and her elephant mascot spilled out of the car.

"It is." I agreed, and added, in a tone calculated to be inaudible to the native porch-life behind me, "and so are you."

"Never mind that," said she, disapprovingly. "I'm dying to be off again in your boat. With this wind we can go out the creek on a broad reach, and the tide will be in mid-ebb to help us. Low tide is about quarter past noon here today, so we'll have an incoming tide to bring us home again until almost dark. If you want to stay out longer, I might be able to bring her in against the tide, if this beam wind holds. Did you get that chain-plate straightened?"

I THINK you'll find everything shipshape," I said. "Captain Matt fixed it yesterday out of the goodness of his heart. I pumped the bilges this morning, but she doesn't seem to have opened up at all. She's a well-built crate."

"And we were lucky," said Adriana. "Did you get your letter?"

"No."

"What are you going to do?"

"Not wait. It'll be in this afternoon, probably. I wouldn't let it spoil our day for anything. I don't need it."

The girl accepted this decision with something like relief, and we set out along the sandspit for Captain Matt's wharf. The elderly artist had been too involved with his muse to pay much attention when I passed, but when Ardiana went by he gave her a pleasant smile, a deep-voiced "good morning," and watched her walk on with friendly appreciation. I had already noticed that the girl was One Who Is Watched, and this morning, in her red leather windbreaker and blue woolen trousers, she was especially remarkable.

I take that back. She would be especially remarkable in anything from a bathing suit to a tent.

It took us about 15 minutes to get sail on the Ardiana and five minutes more to start out the mouth of the basin. All that we did together in this short 20 minutes was sunlight and laughter.

Thirty seconds later there came a cold end to sunlight and laughter, and the spirit of our joyous expedition struck hard on a rock of ugly fact, and sank with all hands.

Ardiana was at the helm, and I was forward at the main halliards, snugging down. As we met the outgoing tide-race in the creek and were whirled toward Vineyard Sound under the urge of both wind and water, the long dune to the westward fell away into a naked jetty of granite blocks, one of a pair of parallel jetties projecting from the shore and serving to spew the burden of Menemsha Great Pond into deep water.

We were running close to the more westerly of the two (for Adriana had used our dash out of the still basin to gain as much to windward as possible) and I looked up from the halliard winch to find that over the jetty I could see the enigmatic buildings and tanks of the Sea Reduction Corporation, Mr. Raskin's low-lying motor-sailer was swinging at anchor off the bight, and a dinghy, looking tiny and black against the great sweep of sand, was drawn up on the beach abreast of the wire enclosure.

There was no one in sight either on the shore or on the decks of the Patria. This was perfectly normal, of course. The president of the company was paying a visit to the plant. He had paved the way for it in his talk with us the previous morning. A disgruntled stockholder might ask why he was doing so now, when he might have spent all of yesterday there instead of lurking in his cabin in the basin. The only way today was better off than yesterday for the visit lay in the fact that today was not too rough to anchor the Patria off-shore of the plant, which seemed no great advantage. But only Mr. Ruskin could tell if it was an advantage or not, and no detail of his behavior could be explained until everything was made clear.

I DON'T KNOW what drew my eyes downward from the further view; probably just the habit of looking away from something you want to think about, or don't want to. Perhaps the fringe of my vision was shocked before the conscious rest of me was. Anyway, my look dropped to the weed grown blocks at the foot of the western jetty and there, partly jammed in among them and partly submerged was a corpse. Besides, it was a particularly nasty corpse. Besides, we were gliding along so close to the bank that it would have been easy to toss a penny on it.

The body was evidently caught by the left arm, which had become wedged in a crack of the granite and was doubled back in what appeared a terribly uncomfortable position. The face and chest were turned up awash; the rest was submerged, and the right hand and legs could be seen beneath the surface, tailing away from the point of attachment toward the sound. In the boiling eddies of the tide these parts were given a horrible false life; the legs waggled, the hand fluttered, as though the dead man were making feeble but dogged efforts to shake himself free and escape into hiding in the outer deeps. Worst of all, by a freak of the tide jets among the stones, the head was nodding and falling back, nodding and falling back, now almost covered, now almost entirely out, as if the dead man were persistently agreeing with some ghastly proposal, or trying to peer out the creek, or trying to hide with its chin the condition of his throat (which needed hiding, badly).

I could tell at once (as any idiot could) that this was no simple case of drowning. The throat was frightfully mangled; you would have said a whole handful of flesh had been ripped from the front of the neck. This in itself was obviously a mortal injury, but, in addition, on the crown of the head (which bubbled up into sight twice within the time I was staring at it) the long, black hair was parted wetly to show that a circle of skin the size of a silver dollar had been scooped out right down to the white bone of the skull. Neither wound, as a matter of fact, was red; both were scoured to a clay-color, almost the same as the bluish yellow of the pinched, weary-looking little face. I could see the countless flashes of a great school of small fish swarming in the waters of the creek.

Before the body was abeam of us I had identified it, and turned swiftly toward the stern with the idea of calling Adriana's attention to the halliards, to the top of the mast, to the trim of the jib, to anything else, in fact.

It was, of course, too late. The helmsman would naturally be keeping an eye on the nearer shore. The girl must have seen it before I, because when I spun around, she was staring rigidly ahead with a sickened expression. She tried to speak, but I couldn't hear.

"What?" I called, in as normal a voice as I could command.

"Who is it?" she asked at length.

"I don't know his name," I answered, "but it's a Japanese artist who was painting in the village when I went by on my way to breakfast yesterday morning."

"What should we do?"

"We'll have to report it," I said more easily (for we had already gone a hundred feet while we talked).

"We can't come about here," said she.

"Let's run out beyond the end of the jetties and then swing back inshore and anchor. But steer to the right, toward the village side of the creek, not to that side——"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Pax Romana Work Lauded By Roosevelt

President Urges Catholic Students To Pray for Peace

President Roosevelt urged a world conference of Catholic students last night to "Pray for peace . . . and have faith that despite all discouragements, councils of wisdom ultimately will prevail among nations."

Welcoming the eighteenth annual Pax Romana Congress here by letter, the President said it was heartening "in troublesome times like the present" to know that the congress would be held.

"We must pray for peace," he wrote. "We must work for peace and we must think in terms of peace, and have faith that despite all discouragements, councils of wisdom ultimately will prevail among nations so that every controversy will find its solution in the arbitrament of reason rather than in an appeal to arms."

Success Is Wished

It said he wished Pax Romana and the Pan American Student Conference, meeting in conjunction with the congress, success "in their efforts to promote peace, with all its attendant blessings."

Earlier, Pope Pius XII sent "a great and particular apostolic blessing" to the congress, which has as its motto, "The Peace of Christ in the Reign of Christ."

Some 500 delegates from more than 30 countries gathered here yesterday at Catholic University. Europe's tension showed in the faces of delegates who landed in the United States only a few days ago—but many of them took hope from this country's efforts to aid the cause of peace.

"All Brothers In Christ"

Poles and Germans, Japanese and Chinese, were in the audience last night, when Edward J. Kirchner, of Pittsfield, Mass., president of Pax Romana, declared in his keynote address:

"In the atmosphere of Pax Romana, no political or national rivalries will manifest themselves even though the world is on the verge of war . . . Flags of opposing nations will stand side by side, but that matters not because we are all brothers in Christ."

He continued, "the most significant fact about this gathering is that it is being held in the shadow of great world conflict . . . We, students for the most part, cannot be held responsible for this recurrent tragedy of civilization. We are here to find the way to prevent such a recurrence."

Kirchner pointed out that Pax Romana is working for the "Peace of Christ in the Reign of Christ" in a world "that has forgotten that its salvation rests with Christ."

After the solemn opening mass yesterday, leaders from France and Spain spoke from a platform draped with the flags of many nations.

Bishop of Paris Speaks

There was applause when Most Rev. Henri Roger Beaussart, auxiliary bishop of Paris, mentioned what the United States has done for the cause of peace in Europe.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, challenged the group, as future leaders of the people, to "stand fearlessly for the things of Christ" that a phalanx might be formed across "a world saved for Christ."

Senor Don Alberto Martin Artajo, of Madrid, vice president of the central committee of Catholic Action, pointed out the duty to re-Christianize the world—its laws, customs, social relationships.

Peace Message Urged

L'Abbe Joseph Gremaud, of Pax Romana, urged the delegates to considered their responsibility to carry back the message of peace to their own countries.

With these words, the delegates went across the campus to the dining room. There two Poles sat at a table with two Frenchmen. At a nearby table sat a young German theological student, smiling as if no gulf existed between their nations.

Miss Irene Kownacka, of Warsaw, whose two brothers probably have been put in the army since she left, said slowly: "It is hard to predict. We can only wait. But Poland will defend itself to the last moment."

K. Dziewonski, Polish architect, nodded grimly and said: "We are prepared for all." But at his right, Joseph Dargent, of France said: "I feel very optimistic about peace."

The German student, who would not give his name because "things might be difficult for me when I get back," declared:

German Doubts Peace

"The German people hope there will be no war. And I think there are still ways for peace." Speaking in French through an interpreter, he let a little doubt creep into his voice—doubt that those ways to peace would be taken.

A young Spanish delegate, who come through persecution, imprisonment and service on the front in the recent civil war, was optimistic about the outlook in his country. He was Joaquin Ruiz-Gimenez, leader of the Spanish delegation. He declared that "the future is good for Catholic Action because the church and state are in harmony now. We have had young men working at the front, and we now have thousands of soldiers who did not belong to Catholic Action before the war. Of course, we must supply the lack created by the loss of thousands who were martyred or who died at the front. Many churches are still without priests."

Mass in Many Tongues

A solemn concelebration of the mass, with at least six and probably nine priests chanting in different languages, will be sung at 10 a. m. today in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in the Byzantine or Oriental rites. Extensive preparations are being made for this celebration, to be held for the first time on such a scale in the United States. It will be open to the public. The sermon will be by the Rev. F. H. Chase, doctor of Oriental ecclesiastical studies, Lynn, Mass.

Several study sessions on Catholic Action are scheduled for today, with visits to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and Georgetown College in the afternoon. Thursday afternoon foreign delgations will visit their embassies or legations. The study week will close here Saturday, with another week of sessions to open at Fordham University in New York City on Sunday.

Parents Insist WPA 'Shut-in' Work Continue

Mrs. Doyle Assures Group Board Hopes Project Will Go On

Signatures of more than 300 parents were on petitions taken yesterday to offices of the Board of Education by a delegation of six mothers seeking to have the WPA shut-in teaching project renewed for this year.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, who received the group, assured them the board would like to have the work resumed as soon as possible.

"For four years," she said, "we have asked that pay for this work be contained in the regular school budget, and this year we are again making the request.

"The experimental project last winter was satisfactory and we trust it will be possible to continue it until it becomes a regular part of the school program, which it should be."

Dr. Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, will confer with WPA officials in regard to the project, it was decided. It is for the Federal authorities to decide, he said, although he assured the mothers the board is ready to serve as project sponsor.

A letter Mrs. Doyle received from Sarah M. Prince, 12-year-old shut-in who was unable to keep up her school work last year because of the work, was read to the delegation.

The mothers pointed out that all children aided by the project are not crippled for life, but that some are temporarily disabled and forced to "fall behind a grade or two" if not helped.

Dr. Haycock said another WPA project affecting school children, free lunches for the under-privileged, yesterday awaited a report from Central Kitchen as to what costs would be added by raising the number of lunches from 5,200 to the proposed 8,400 daily. He said the report is expected this week.

Hazen to Greet Lodge Delegates

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will give the city's welcome to delegates and members of the Order of Alhambra which opens a three-day convention in the Willard Hotel Thursday morning. The opening session will follow a mass at St. Patrick's Church. All business sessions will be presided over by Supreme Commander John M. Miller, of Baltimore.

Registration of delegates will begin tomorrow under chairmanship of Walter I. Plant, assisted by Francis A. McCann, Joseph P. Doyle, Frank J. Govan, Seymour B. Wools, Thomas F. Cummings, Miss Ethel Neff, Miss Nellie McCormick, Mrs. Genevieve Perry and Mrs. Jerry Dignan.

Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland will speak at the banquet Saturday night.

Early Siberians and Indians Closely Linked, Says Hrdlicka

Both from a skeleton viewpoint and culturally, prehistoric Siberians were "exceedingly close" to the American Indian, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, veteran scientist curator of the United States National Museum, declared yesterday.

He had just returned from his forty-first annual anthropological expedition for the museum. His object this year was to trace the prehistoric human connections between Siberia and America.

"The most valuable materials I found were in Siberia in neolithic remains of man which have been recovered in that territory within the last 20 years," he said.

Dr. Hrdlicka will make the first "report" on his findings in his annual lecture at the Smithsonian Institution early in October, after all specimens collected have arrived and he has had time to "check up."

During his visit he received the "utmost assistance of Russian scientific men and institutions," he declared.

The "war agitation" had started before he left Europe, Dr. Hrdlicka said, but he denied that he "formed ony opinions." Scientists, he explained, get in the habit of "shutting up their ears and eyes when they go through such things."

Beverly Crosby Freed in Accident Fatal to Man

A coroner's jury yesterday freed Beverly Crosby, 28-year-old carpenter, of responsibility for the death of James Jurney, 29, of Raleigh, N. C., killed early Saturday in a freak automobile accident.

Jurney was killed on the Potomac River driveway when the car struck a metal light standard after swerving to avoid a parked car which had started up suddenly. His head was crushed between the lamp post and the window frame. He apparently had his head outside the rear window of the machine.

Mrs. Dorothy Jurney, 28, the victim's wife, testified she was asleep with her head in Jurney's lap from the time they left the Columbia Country Club until the car stopped, 15 minutes after the accident.

Colton, Slayer Of Neighbor, Is Adjudged Insane

Richard J. Colton, 59, who was indicted last week for the shotgun slaying of Joseph B. McKenna, 42, a neighbor, yesterday was declared insane and committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Justice Letts, of the District Court, ordered Colton confined in a criminal ward. A jury of two women and ten men considered their verdict only two minutes after hearing 15 minutes of evidence on Colton's conduct.

McKenna was killed August 11. Detectives said Colton told them "vaguely" of enmity toward the victim, whom he accused of having forced him to drink poisoned liquer.

Bee Control Rules Ended by Voting

The marketing agreement regulating the interstate handling of package bees and queens will cease today, the Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

In a mail referendum which ended August 10 among the 300 producers, 65 out of 72 who returned properly marked ballots voted for termination.
